Powerscaling Jibril [Light Novel]

Classification for colors:

Red-Scaling her in power wise

Cyan-Her Speed Scaling

Orange-Her Abilities/Haxes

Blue-Overall

Scaling her power:
Jibril had the ability to materialise various objects or cause present ones to dematerialise, she could also create a spatial-bomb that can even even destroy the entire universe

> "Why——I said [Meat], but why did a sexy blond girl appear!?"
>
> In contrast to Jibril's radiant smile, Shiro had cold eyes.
>
> "....Nii, impression...."
>
> "Ah, ahhh....Sorry, I think it got affected by my impression?"
>
> .....
>
> ——it was supposed to have such a paragraph.
>
> "That.....wouldn't that be quite bad....."
>
> Yes, yes, if it was [Materialising creations], then if a [Spatial bomb] was said, the universe would be in trouble, so I had to scrub that idea off. Ah, but it ends with [ん][1].
>
> "No, it's not that kind of method."
>
> And when Sora had an impression of [Eating meat], then——but can this be used?
>
> "No oh? (Smiles)"

This would easily easily scale her to Universal Level

Moving on to the next:
The dragonia is a being whose existence is in the multiple planes of time—past, present, and future. It exists as a whole different plane, he is a 4th dimensional being

The dragonia are beings that transcended lower dimension and are existing across past, present and future simultaneously bcuz of this, they are functionally Immortal. They are able to recover from any attack and can amplify their power infinitely by focusing their existence on the present. Their true essence might not physically even be their physical bodies but something more of abstract possibly linked cosmic or divine force

They are 4D with infinite power

And jibril was able to kill the dragonia (in the 2nd scan)

Further backing up this claim:She was able to kill the dragonia that exist as a 4D plane across a complete space time continuum(all over the past, present and future) and on Infinite power

Making the feat uni+/Low multi to Multiversal+ by that

She laughed and continued, “You exist across multiple time periods, do you not?”

————The dragon was speechless.

“Oh my, do the Dragonia show their expressions even when they are told something vital? What a fascinating discovery♪”

—That is indeed the ecology of Dragonia.

They are multi-temporal beings that exist in multiple times, centered on the present and spanning the past and future. They are perfect creatures with an eternal life span, and their power is comparable to that of the Old Deus, and therein lies their secret.

In the space-time continuum, since they do not exist as a point but as a plane, no matter how they are attacked in the point that exists in the present, they are corrected by the past and the future, and the present will recover immediately. Its nearly infinite power, on the other hand, reverberates its power in the multiple time periods, and by converging on the present, it is able to increase its power infinitely. Their flesh is nothing more than a vessel to hold the deflation world.[32] But—

“—O little feather, how didst thee arrive at such conclusion!”

The white dragon did not hide its surprise in the slightest and asked her directly.

"—Can I ask you your name?" She lay motionless on the ground, almost pleading with the dragon. "If I am to die…then as you wish, I want to die with the pride of knowing I defeated you… And I can't take full pride in myself if I don't know your name."

The dragon agreed wholeheartedly and answered in a quiet voice:

"—Liechengerte, Follower of the Ruler Reginleif the Enlightened."

"…Liechengerte… A light so far away…"

Jibril said the name over and over under her breath, before clenching her teeth and saying it one last time. The dragon smiled with a sense of satisfaction and turned to face her.

"Little—nay, Glorious Feather. Thou shalt not perish. Thou shalt live to see further days. One day, though, thou will fight an even weaker being. And when that day comes, thou shalt realize what it meant to defeat me. Until then, be proud of what thou have done today. It brings…greater meaning…to my…existence…than there could_____" —ever be.

His words evaporated into the wind, leaving behind nothing but undying bones.

Also as she beat a dragonia who exists across multiple planes of past,present and future simultaneously and existing on a far higher dimensional plane aswell as said dragonia being capable of rewriting anything through simple speech as dragonia tongue wields reality warping magic and rewritting anything and existence

____The Dragonian tongue was inherently magic, each word a command to the laws of nature. Should they say "death," everything within the vicinity was reduced to corpses. Should they say "shatter," everything was smashed to smithereens. This was the planet's primal tongue, vestiges of the same energy used to create the world.

There were a variety of different names for the Dragonian tongue, such as the universal language or the language of creation, but no being other than the Dragonias themselves understood its essence.

Jibril was able to forcibly rewrote her core to create an Absolute Smite to kill the Dragonia as dragonia can't be injured with Jibril's Heavenly Smite itself

_____The third attack.

The Flügel don't normally name their attacks. They exercise their power, control the space around them, and destroy whatever appears in their path. There wasn't any real technique to it; therefore, their attacks weren't worth naming. To a Flügel, attacking was like breathing. But Jibril would use this Smite just once, and on a Dragonia that pushed her this far. She thought it was only appropriate to name her ultimate attack out of respect for her opponent.

"That brings an end to my third attack, which I call—Absolute Smite—and an end to our battle."

Scaling her Speed:
Jibril can twist space itself to move at infinite speeds (she could even blitz shuvi's tp), applies to both combat and reaction speed (Scan 1)

And not only that Jibril literally have stated to have infinite speed blatantly in the light novels making my claim supportive for her having infinite speed (Scan 2)

—Teleportation.

Twisting space to connect two different spatial coordinates. Something like to moving with infinite speed. But, in principle, it is still movement…

"————————hya?!"

If there is a barrier in between… this happens.

What caused her to scream in a such dumb voice, so different from her normal one, was an accidental collision. Moving with something similar to infinite speed, Jibril hit something where there seemed to be nothing but empty space. There was even the sound of an explosion, and Jibril was stuck in midair like a frog. Then, just like that, she started to slide down. Finally, as if she was getting peeled off of something, she finally fell to the ground.

"…Fu fufu… To surround me with a spatial rupture… fu fufufu"

With a large bump on her head, now wide awake, Jibril…. laughed.

Something so powerful that she didn't notice it even with her Flügel senses. She understands now, both this spiral land, and the rupture powerful enough to inhibit teleportation. The only ones able to do something like that… If this was the deed of an Old Deus, she would be able to accept it. However,

"You have some nerve!!!"

—Teleportation.

Twisting space to connect two different spatial coordinates. Something like to moving with infinite speed. But, in principle, it is still movement...

"————————hya?!"

If there is a barrier in between... this happens.

What caused her to scream in a such dumb voice, so different from her normal one, was an accidental collision. Moving with something similar to infinite speed, Jibril hit something where there seemed to be nothing but empty space. There was even the sound of an explosion, and Jibril was stuck in midair like a frog. Then, just like that, she started to slide down. Finally, as if she was getting peeled off of something, she finally fell to the ground.

Jibril low ball speed in base would scale to FTL+ due it being stated even with the speed of light she can't catch dragonia and dragonia was stated that who can defy space and time and was because of dragonia's spatial movements (Scan 1)

And then it was stated Dragonia can move through space and time, he can distort space-time infinitely, Jibril was fighting against him five times and was able to kill dragonia and able to keep up with him who was in the infinite state of distortion of space and time
You could possibly scale her speed upto Immeasurable (Scan 2)

So her Speed varies from from Infinite-immeasurable speed

She rattled off another Flügel idiom and sped up even further.

But this Dragonia was fast. Really fast. He was getting farther and farther away from her. She flew as quickly as she could, but the distance between them didn't close one bit. Then it dawned on her: There was no way a being of such mountainous scale was physically flying through the air. This wasn't flight, but rather the surrounding space leaving the dragon behind as it moved. The dragon itself was a fixed coordinate that defied the mechanics of space-time.

——Speed wasn't the issue there. It didn't matter if Jibril moved at the speed of light; she wouldn't ever catch up to the Dragonia.

What was she to do? She thought for a moment before a smile appeared on her face.

"Oh, silly me. I just need to give him a friendly greeting. ♥"

——With a wave of her arm, she sent the Dragonia her friendly hello. The space around the Dragonia distorted until neither sound nor light could keep up. The nearby mountains were reduced to rubble from a deafening roar that shook heaven and earth alike.

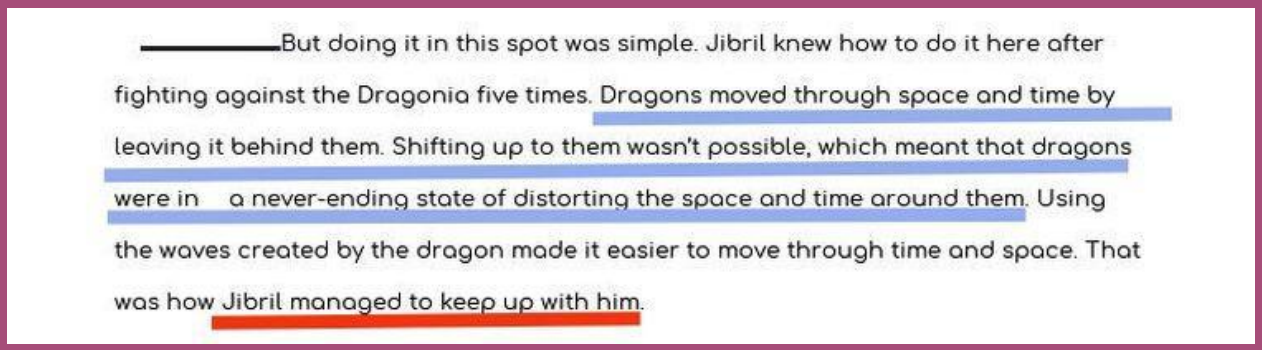

This was Jibril's way of saying hello.

"——Pardon me for bothering you during your flight. My name is Jibril."

She lowered herself toward the scorching crater where a mountain range once dotted the landscape. In the middle of the crater was the dragon, looking up at her.

——Remarkable, she thought.

The draconic being was virtually unscathed, which was to be expected, given his magnificently indestructible body. The light from the embers around him reflected off his pure white scales, as perfectly stainless as a glistening glacier in the northern seas. Most stunning of all was his sagely gaze, as if he wasn't looking in the same timeline—as if he was gazing upon an unknown something far in the distance. This was certainly none other than a Dragonia, the most perfect living thing in this world.

But doing it in this spot was simple. Jibril knew how to do it here after fighting against the Dragonia five times. Dragons moved through space and time by leaving it behind them. Shifting up to them wasn't possible, which meant that dragons were in a never-ending state of distorting the space and time around them. Using the waves created by the dragon made it easier to move through time and space. That was how Jibril managed to keep up with him.

Her Abilities/Haxes:
Jibril have Time Travel and summoning abilities/haxes cuz through Space-Time shift, Jibril can summon a version of herself from the past

——What did Jibril do?

She had an idea, though it wasn't possible for Jibril to break out of the pocket dimension Azril had created. Azril's Heavenly Smite, unleashed in that confined space, was an ultimate attack—or at least it should have been, but Rafil had been able to see something else from this distance. Within the span of a second, probably less, she saw Jibril's shocked expression when Azril sealed her away. However, just beyond that, Rafil believed she saw a second Jibril at the same time. This was why she never feared for Jibril's life—but how did she do it? Was it a doppelgänger? No, that didn't explain how she was able to escape Azril's pocket dimension. So there was only one other explanation. Rafil had an idea of what her youngest sister did, but the question still remained: How? In other words——

"She warped through time... Flügel shouldn't be able to do that—so how did she pull it off?"

Flügel common sense dictated that space wasn't continuous. It was in a state of constant flow, like waves in the ocean. Flügel were able to open holes in these waves and travel through them to move to a predetermined, absolute distance. Rafil knew that time worked in a similar way as space did—she had fought enough Dragonias to recognize that they moved through both time and space simultaneously. Unlike space, time didn't move in a wave motion...or did it? At least, Rafil and other the Flügel didn't think so.

Jibril was able to rewrite the magic used by her creator Artosh who is God[Old Deus] to create the Flugel _____Jibril had forcefully rewritten the magic used by Artosh to create the Flügel. Had Azril been there, she probably would've reprimanded the act as blasphemy against their creator.

"_____*Will thou not vanquish me?*" the dragon quietly asked, to which Jibril cocked her head in confusion.

_____She remembered a particular phrase in one of the Elf books she'd read while killing time in the Chamber of Restoration: "Let your enemy cut your flesh so that you will smash his bones." At the time, she felt bad for the low-intelligence race and how pitiful of an idea it was to do so. However, if her one and only desire was to truly prove it was possible for a single Flügel to defeat a Dragonia, then_____

---

"I have vanquished you. What difference does it make if a small footnote says I died in the process?"

Jibril needed to be prepared to have her own bones smashed.

She didn't care whether she lived or died so long as she vanquished a Dragonia on her own. Even if she perished, only one thing mattered—her victory.

Jibril's body began to shine brightly.

"_____*Incredible.*"

Jibril can also stop time as she stops time and freeze dragonia to deal with him

Just as Rafil had predicted—it was possible to dodge the Dragonia's commands by teleporting through space and time milliseconds after they were spoken. The dragon's tail was just barely manageable by freezing time in certain spaces. The Dragonia watched Jibril and let out a mighty laugh.

She also have resistance to power nullification
Ja La Anse, a spell that completely nullifies the ability to use magic isn't effective on Jibril as it can't able to negate or cancel out Jibril's power and abilities

"_____Ziá La Anse_____!"

Immediately after the words escaped her lips, the dome released a repulsive death knell from beneath the Clive residence. The sound passed through the capital, the forest, and bent the sky itself—and the moment this eerie cry reached its limits...

The world fell silent.

...It was as if the planet itself had perished. The ominous shrieks spread out from the city and could be heard by any in the vicinity for about a tenth of the continent. Anyone who heard the shrieking and howling also heard the silence that made it seem like time itself had stopped.

There was a simple reason for this: All spirits within range of this one rite had been temporarily erased from existence.

_____Fixed Second Guard—Ziá La Anse.....

A ninety-nine-fold rite of spirit-breaking that operated on the Old Deus Kainas's protection. In simple terms: a spell that deactivated magic. The theory behind it was simple as well. Instead of channeling spirits from the spirit corridor, this spell created a magical explosion by feeding off nearby airborne spirits. In the same way fire consumes oxygen in order to burn, Ziá La Anse consumed spirits for fuel.

She is also capable break out of pocket dimensions easily
This can be seen as resistance to sealing too

She had an idea, though it wasn't possible for Jibril to break out of the pocket dimension Azril had created. Azril's Heavenly Smite, unleashed in that confined space, was an ultimate attack—or at least it should have been, but Rafil had been able to see something else from this distance. Within the span of a second, probably less, she saw Jibril's shocked expression when Azril sealed her away. However, just beyond that, Rafil believed she saw a second Jibril at the same time. This was why she never feared for Jibril's life —but how did she do it? Was it a doppelgänger? No, that didn't explain how she was able to escape Azril's pocket dimension. So there was only one other explanation. Rafil had an idea of what her youngest sister did, but the question still remained: How? In other words—

"She warped through time… Flügel shouldn't be able to do that—so how did she pull it off?"

Flügel common sense dictated that space wasn't continuous. It was in a state of constant flow, like waves in the ocean. Flügel were able to open holes in these waves and travel through them to move to a predetermined, absolute distance. Rafil knew that time worked in a similar way as space did—she had fought enough Dragonias to recognize that they moved through both time and space simultaneously. Unlike space, time didn't move in a wave motion…or did it? At least, Rafil and other the Flügel didn't think so.

She was blessed by Artosh, so she was not affected by Enderpokryphen which basically gives her resistance to many types of attacks and she has been already noted to be extraordinary among all of the Flugels and is beyond them

Seeing the space she'd rent torn open once more by an even greater force allowed Schwi to define a feeling previously unknown to her, as she transitioned from her firing position to a posterior-plant.

"Did you expect your little attack would injure me?"

Definition: This is a nightmare.

It can't be. It can't, it can't, it is impossible! Granted, Enderpokryphen is an imperfect reproduction of the power of Aranleif's Far Cry. It reproduces only 43.7 percent—per the Zeichner's report. But the Ultimate One was one of the Rulers, the three greatest of all Dragonias. A Far Cry unleashed by such an individual at the cost of his life—even 43 percent—

"…It seems you have underestimated me…you silly bit of scrap, you… ♪"

A direct hit—couldn't leave her without a scratch—

—That—that couldn't———!

"However, I commend you—for at least forcing me to erect a defense spell."

Jibril's words made Schwi doubt the functioning of her hearing apparatus. Flügel themselves were a kind of magic, woven by Artosh. Therefore, a rite to maintain themselves, which might be called a defense spell, was always active. In fact, it was because of this that Schwi had calculated she could breach it with Enderpokryphen. But this Flügel—no. Redefinition: This individual no longer fits in the Flügel category. This anomaly, Jibril, must have doubted the defenses granted by her creator Artosh—and deployed an even stronger defense. It wasn't the work of a Flügel. It was inconceivable. This individual —was already beyond all—

Jibril also have causality manipulation and resistance towards it as Jibril as a Flugel was able to survive the distortion of the space-time and causality by Lord Artosh

—Just then, there was a sudden vibration in space, like an earthquake coming from afar. It was a quiet, but absolutely impossible to ignore force that brought about the impact on this chamber. Then, in the small chamber—or rather, now it has become an incomparably large open space, the three who had been making noise froze, drawing back their breaths at the majesty of the man who towered over them as if he had been there since ancient times. The man in front of them is the god of the heavens, the supreme sovereign, the God of War—Artosh.

—Their creator, who had not left his jade throne in centuries, was standing on his own two feet.

He simply stood, and time and space, even the laws of cause and effect, distorted, and this small restoration chamber expanded several times—no, thousands of times. Then, they looked up at the Lord who was standing before them, feeling as small as worms in comparison—

Overall Jibril Would easily scale From Universal+ to Multiversal according to her feats in Light novel with Infinite to Immeasurable speed with wide array of quality haxes and abilities that she demonstrated in Ln

---