

Jeff The Killer

"GO TO SLEEP"

By: Axiom and Jonas

This doc covers the SCD/mental feats of the infamous Creepasta: Jeff the Killer/Jefferey Woods, Jeff can often be a misunderstood character with his abilities being missed through at first glance as this doc will try it's best to help clear up Jeff's actions throughout his original story. We will also separate a theory segment of Jeff between the two sections.

Original Story

(Note: The original story of JTK and his origins take place in the Creepy Pasta Classics, stored within a fandom of the original Creepypasta's, including Jeff. This fandom's validity can be confirmed do to all the original pasta's originally stored. Link to Jeff's story: Jeff the Killer | Creepypasta Classics Wiki | Fandom, we chose this version due to the most well put version of Jeff's origins.

At the start of Jeff's story, it cuts to an excerpt of a heading of a newspaper report about a unanimous serial killer ongoing on the loose:

As the beginning further explains that after several weeks, the killer would still go on to be undetected and is still at large from the police. Shortly after, a child would go on telling about his experience of surviving against said killer. This was the only thing they had as something close to a lead at this time. (Concealment)

The Young Boys encounter with Jeff:

The report of the young boy's encounter started with a statement of how originally he woke up from a nightmare as when he wakes up, the boy notices the windows in his room have been open as he states that he remembers them originally being closed. Indicated Jeff's infiltration to be successful without the boy detecting him earlier or much sooner. Though, unaware of the situation, the boy simply goes to the window to shut it back down and get back to sleep. That is, until he had a strange and uncomfortable feeling as if he were being watched by someone. The boy looked up and noticed a light shining by his curtains as well as a pair of uncanny eyes. Through the boys first sight of Jeff, he would go to explain the experience:

"They were bordered in black and... just plain out terrified me. That's when I saw his mouth. A long, horrendous smile that made every hair on my body stand up. The figure stood there, watching me. Finally, after what seemed like forever, he said it. A simple phrase, but said in a way only a mad man could speak." - The young boy.

As stated by the surviving boy, the fear Jeff had radiated during their encounter had made every hair on his body feel like it stood up. As well, admitting Jeff's aura alone and just standing there had completely terrified him while doing the bare minimum.

(Concealment + Fear Inducement + Aura)

Shortly, Jeff would let out a short sentence: 'Go to sleep.', as a message, causing the boy to let out a loud scream as Jeff aimed his knife right at the boys' heart. The boy reacted by trying his hardest to fight back such as punching and kicking at Jeff, that is, until his father came after all the noise in the room. Jeff quickly reacted by throwing his knife from a distance to impale the fathers' shoulder in case the father would retaliate to protect his son. But due to the neighbors' alertness, he couldn't kill him just yet as he quickly reacted by immediately fleeing the house. Jeff would find himself locating the exit of a house he was unfamiliar with, going down the hallways of the house as the boy heard the noise of window glass breaking. They would notice the back of their house was broken as Jeff vanishes from the vicinity, successfully getting away. Due to this experience, the boy reports that the psychotic smile and cold evil eyes of Jeff would never leave his head.

(Fear Inducement + Aura + Quick Thinking + Creative Thinking + VSI)

(Note: The fact that Jeff likely had the opportunity to quickly stab his father to death before the neighbors had reported could potentially be an anti-feat, however he was still much able to react quick enough by throwing the knife to impale the fathers' shoulders to buy time from the father from doing anything to protect or help his son. And Jeff's style of killing his victims rely on brutality as not giving as much pain and suffering to his victims is simply against his personality).

Jeff's Early Childhood

Years back when Jeff was just a regular young boy, his family were moving into a new neighborhood and chose a more fancy suburban town as Jeff and his brother Liu were on board. They unpacked as some neighbors already would start to greet Jeff and his family. The two families would exchange greetings with each other and would eventually be done packing for their new home. Jeff's mom would actually accept the invite to the son of the other mom's birthday party. His mom did this in order to let her son experience time and bonding with their neighbors to get to know them better. Despite Jeff's disagreement, he decided not to argue back as he went to his new room. Jeff would lay down on his bed until he suddenly gets a weird feeling, not a serious pain, bvt a weird feeling in general about something off may happen. The next day, Jeff would wake up for breakfast and school until the same feeling as it grew stronger from the other day. (Intuition)

For school, Jeff and Liu were outside to wait for the school bus to pick them up. But suddenly, a kid riding a skateboard would rudely interrupt them with both of the brothers being displeased with the kid. The kid kicked up the skateboard and stopped for the two, he then decided to intimidate Jeff and Liu with two other kids. The kids would start to get on Liu's nerves as he soon starts to try and throw a punch at the ringleader of the group of kids until he stops him by showing a knife at Liu to intimidate him. This causes Jeff to step up as the feeling in his stomach increases even further about an off sense of feeling for what was about to happen. Jeff would get up as his brother Liu encouraged him to stay out of the scenario but Jeff ignored him due to his annoyance and feeling in his stomach. Jeff ordered the bullies to give back Liu's wallet as one of them pulled out a knife to intimidate Jeff. However, despite this, this didn't phase Jeff to defend his brother Liu against the group. Jeff reacts by quickly slamming his fist into the bullies nose. As another billy named Randy would attack Jeff next as he then reacts by grabbing Randy's wrist and breaking it. Both Troy and Keith rushed Jeff, but it's been directly stated that Jeff was too quick to react for both of them as he threw Randy to the ground while dodging one of Keith's attacks while stabbing him in the arm. Shortly after, Troy would try to attack Jeff next as Jeff reacted by punching Troy directly to the stomach as Jeff bad took care of the group to defend Liu. After doing so, Liu would even look at Jeff in amazement. However Jeff knew that if they didn't flee the scene fast enough they would be framed for assault against the group of bullies as he decided to quickly head for the bus for school as quickly as possible as during school they didn't speak a word about the incident.

(Intuition + Emotional Engagement + Emotional Management + Quick Thinking + Logical Thinking + Charisma + Threats + Concealment + Intimidation)

At school, after that incident, Liu would think of the situation as nothing but his brother beating up a few bullies to help and defend him. But to Jeff, this incident was a lot more than meets the eye. Jeff knew himself that there was more than just defending his brother, he felt the emotion as something terrifying, as he identifies the urge as if he wanted to hurt someone for pleasure. And he couldn't help but feel happy. The strange feeling wouldn't go away, as when he arrived home as his parents asked him how his day was, Jeff would reply that 'it was a wonderful day'. (Emotional Engagement + Emotional Understanding)

The Party

When Jeff attended the birthday party, Randy, Keith, and Troy came back for revenge. They arrived at the party with guns, but things ended up very differently for the would-be murderers. Getting into his darkest urges, Jeff slaughtered each and every one of the bullies with increasing ferocity. His mind snapped and he became an entirely different person, with only one directive in mind: kill. But Jeff didn't come out of the conflict unscathed. Due to the mix of fire and chemical burns, he was left horrifically disfigured and barely clinging on to life. But at the hospital where the doctors and his family expected negative reactions from Jeff. He actually reacted in a positive manner, not even seeing this as a minor issue (Emotional Engagement + Bodily Kinesthetic intelligence + Physical Adaptability)

Jeff vs Liu

(This follows the tale of Homicidal Liu, Jeff's brother who slowly became a serial killer due to the influences of Jeff)

Liu woke up to the sound of gunshots, coming from inside his house, there was panic screams, sounds of violent struggles, He sat bolt upright, terrified and drenched in sweat, as he heard footsteps getting closer his room, Jeff trudged down the hallway towards Liu's bedroom door, having already taken 2 lives that night, still dripping with the blood of its recent pray, he chuckled softly to himself amused at the carnage of it all. Now he was gonna add 1 more body to the pile, Liu's body. Back in his bedroom Liu can feel his heart rise into his throat. The door creaked open, and he saw the figure looming in the shadows. "Jeff?" Liu asks, "Is that you?" The figure chuckled again and put his finger on his lipless mouth "Shhh" he said "Go to sleep" Before Liu could get another word in, the figure presumably his brother, Jeff charged at him brandishing the blade. He couldn't help but notice that his brother's white hoodie was already splattered with blood and cut a wide open joker grin into his face. The awful sight caused him to let his guard down just for a moment, Jeff who'd seem utterly insane have no intention of cutting him any slack, Jeff stabbed Liu in the belly causing shockwave of pain to rock through his body, Worse than the pain was the sense of betrayal his own brother, who'd he sacrifice so much for is genuinely trying to kill him, Liu cried out in pain , tears cascading down his cheeks. Jeff stabbed him again and whispered "I said, go to sleep! Just like mom and dad!" In that moment Liu connected the dots, the gunshots he heard earlier they were blast of his father's shotgun, fire of in an unsuccessful attempt to save him and his wife from his youngest son's wrath, Jeff's mother had been the one who first discover him in the bathroom, mutilating his face into a nightmare we know and fear today, When she saw fear and disgust, Jeff sees beauty and potential, She ran back to her room and wakes Jeff's father up to load up the gun, but they were too slow by the time when they loaded in 2 shells Jeff was already running across the room, knife at ready, His father unloaded both barrels, but Jeff, now imbued with killer instinct was able to dodge the buckshot.

Jane's Letter

(Note: Jane the Killer is a creepypasta heavily linked with the story of JTK's Original Story. Similarly to Jeff, she was a regular person until a series of events would influence her to become an eventual serial killer, though her origins have been heavily connected with Jeff.)

> if you are reading this, know that no matter how many innocent victims you claim or how much innocent blood you shed, I'm still coming for you in the end. All of the men and women you so viciously slaughtered and disemboweled, I beat you to it. I killed them not because I hate them, I imagined those victims were you as I took their lives. It was the mere vision of you that made me kill them. I never did like you, you greasy-headed, grinning, smug, ignorant son of a bitch. My black eyes may look like I'm void of vision, but I'm not stupid. Just remember, the night that you creep into a poor girl's bedroom, you're gonna fall head over heels down the fucking stairs with your guts caught on the broken glass of the window that I smashed you into. Tonight, when I reach you, evil will battle evil, winner kills all, and the only one who will not get out alive is you. I'm coming for you. Sleep well...
> Signed,
> Jane the Killer

In Jane's letter, she makes a direct rant and hate mail as to her strong hatred for Jeff, noting her huge disagreement to Jeff's lack of morals. She would go to the point that she hated Jeff so much she would kill victims of her own just to see if it was Jeff who she was killing. Jeff had been a huge influence in Jane's decisions and his status as an infamous serial killer would eventually turn Jane into one herself, with the help of her extreme hatred for him. This also means Jeff had indirectly caused the birth of a new killer of Jane due to his reputation for lack of remorse against his victims which frustrated and made Jane furious. This letter would take place after the events of Jeff successfully getting away with taking another victim's life, which was a young woman while leaving her husband with a giant skull fracture. Jeff and his Known Victims

Victims

- Randy - Punched in the chest by Jeff, causing Arrhythmia.
- Troy - Bashed in the face by Jeff with a towel rack.
- Keith - Bashed on the head by Jeff with a towel rack and then inadvertently set himself on fire.
- Peter Woods - Gutted by Jeff with a kitchen knife.
- Margaret Woods - Gutted by Jeff with a kitchen knife.
- Liu Woods - Stabbed in the chest by Jeff.

When it came to Jeff's known/named victims in his story and lore, it was clear in the original story that regarding his murders, he has still been on the loose since, as described by an article heading about an ominous killer still at large. For 2 of his victims, he would use unorthodox and uncommon methods such as using everyday objects as a potential weapon to fight off 2 of his victims which were also 2 of the 3 main bullies he faced. A lot of these brutal methods of killing were fueled by the heavy hatred he had on his victims as well as revenge for having them frame his brother Liu from their very first confrontation.

According to the Original Story, the only thing remotely close to evidence they had was a report of the encounter of a young boy and the murderer. And even then, the report would still lack a lead to get anywhere to find Jeff, as the boy could barely tell anything else about where Jeff may be heading including the lack of evidence Jeff left at the scene.

Despite Jeff mainly using his own knife, he sometimes would switch his Arsenal or methods of killing depending on the situation. If he doesn't have a knife as his equipment he'd result in his next best option, which to him is brute force methods to stun his victims such as Randy as he strikes him in his heart to cause arrhythmia to cause an improper beating of his heart.

(Concealment + Methods + Improvisation + Cunningness + Emotional Engagement)

"After weeks of unexplained murders, the ominous unknown killer is still on the rise. After little evidence has been found, a young boy states that he survived one of the killer's attacks and bravely tells his story." - Jeff's Original Story

Jeff's Technique and Strategy for Murder

Step 1 - Stalking

When it comes to most of his victims, Jeff needs the right timing to ensure most of his victims are asleep as shown with the boy in his original story. As asleep he'd take advantage of the hot and humid weather as the windows have a higher probability to be up to cool down from the weather. This requires a lot of stalking due to knowing the right timing to strike for Jeff. This applies when he would sometimes hide in places where his victims wouldn't notice at immediate glances. Such as hiding in his victims blindspots such as the curtains as shown in the original stories. Afterwards, he'd use his knife he always kept to himself while eventually targeting the shown victim. In the story, he was able to adapt to scenarios if his victims or people around them actually fought back as well as being able to evacuate houses he's unfamiliar with.

Step 2 - Killing

For his killing methods, he often either uses the method of slashing and stabbing. Doing this would increase the chances of his victims bleeding out in case he can't finish the job immediately. He's able to adapt in scenarios with a few examples: first he uses a tactic of fear factor to lower the guards of his victims and as well as possibly preventing them from thinking more rationally as well. He even went as far as mutilating his own face to form a fake cut smile to further terrify his victims. This is proven in the Homicidal Liu story where once encountering his brother, he would be terrified of what his brother had become as a monster and would even let his guard down which gave Jeff an opportunity he would need. This also applies to his incident against his target of the young boy who told the story of his encounter against Jeff. After his victims would drop their guards down he'd quickly get to work in mutilating each target/victim he encounters.

Step 3 - Post murder

Usually after his murders, it's shown in newspaper headings that he'd successfully have gotten away each time. It's been shown he's able to both infiltrate and evacuate houses even if the location he's in isn't somewhere he's used to. He was able to evacuate a scenario where both a father and his son are chasing after him while admitting he successfully fled away.

How Jeff's Main Fear Inducement Works

When taking account of Jeff's actions and feats, a majority of them are associated with the manipulation sub category of fear inducement, and because of this, it should be important to know how exactly it works and what his main tactics are in order to induce said fear.

When fear is evoked, it's usually when there's a psychological response where your brain senses danger and believes you should stay alert based on the context. For Jeff, he emits this idea by using his uncanny aura around the vicinity of his victims' homes as his starting approach. For Jeff, it helps create the idea of being at home as you start to emit the idea that something feels off, but can seem to quite grasp it at first hand, causing some alertness to cause uncomfortable feelings but not enough to cause full alertness and have a let down guard. For validity, this exact explanation was proven at the very start of Jeff's original story, first, he quickly infiltrated the window through the boys bedroom as he successfully gets in without detection, but enough of his aura lingers on the boy as when he wakes up from his nightmare, despite not detecting Jeff at first, he gets the idea that something feels off with the atmosphere Jeff had set up. Doing this helps build up suspense and paranoia. And possibly builds up thoughts and asking to yourself with possible doubts and negative possibilities. "What's going on? Is someone there?" The anxiety and fear of the possibilities is something that's common in people as some people when they don't immediately encounter the threat sometimes pile up negative thoughts to make situation possibilities worse than they actually are. This idea is what Jeff would potentially build up against the boy considering he had not immediately rushed against the boy as he let him figure out his appearance beforehand as he hid in the curtains of the room, a blindspot for the boy at first glance, which was proven when the boy even approached nearby the curtains to shut the windows. And once the boy had finally found Jeff's peeking face from the distance, the other fear factor of Jeff would come in: his infamous appearance.

> "I had a bad dream and I woke up in the middle of the night," says the boy, "I saw that for some reason the window was open, even though I remember it being closed before I went to bed. I got up and shut it once more. Afterwards, I simply crawled under my covers and tried to get back to sleep. That's when I had a strange feeling, like someone was watching me. I looked up, and nearly jumped out of my bed. There, in the little ray of light, illuminating from between my curtains, were a pair of two eyes. These weren't regular eyes; they were dark,

Ever since Jeff had the incident where his face would have burnt off from the bleach. He had found potential within the new appearance of his rather than feeling displeased or sorrowful. During his strategy of slaughtering his family, he purposely mutilated a fake smile on his face as well as cutting off his eyelids. This helps create the aura of an uncanny and uncomfortable appearance in the perspective of others. As well as it creates an unfamiliarity of the appearance as fear's main cause is through the perception of danger as the uncanny aura combined with the unfamiliar appearance Jeff put on himself gives the sense of danger aside from being a serial killer.

For a last addition, considering Jeff had done a successful job in keeping his identity concealed from both the police and regular citizens, it's applying the fear many have of the unknown. When people are unfamiliar with something, the response against danger is higher due to uncertainty or lack of knowledge and not knowing if the situation is safe due to said lack of information. Stimulating a higher chance of the fight or flight response. This is simulated by Jeff by using his concealment in order to hide any history from the police and others which helps the execution of inducing fear by a higher amount.

Nina and Jeff the Killer

Aside from Homicidal Liu and Jane the Killer, there was one last main known serial killer that was well influenced by Jeff. This section of the Jeff doc follows this story of Nina the Killer. The serial killer who was a big fan of JTK. This character would be the opposite to Jane the Killer as Nina adores Jeff as her Idol.

A young girl named Nina was a huge fan of the story of Jeff, as she appears to have an interest in uncanny and morbid topics such as serial killing. His influence on her appeared to be extreme as Nina was fangirling over Jeff during high school. Her brother Chris tried his best not to mind this obsession as they even were able to get along quite well together. Nina was described to adore every quality about Jeff as well as knowing the events that happened to him in the Original Story (Influence + Charisma)

One day, similar to Jeff's situation, a group of bullies would approach Nina and Chris. This incident almost led to Nina possibly killing the group of said bullies. Despite Chris being disturbed by this incident, Nina would then explore her violent nature which she was able to find links with her personality similar to her idol Jeff. As their sadistic side sparked once a dangerous situation with violence was involved against a group of bullies which was similar to both of them. On the next day of Nina's school, she had received a letter from an unknown source about how they were aware of Nina's assault but were surprisingly impressed by her skills rather than a negative emotion towards the act.(Charisma)

Later in the story, Nina would eventually mutilate her face similar to Jeff in tribute to her idol. As well as stealing the infamous quote of 'Go to Sleep' as stated by Jeff. (Influence)

Additional Feat:

The stories linked to Jeff have proved that his reign as a serial killer has impacted others to follow a similar path to him, being proven for Jane, Liu, and Nina. All being influenced because of his actions indirectly, as proven to also be successful. The reasons why would vary, for Liu and Jane, their induced trauma of encountering Jeff has influenced uncanny decisions whereas Nina adored Jeff and his origins. This requires a lot of insanity induced due to the irregular behavior these main 3 have done due to Jeff's reign as a whole. (Mass Manipulation + Indirect Manipulation + Insanity Inducement + Influence)

Theory Section

(Note: This belongs in the theory section due to further explaining the context of Jeff and parts of his original story. We chose this to represent the theory portion due to having a firm reputation of explaining other creepypasta's)

(Time Stamps will be provided - Only covering feats that were not already directly covered in the previous sections.)

(0:05) At the start of the explanation, it starts narrating a story of one Jeff's methods of killing his prey/victims. This method was explained to happen more on hot and humid days due to windows likely to be open to cool the rooms down at night. Jeff's victims would eventually wake up as they would often meet a pair of strange eyes as his victims commonly react by their hearts pounding. Jeff would then pull himself from the windows, taking advantage of the window being unlocked. Shortly after, his victims would disappear without any trace. Most of his victims corpse's would only end up as a list of Jeff's finished victims while the family of each victim would eventually give up hope of finding them again. (Methods + Fear Inducement + Aura + Concealment + Demoralization)

During crime scenes such as this, a regular successful murder for Jeff would result in a victim's corpse leaving without a trace or a single drop of blood. This is also to note that Jeff uses a method of wielding a knife which is highly likely for spilling said blood. Showing how much Jeff would successfully leave any evidence to further help his escape against legal action and police.

(1:32) Usually for others, especially for young kids/teens due to moving to a new neighborhood and abandoning a few friends you've made in the past town, the hardships of moving to another town, but for Jeff and his brother Liu, they seemed quite fine with the situation as they were able to make home quite quickly. (Environmental Adaptability)

(5:20) After the previously explained original confrontation with the group of bullies and how he defended his brother Liu against him. That one experience would already allow Jeff to identify more of his personality, which in this case is that his satisfaction partially runs on sadistic methods and violence. (Emotional Understanding + Intrapersonal Intelligence + Self Awareness) - Note: This would double as an anti feat for empathy.

(5:50) Eventually, the police would eventually interrogate Jeff and his household about the assault against those 3 bullies. As one of the police officers interrogated Jeff. Rather than losing composure during the interrogation. He was able to make an argument to pin the fault and blame on the bullies as he was simply trying to protect his brother during the confrontation. As they were just minding their business waiting for the bus. The police would explain the damage Jeff had caused as Jeff knew he couldn't smile despite his sadistic tendencies as he was able to avoid doing so in front of the officer. (Emotional Manipulation + Playing the Victim + Misdirection + Scapegoating + Persuasion + Logical Thinking + Emotional Management + Composure)

(6:23) Further on, Jeff continues to go on with the story of how he was only trying to protect his brother as the bullies were the ones who instigated the incident, even the one who was wielding the knife in the first place, which was still true to an extent. As suddenly, Liu rushed down with a knife in his hands, taking the blame for Jeff as he ordered the police to arrest him instead as the cops cuffed him as Liu convinced the cops he was the true culprit. As time passes, despite Jeff usually being a sadistic described person, he still felt remorse for Liu about taking the blame for the assault. However his mother one day came into Jeff's room as if nothing had happened as she reminded Jeff about the birthday party they were invited to. Jeffy was quite upset over the fact that it seemed like his mother had completely forgotten about one of her sons spending jail time. But his mother responds that they shouldn't let that stop them from finding new opportunities to have a better experience in the future. Despite Jeff still being upset, he decided to go along. At the party he noticed that all the adults including his parents were wearing fancy attire and clothing, he made a conclusion to himself that they were likely dressing this way to give a good impression to the other adults at the party. (Playing the Victim + FRI + Abductive Reasoning)

(8:25) After being invited to hang out in the backyard with the other kids, he was able to get along just fine with the others until the same bullies from the incident appeared again, looking for revenge on Jeff. As one of the bullies gets ready to face Jeff again first, Jeff decides to aim his punch at Randy's recently broken nose that he once broke in the first encounter due to a lack of fully developed heal. From the first punch already, the other kids would run around scattering in fear as the small kid in the group froze as he dropped his teddy bear, and even a heavy indication that the boy pissed himself in fear. (Tactics + Fear Inducement)

(9:10) As the fight goes on, Jeff would eventually snap due to the anger and hatred against the bullies he had for being the core reason his brother ended up in the JDC (Juvenile Detention Center). Fueling him to gain the motivation to once again fight back as he then punches Randy straight into the heart. This one punch caused an extremely shocked look on Randy's face, as it's been described in Randy's perspective as if he just saw the devil himself before his final seconds of death. The 2 bullies then proceeded to still face Jeff as they still tried to attempt to shoot Jeff with the gun still in their arsenal, who quickly ran to the bathroom to buy time temporarily, using a towel rack as a weapon due to not having an actual one in hand as he uses the brute force of the rack against the 2 bullies. (Emotional Engagement + Fear Inducement + Improvisation + Quick Thinking)

(13:25) After being taken home from the hospital after the infamous incident of his face being burnt alive. Jeff's mom would walk into Jeff cutting his eyelids and forming a knife cut smile around his mouth to her complete surprise. Which completely petrified his mother, unable to even move for a solid time in fear of what her son has become. As she was afraid to even have him around any longer despite Jeff being her own son that she cared dearly about originally (Physical Adaptability + Unpredictability + Fear Inducement)

Video Two -

(This video follows from the same channel/media as this branches from the explanation of how homicidal Liu was born. Which was pre explain that Jeff was an obvious reason for the birth of the new serial killer.)

Link to theory two

(0:35) As explained before, Liu woke up from the strange aura alone as he then hears footsteps across the hallway since he's been released from the JDC and was back home with his family. As well as being drenched in sweat, his teeth were rapidly biting his teeth together as he saw the figure slowly approach him. Though he could still slightly recognize the figure being his brother Jeff. But despite still recognizing him, he was still in fear despite being in front of someone he knows deeply and supposedly trusts as siblings for so long. (Fear Inducement + Aura)

Jeff's Family Murder Strategy

This following section still follows theory two, as this will go over a specific part that will take a fair amount of steps to explain depth. Although this section was mentioned in the non theory side of Jeff previously, this goes more in depth of Jeff's execution and step by step procedure due to the video going more in detail.

Goal and Motive: (includes prior information and the context)

In the prequel to the birth of Liu's tragic turn, Jeff's thirst for murder has grown stronger than ever. His next targets would eventually be his family as established prior. Prior to the bleach incident, he observed as said before that he was able to identify his personality as one being driven by violence and sadism, which eventually means Jeff was aware that he needed more to satisfy his overall self. The best route for this goal to do so was to take advantage of a family that may care so much that it would hurt to do anything against their brother/son. This also explains the factor regarding Jeff's brutal and excessive violence to a lot of his victims in order to fuel his satisfaction.

Pre Attempt:

In terms of plotting a murder in general, the huge thing you'd need to take a look at is the consequences of failure. There are a varying amount of sentences and punishments for homicide if caught either in the act or post attempt.

(Estimated sentences)

- First Degree Murder: Varies from 20 years-life sentence without parole.
- Second Degree Murder: 15 years-life in prison
- Third Degree Murder: 10-15 years
- Attempted Murder: 5-15 years

In general, murder gives an opportunity of experiencing a live or die scenario, indicating a high risk situation which needs to be executed perfectly or at least close to it for Jeff. For Jeff's case, if he were to hypothetically be caught, his crime would be deemed as first degree murder due to an intentional and executed act of murder with a malice intention over a grand victim count of 3 corpses. Meaning a very high risk of a life sentence if his strategy to take his family's life fails whether it's being caught in the act or afterwards. In order to avoid failure, Jeff needs to execute his murder quite effectively as he needs to keep a lot of composure for high stakes of either being successfully undetected or being caught and serving a lifetime sentence. This goes to prove how the situations Jeff needs to face for his goal and motives revolve high stakes resulting in very stressful situations which adds to extreme levels of composure in order to continue taking the risk of a life sentence for his goals.

Jeff's Resources:

- Traditional Knife
- Knowledge about his family and home (the location of the future homicide).

Jeff's Limitations:

- Legal limitations as this strategy has to be concealed as possible.
- Limited Utility.
- Jeff has very little room for error, as any piece of forensic evidence means a high probability of a life sentence.

The Situation:

As formerly explained the three targets consist of: Both of Jeff's parents and Liu. (Though, specifically Liu was the prime objective for Jeff, this was because Liu is a target that is likely harder for him to fight back against Jeff, considering Jeff is Liu's only brother that was close with him for several years.) With the motive of fueling his satisfaction and taste for sadism and violence for stimulation. The location of the murder consists inside the house of Jeff's family as his equipment consists of a knife similar to most of his homicides. The tactics Jeff will use for this attempt rely on a couple known and given factors: Jeff's fear factor, his family's empathy, and the familiarity he has in the house considering has lived there ever since their move in. These factors were important as Jeff used these factors very effectively in the further parts of the explanations.

The execution:

Earlier, before targeting Liu, Jeff had first encountered both of his parents. The first tactic out of the three Jeff had used was his fear factor. The entire strategy officially started ever since Jeff's mother found Jeff mutilating his face with his knife. By both forming his face into the fake uncanny smile while cutting off both his eyelids to raise the eerie aura, as this would cause wise shock to Jeff's mom to consider that one of her children had become into a horrifying monster with a sadistic dark turn. Which Jeff used widely to his advantage which this action by Jeff slowed down the reaction and quickness to act of his mother to defend herself against her mutilated son. At first glance, it seems as if Jeff out of the 3 things mentioned had only used the fear factor. However he had also used his mothers' remaining care and hope for her son as a combination. The mother would feel both freeze in fear and the traumatizing transformation of the son she once loved. As she could finally move, her first instinct was to immediately run to her room and warn her husband about the incoming threat. They try to quickly devise a plan to try and shoot their rogue son to defend themselves, however due to Jeff slowing down his mother's reaction due to her fear and mixed feelings from earlier, this allowed Jeff to evade being killed or brutally injured by any bullets fired. He was able to avoid being shaken up by the fact that his own parents were attempting to kill him despite the context as his thirst for murder overpowered the moment.

He then countered the retaliation of his parents as he approached and returned the same goal of murder, while gutting both of his parents as their corpses just laid right on the bed.

Moving to Liu:

After successfully taking care of both his parents, his final target for this night was his brother Liu. Instead of rushing to Liu's room, he would rather take his time, this further builds the suspension of Liu who woke up due to the uncomfortable aura he felt while laying down in his bed. This is likely another way to bring the illusion of thought of the endless dread of waiting for the suspense of a climax. Which in this case was waiting for a mysterious figure to appear in Liu's perspective. The buildup was proven to be successful as stated previously that he was drenched in sweat, his heart was beating and that his teeth were clamping together in nervousness. Jeff eventually made his way to Liu's room as he could barely recognize Jeff but still enough to distinguish him. As Jeff leaps onto the bed he plunges the knife right at Liu who winced in immense pain. Liu tried to fight back, which was ultimately hopeless as Jeff used his overwhelming advantage in strength to lock him in one place. Eventually, Liu would try to find anything to defend himself within his vicinity as with sheer desperation, he grabbed a rosary to try and keep Jeff in a chokehold. However, Jeff escapes the chokehold as he repeatedly then stabs Liu in a brutal manner to as well overwhelm Liu with pain to prevent Liu from thinking of another defensive move. Liu, with his final attempt through sheer willpower, kicks Jeff in the gut as their confrontation resumes.

Jeff's post influence: The police would eventually drive to the crime scene after a report by a couple neighbors. But as Jeff heard the police sirens and the flashing blue and red lights, he knew that was his cue to get away as he successfully led without a trace of his true identity, he knew Liu would eventually bleed out of a lack of blood was present for Liu with the amount he was already losing, while taking critical evidence with him which included his knife as an example to make it harder for the police to collect evidence such as for forensics.

As Liu was urgently taken to the hospital in hopes for the paramedics to save him in time, his mind could only be filled with the thoughts of betrayal of Jeff, his own brother. When Liu woke up in the hospital bed, one of the nurses came to him to inform him about the events during when he was unconscious. While he woke up, he felt different mentally, as if another person was trapped in his brain, described in the video as someone trying to take control of his actions as he felt the urge of screaming away from sanity. The nurse would head to Liu and inform him that he had been in a coma for several weeks, however what the next words the nurse would say would offend Liu as she bad mouthed Jeff's appearance as well as his overall aura by describing him close to the 'devil' himself.

Despite being a serial killer that had just murdered both of their parents, Jeff's influence on Liu was so strong that despite everything that had just happened, he refused to rat out Jeff and even defend him from the offensive comments that the nurse had said about him. This indirectly caused Liu to keep his mouth shut about Jeff and any leads about him as well as brutally attacking the nurse in anger. Which slowly caused Liu to become a serial killer, just like his brother Jeff.

Conclusion:

Jeff was able to result in success in murdering both of his parents using the methods of preventing his mother from reacting faster, and despite Liu being saved just in a matter of time, he was able to use Liu's care and compassion as a brother for him to prevent Liu from ratting him out and as well as attacking the people that opposed him as Jeff the Killer. Ever since then, it's been reported by the police force that the mystery killer has been going across the country to pick out the next victims he has in store for his desire of murder and violence. It's been a constant search for the legal team to catch Jeff's reign and spree of murders while having trouble even finding his clear motive.

Additional Information

When it comes to the final additions, an important topic to bring up is the intelligence and mental strength of his victims. The best example and primary for this argument is to mention the attributes of Jeff's brother: Liu.

When it comes to Liu, his mental strength is the biggest highlight to mention in regards to the start of this argument. During the confrontation between Jeff, Liu, and the group of bullies outside. Liu was aware that one of the bullies had a knife when threatening both of them. But despite this, Liu was brave enough to stick up for himself and not back down despite being threatened with violence, this adds up with the 2 other bullies with the ringleader to outnumber Liu and Jeff. Another big example of Liu's mental strength was the bravery he had shown to go to the JDC juvie, despite what may have been in store for Liu at a younger age.

The reason why mental strength is much more valuable to mention is because Jeff's tactics involve a lot of fear inducement on his prey. And the main components in being against this is through composure and emotional management. The main thing to consider is that despite Liu's impressive examples of his composure with the police and the group of bullies with equipped weapons, Jeff was still able to pierce through Liu's mental strength and still produce fear and anxiety against Liu regardless of how good his emotional suppression and intrapersonal management was.

I appreciate the support I've had in the SCD community and this short segment is a quick appreciation to those just mentioned. I truly am thankful for this.
