Fujimaru Ritsuka

“Humanity Last Master”

Several Millennia Passed Since The World of Primates Was Sat.
The Age of God Has Ended,
and Through Time,
Mankind Has Become The Most Prosperous Beings on Earth.
And So We Shape The Future of This Planet and Inscribe Its History on The Surface.
For That, We Nurtured Knowledge,
Produced Many Resources…

And Saw Many Lives Reincarnated.
It's a Map to Prolong Mankind's Survival and to Ensure Its Everlasting Prosperity.
in The World of Magecraft,
This is Called "Humanity"
Those of Chaldea Have Been Charged to Protect It!
I am Fujimaru Ritsuka!
So Many People Helped Me…
And Here I Stand on Behalf of so Many Others…
As The Master of Chaldea!
I Challenge You…
Goetia!!!

If you have zero knowledge about SCD (Smart Characters Debates - IntelligenceScaling) I would recommend reading this :

[Notes]

- This Doc explains his intelligence feats “Main Quest” only and until the final of Part 1 of FGO [EOR is 1.5 therefore won’t be analyzed here]

- Also, I will be referring to Ritsuka as “He” as long as the gender remains unknown in the feat [Which apparently was all male in this part].

- Orleans + Septem didn’t have any feats for him.

- Ritsuka isn’t a High Tier SCD character by any means, he has a lot of anti-feats which downgrades him a lot, at best he is a Low Tier SCD character.

- This Doc will be always updated for new feats of course.

Haxes related to Intelligence :

1- Whenever he makes a contract with a servant and at an unknown point (Mostly sleeping) he gets memories and information about the servants that he is contracted with allowing him to understand why they are what they are.

[General Knowledge - PSI]

2- Mystic Codes : Mystic codes allows Ritsuka to supply mana to servants and use multiple abilities since he can’t use them himself due to lack of magical circuits and they also provide tolerance to attacks to some degree and not fully because once he is back from the mission all the pain they endured comes back to Ritsuka and puts him in bed out of pain.

[Stress Tolerance - Mental Fortitude]
—----------

- All the feats are done in a team situation, ultimately speaking Ritsuka doesn’t have any intelligence feats in solo situations, which downgrades him/her in overall.

- [This was confirmed by Mash in her bond lines after OC4] almost every single fight that happened in the game was all strategized by Ritsuka.

[Overall Strategy - Overall Planning]
—----------

Scale of the situation :

The Human Order Incineration Incident (人理焼却事件, Jinri Shōkyaku Jiken?) is the the first Grand Order faced by Chaldea Security Organization. Caused by Beast I Goetia, he sought the destruction of humanity and the world in an attempt to create a new world where death does not exist.

{Singularity F} [Game]

[Section 1]

While being considered as an amateur and an ordinary human, Ritsuka didn't show any sign of fear or discomfort in his first ever life and death situation.

{Singularity F} [Mortalis Stella Manga]

[Chapter 3]

After his first ever life and death fight and after he fought against Emiya(Archer), Ritsuka noticed that Emiya was for some reason aiming for him, Mash and Olga instead of his rival and enemy Caster, and Ritsuka decided to use this to lure Emiya to a fixed spot while giving as much time as needed for Caster to deploy his noble phantasm, and they successfully bluffed their way and made sure Emiya didn't notice and Caster deployed his noble phantasm and they successfully killed Emiya.

One thing to understand about this, Ritsuka has almost zero knowledge about Emiya and zero knowledge about magic, therefore he came up with this plan despite not understanding anything about the situation and successfully defeated Emiya.

{Third Singularity : Okeanos} [Game]

[Section 12-13]

Realizing that there is no forward way to kill Heracles, Ritsuka came up with the strategy(Could be considered as a Bet) to lure Heracles where the Ark is [The Ark is a box that was given to King David and when someone touches it they die], the strategy goes like this :

- Since they know for a fact what is Heracles's goal (which is Euryale), Ritsuka will carry Euryale on his back(Since she got damaged in her leg) luring Heracles to where the Ark is.

- The rest of the servants [Atalanta - David - Orion - Mash - Drake] will pay as much time for Ritsuka to run to the Ark's place knowing very well that Heracles is far faster than them.

- Once they reach the Ark's place, they will try their best to push Heracles to it, forcing him to touch it which leads to his death.

And they successfully killed Heracles.

{Fifth SIngularity : E Pluribus Unum} [Turas Realta Manga]

[Chapter 48]

After all the pressure and considerations, Ritsuka came up with a great attacking and defending strategy that gives good chances to succeed in charging through the enemies territory.

He separated the armies into two, North and South.

North Army = [Edison - Robin - Helena - Elizabith - Hector]
South Army = [Scathach - Karna - Rama]

He explained that this way they could keep as many people alive as possible while maintaining enough power to fight as long as needed.

[Chapter 58] [Shared Feat with Mash]

Knowing that Cu Chulainn is insanely hard to defeat because they need to land a single hit on his spirit core to kill him, Ritsuka and Mash came up with the plan that Cu Chulainn would never expect which is to use Mash as the one to land the hit after distracting him through the help of Rama and Nightingale.

It was not a logical action, something Cu Chulainn won't even consider because Mash is the lowest servant with fighting power in the team making it illogical to even use her, but Ritsuka and Mash knew if they could get close enough they could land a hit.

As a result, they successfully created an opening in Cu Chulainn's defense.

But to note one thing and it is that Cu Chulainn was able to react to this attack but due to a miracle of a spirit sword being formed out of nowhere they were able to land a hit on Cu Chulainn and kill him.

So ultimately speaking this was a low-chance to success bet but it worked nonetheless.

{Sixth Singularity : Camelot} [Game]

[Section 1]

Ritsuka and Mash first arrive in the harsh desert region outside Camelot. The environment is extremely hostile—blazing sun, sandstorms, and scarce resources. They must travel across this dangerous landscape while avoiding hostile forces like Bedivere's patrols and other threats tied to the Lion King's territory.

[section 3]

In early scenes, Ritsuka and Mash meet refugees, villagers suffering from the harsh environment and war. Ritsuka listens to them, gives water, shares their burdens. These interactions help Ritsuka empathize with local people and motivate them to take more severe action.

Ritsuka and Mash approached Bedivere, who stood silently, his shoulders heavy with the weight of past failures. Guilt etched into every line of his face, he seemed frozen, unsure if he could ever act decisively again. Ritsuka stepped forward, choosing his words carefully, speaking with empathy and steady reassurance. Each sentence was measured, designed to lift Bedivere from the shadow of regret and remind him of his purpose. Slowly, the knight's tense posture eased, and a spark of determination returned to his eyes. Through patience, understanding, and encouragement, Ritsuka helped Bedivere confront his doubts, regain his confidence, and prepare to act with resolve once more.

[Section 16]

As the blinding light of the tower faded, Ritsuka stood before the radiant figure of Artoria — no longer a mere king, but the Goddess Rhongomyniad. Her divine presence radiated authority and cold perfection, her voice steady and devoid of compassion. She spoke of salvation through control, of erasing suffering by stripping away freedom.

Yet Ritsuka did not waver. Every word Artoria spoke was logical, yet hollow — a vision of order without heart. Drawing on everything learned throughout the journey, Ritsuka refused to bow to her divine logic. They countered her reasoning with conviction, defending humanity's right to choose, to struggle, and to grow.

Mash’s faith faltered, and Bedivere’s guilt resurfaced — but Ritsuka’s resolve anchored them. Through courage, empathy, and unshakable moral clarity, they rallied their allies, confronting the goddess not merely as an enemy, but as a fallen ideal that had lost sight of what it meant to be human. In the end, Ritsuka’s strength lay not in power, but in belief — a refusal to let logic eclipse compassion.

After rallying his allies, Ritsuka leads the final assault on the Holy City, where the Goddess Rhongomyniad’s rule represents divine perfection against human perseverance. When victory seems impossible, Ritsuka’s faith in humanity and decisive leadership turn the tide, proving his growth from novice Master to capable commander.

Ritsuka understood Gilgamesh's actions as they were a misdirection from him to lure out Enkidu because Gilgamesh said earlier

"Hah, but to think that it's gone as well as I expected"

[Context : Gilgamesh ordered both Mash and Ritsuka to go with him on a mission to investigate the water quality of the Persian gulf with only the two of them.

But this turned out to be a misdirection from him because Ritsuka explained that Gilgamesh used them as pawns to lure Enkidu, and that is because Gilgamesh said

"Hah, but to think that it's gone as well as I expected"

Applying that he predicted that these actions will lead to lure Enkidu out of his hiding spot.

Ritsuka saw the goal of the King of Mage which is to eliminate death, suffering and imperfection.

Ritsuka said that he saw someone who was angry, someone who was despairing, there was nothing but righteousness in his feelings.

And Gilgamesh asked him :

“In that case, what do you think?

How would you judge his righteous feelings?”

On which Ritsuka answered :

“I thought it was bullshit”

[Chapter 73-76]

[Ritsuka’s Strategy to Form Alliance With Both Ishtar and Quetzalcoatl]

The team reviewed the information they have about the goddess Gorgon coming to the conclusion that they can’t defeat her by themselves leaving them with the only choice to form alliance with one of the other goddesses because the natural enemy of goddesses are other goddesses.

With this Gilgamesh told Ritsuka that they need to negotiate with Lady Ishtar since she is most likely to be the only one that would help them between the three goddesses.

But before that a sudden attack on Uruk had been reported which was done by the hand of the goddess Quetzalcoatl who told them that she will start killing one hundred people every day until she kills everyone and goes back to her jungle.

Now this creates a new problem which is to get rid of her or at the very least stop her at all cost to prevent her from destroying Uruk.

But Gilgamesh and Merlin said they need to prioritise the negotiation with Lady Ishtar meaning they now have two things to do.

Ritsuka decided to separate the team into two :

First team to get rid of Quetzalcoatl [Ritsuka + Merlin + Mash + Ana + Jaguarman + Kiyohime]

Second team to negotiate with Ishtar [Arjuna (Alone)]

[First team situation]

Yesterday they prepared to fight Quetzalcoatl to distract her while Ritsuka destroys the symbol above her temple which gives her power to fight.

But Ritsuka revealed that information to Quetzalcoatl exposing their plan so that they can negotiate with her which she answered a few of their questions before fighting them.

Ultimately speaking Quetzalcoatl crushed all of them but Ritsuka, and while all of that was happening Ritsuka finally reached to the top on of her temple next to her symbol meaning all he has to do is to destroy it but he decided not to and started questioning her once again trying to understand her.

Saying that is his joy. Asking her what is her joy? Is it fighting or defeating others? Or what?

Which she answered “It is to understand one another”

By this information Ritsuka decided to come up with the crazy solution to her joy by ordering Jaguarman to send him very high in the sky replicating Quetzalcoatl style in fighting knowing very well he might die from the fall and Quetzalcoatl saved him.

And then asked him why would he do that? Telling him she might have left him to die.

Which he answered saying “That didn’t cross my mind at all, because you Quetzalcoatl ….. Love humans, don’t you?”

Making her immediately surrender and she joined their team.

[Second team situation]

Arjuna reached Ishtar's castle which she immediately came out to him, and before he was able to say anything she shot a powerful next to him :

“I don't care why you came…. Sending me a demigod as an envoy”

“I will regard that as a declaration of war”

Now Arjuna powered himself up and decided to fight thinking “It is vital to show one’s strength in negotiation”

And they started fighting, which ended up in Arjuna’s defeat but before Ishtar’s strong attack Arjuna showed the back of jewels Gilgamesh provided to him to negotiate with Ishtar but that only made her angry and then she shot him down and almost died but due to his guts and his gratitude to the people of Chaldea he bowed to her and said :

“I am only here to negotiate….”

Telling her to join them and that if she doesn’t he will curse her to the end of her life making her more angry until Ereskigal stopped her telling her to join them.

Marking the success of the strategy in the end.

Notes about this strategy :

- Jaguarman was an enemy to the team, the manga didn't explain it well, but in the Anime Ritsuka flirted with her and made her join them

- In the anime, neither Arjuna or Kiyohime were in the team, making their forces lower.

- In the anime, they didn't fight Ishtar and she simply joined them after they showed her Gilgamesh's jewels.

- This feat is nowhere to be high, it took a lot of risk and Gilgamesh claimed the fact that Ritsuka didn't know that Ishtar will get angry at Arjuna if they send him is an ignorance making this strategy a bold decision, and Arjuna claimed that the negotiation with Ishtar is a mistake meaning Ritsuka unknowingly stepped on a landmine.

- But in the end the conclusion was success so it is a complete feat nonetheless.

Ritsuka knew that trying to understand Ereskigal's pain was rude and he told her that even praising her would be wrong.

Telling her what she accomplished is incredible, but if she doesn't believe in the people living here and if she kept their souls locked in the underworld that would be disrespectful for herself.

[Chapter 87]

Realizing that as long as Tiamat exists in a place where life exists.

Ritsuka came up with the idea to use the underworld which is a place without life to trap Tiamat there and kill her, but it all depends on Ereshkigal which she accepted but said she needs ten years but then explained that she actually only needs 3 days.

So all they have to do is slow Tiamat for 2-3 days before she enters Uruk and then they can trap her once she reaches there.

{Final Singularity : Solomon} [Movie]

[Important note : These feats is only theoretical since it was not explained but I analyzed them by myself to make it understandable and they could be wrong but it doesn't matter to me]

After losing both Mash and Dr.Romani, Ritsuka stood calmly and overloaded his body with the mana inside his mystic code and used all his mental power to summon as many servants as possible even if it destroyed his body. [And yes, the mystic code played an important role for this to happen]

[Overall AC - Intra EM]
—----------

After that, Ritsuka successfully summoned a huge number of servants through the pain in his body and he ordered them different tasks all in the same time while he ordered a few of them to make a way for him to reach for Goetia while he can't do it himself, and his orders successfully achieved him victory.
