For context, chaldea has just traveled to lostbelt 2 ancient Scandinavia/norse mythology, were they're gonna fight against and see historic figures from norse mythology to try and save the timeline from these pruned and incorrect timelines like lostbelt 2, so naturally it would be logical to deduce for anyone that they're just gonna strictly fight hero's mentioned in Scandinavia, narrowing down the list of people that made deducing Sigurd's true identity a breeze for sherlock

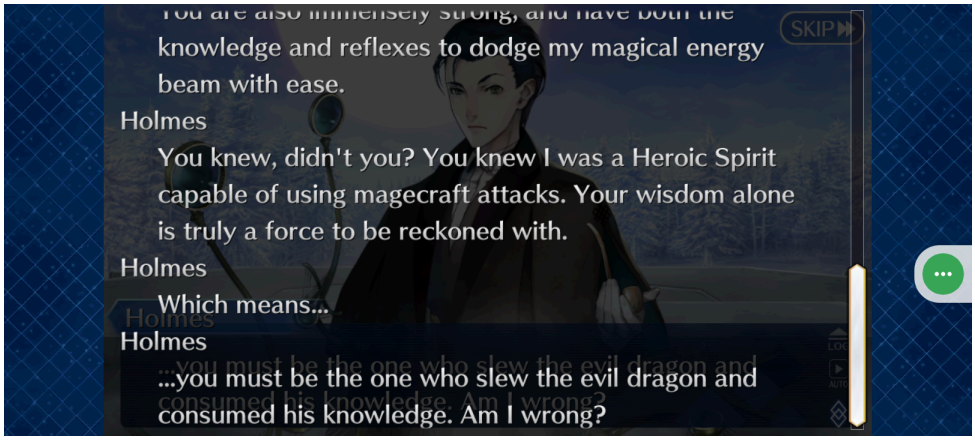

Premise of this doc: Chaldea meets a demonic swordsman who was just able to throw there ship the shadow border effortlessly with his bare hands, Sherlock's objective here was just primarily trying to survive and figure out who he and his friends are fighting against

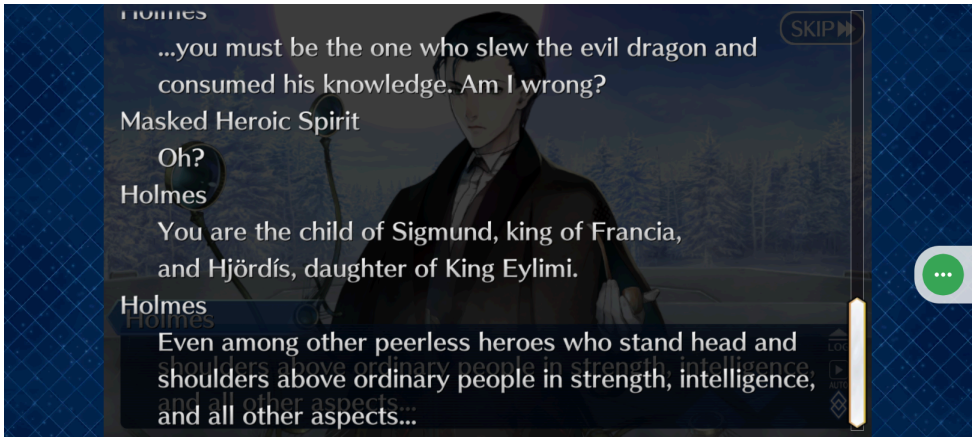

.
Holmes was able to logically deduce and make some inferences that the guy they were fighting was sigurd based on just the way he was dodging Holmes and his power based on a few abductions

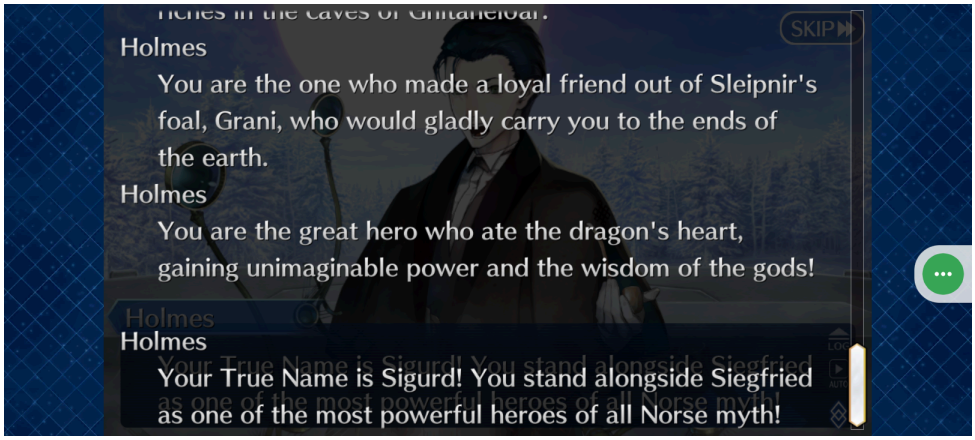

1.his swordsmanship must make him one of the best in norse mythology via his skill level rivalling mushashi miyamoto
2.hes able to dodge Sherlock's magical beams with his knowledge alone not skill
3.he was able to tell that he was servant and that he knows magecraft and that he was gonna fire at him beams before the fight even started
4.he has vast amount of knowledge, which fits the description of king sigurd who gained massive knowledge and power after taking down fafnir and bathing in his blood and eating his heart
5.the guy that we're fighting must be king sigurd

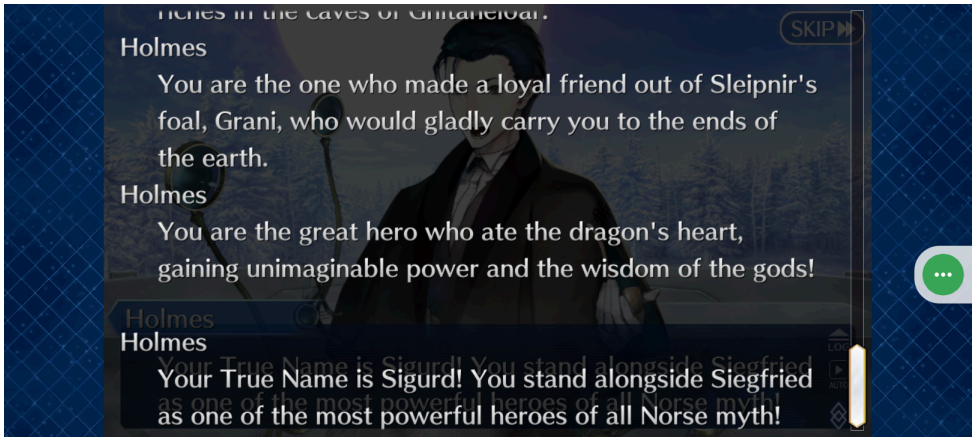

Based on these inferences Holmes was able to tell exactly who we're fighting

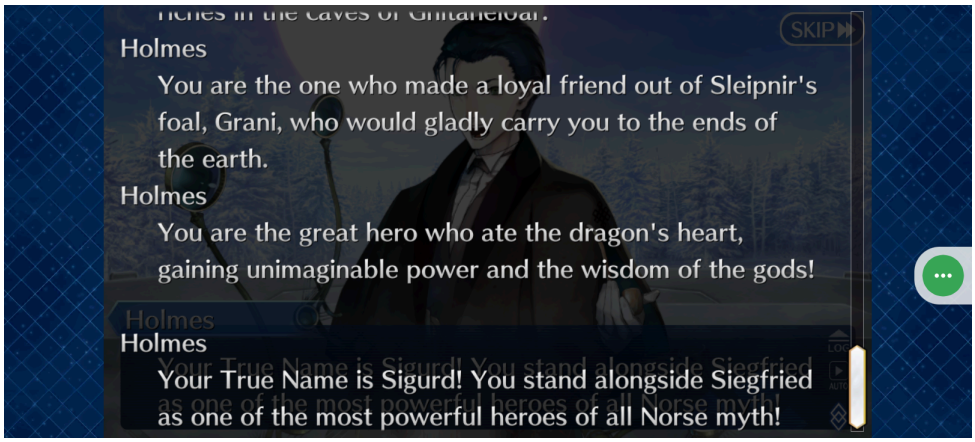

You are also immensely strong, and have both the knowledge and reflexes to dodge my magical energy beam with ease.
Holmes
You knew, didn't you? You knew I was a Heroic Spirit capable of using magecraft attacks. Your wisdom alone is truly a force to be reckoned with.
Holmes
Which means...
Holmes
...you must be the one who slew the evil dragon and consumed his knowledge. Am I wrong?
SKIP

...you must be the one who slew the evil dragon and consumed his knowledge. Am I wrong?
Masked Heroic Spirit
Oh?
Holmes
You are the child of Sigmund, king of Francia, and Hjördís, daughter of King Eylimi.
Holmes
Even among other peerless heroes who stand head and shoulders above ordinary people in strength, intelligence, and all other aspects...
SKIP

(Emotional understating, emotional perception, overall insight, cold reading, see through people, overall EQ, abduction reasoning, overall logical reasoning)