The arguments come from this scan.

Kyoka Suigetsu the moment it was in shikai form.

"Then again, I suppose that cannot be all you are planning."

Looking at their surroundings, Tokinada imperceptibly braced himself.

I see. So you plan on using him as a detector.

The Soul Reaper Hisagi's weapon was a type that could attack from a distance. They likely planned to have Hisagi attack Tokinada with it so Kyoraku and the others could use the position of Tokinada's voice and spiritual pressure to confirm they were attacking not an ally mistaken for an enemy, but Tokinada himself.

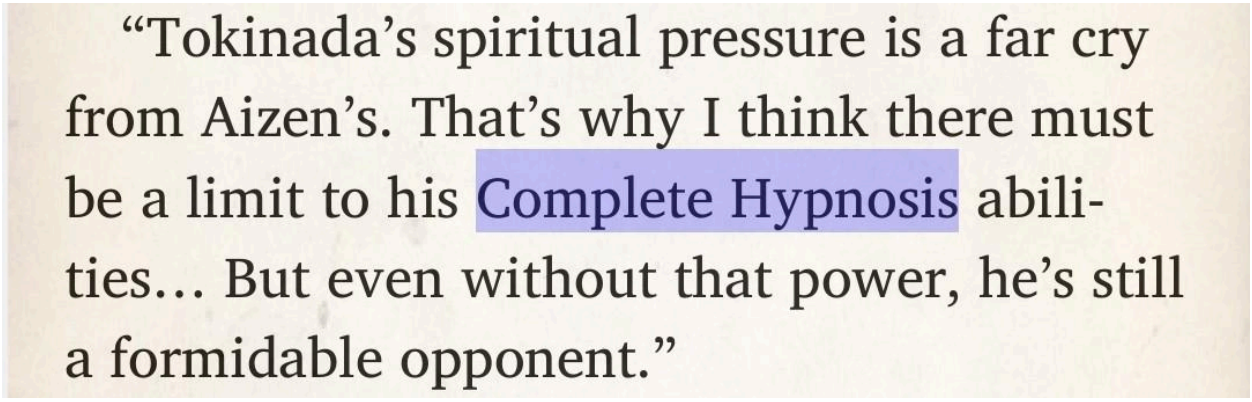

How naive. In that case, I can overwrite his voice, form, and the trajectory of his attacks using Complete Hypnosis.

However, in order to fully reproduce those aspects of Hisagi, he needed some time to observe Hisagi's voice and the way the Soul Reaper attacked. If any of it were even slightly off, Kyoraku would realize that and react. Tokinada had an absolute advantage because of Complete Hypnosis, but he did not let his guard down.

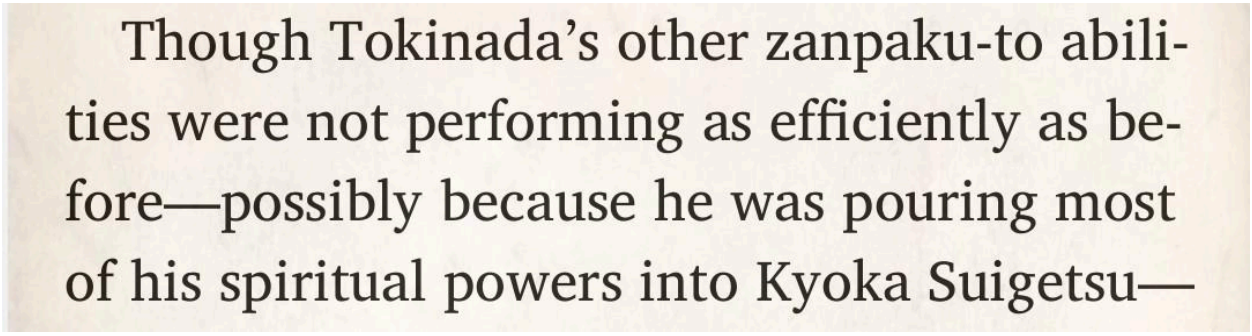

Though he would not let his guard down, he also determined he would not kill them immediately, but rather torment them to death. At first glance, his behavior seemed contradictory, but, exactly as expected, Tokinada did not relax his attention as he devoted his entire body and soul to the amusing task of

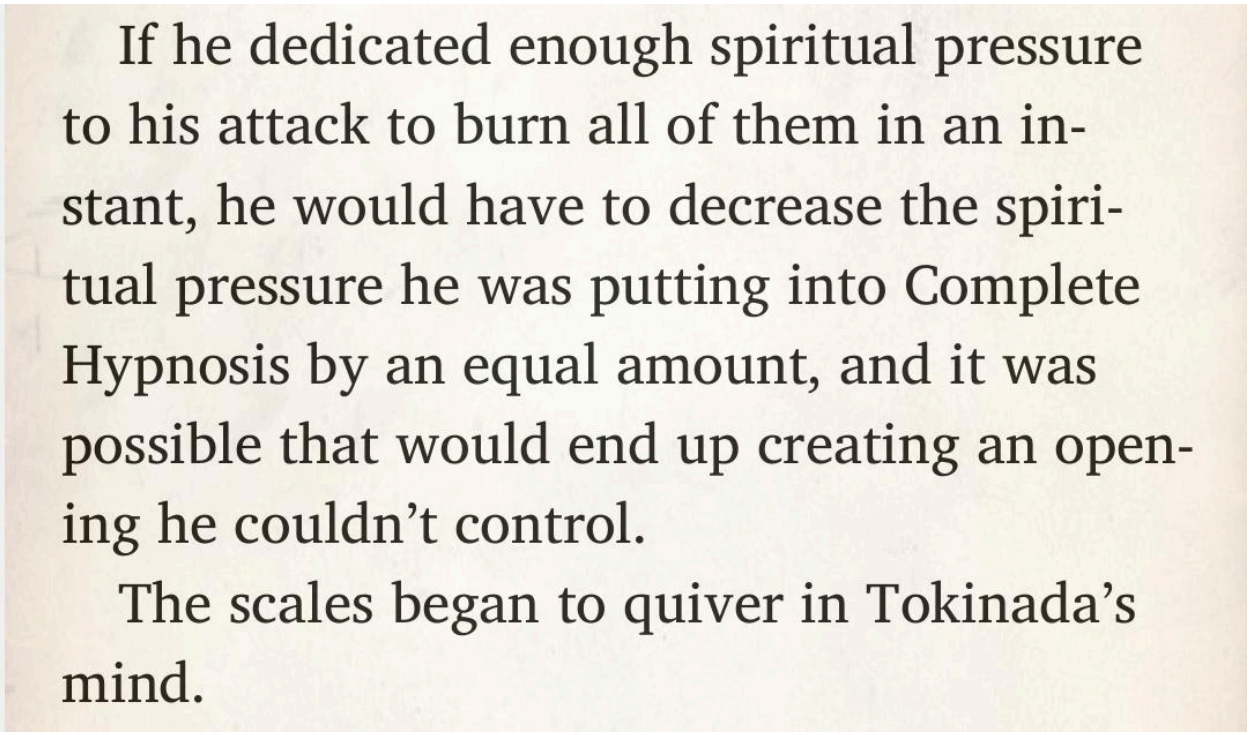

This scan comes from Bleach: Can't fear your own world Volume 3 chapter 20 of the Novel. But there is a problem with this scan. This isn't even Aizen, this is Tokinada as shown in the scan who is far weaker than Aizen.

Kyoka suigetsu or just any powerfull abilities in bleach require a lot of spiritual powers to use and when you don't have that much spiritual power that scan is basically explains side effect/limit of him not having enough power to use kyoka suigetsu to it's fullest.

So this is more of a WIS feat rather than SCD. This scan also supports the fact that the more spiritual power you have the more easier it will be to use abilities to full potential since there is nothing that is limiting you. To go down further we even get the example from Tokinada himself.

Tokinada other abilities efficiency decrease due to him putting most of his power on kyoka suigetsu and his efficiency of kyoka suigetsu would decrease if he used other ability. Which supports the notion of the pervious scan.

With this we can safely concluded that

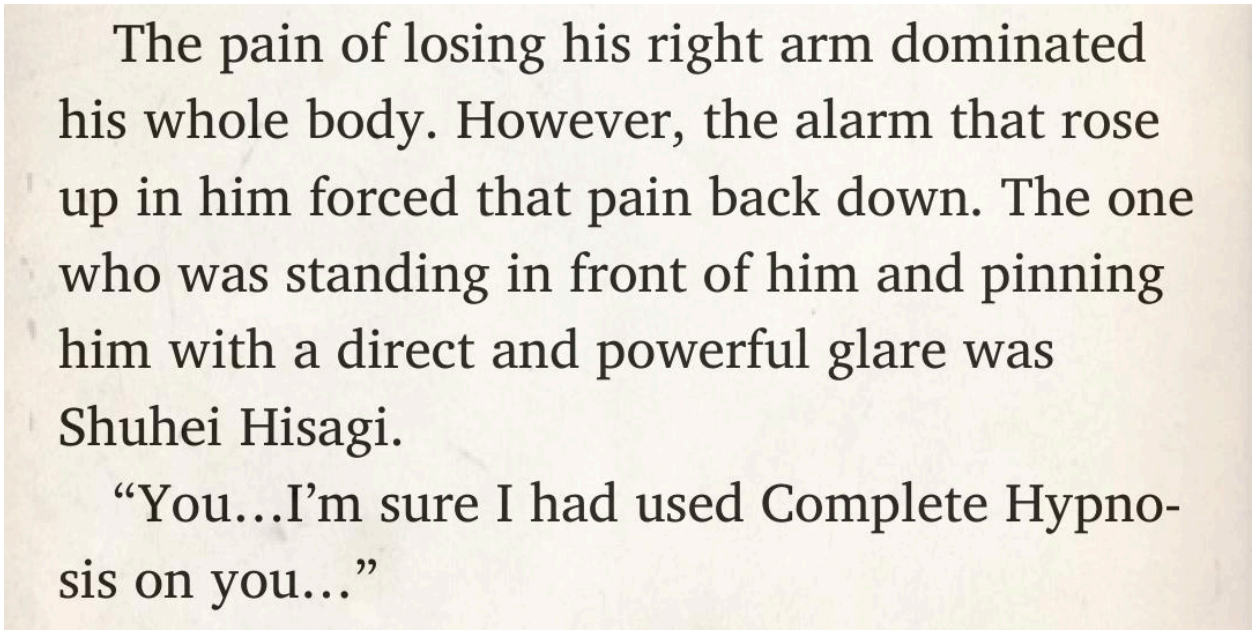

Power = Efficiency of the Abilities

So it doesn't make any sense for someone powerful as Aizen to only be as efficient as Tokinada at using kyoka suigetsu.

If kyoka suigetsu requirement is that user have to visualise the illusion themself no matter what then the efficiency of the ability depends on the user Cognition rather than having more spiritual power which wouldn't make sense as implied in the above scans.

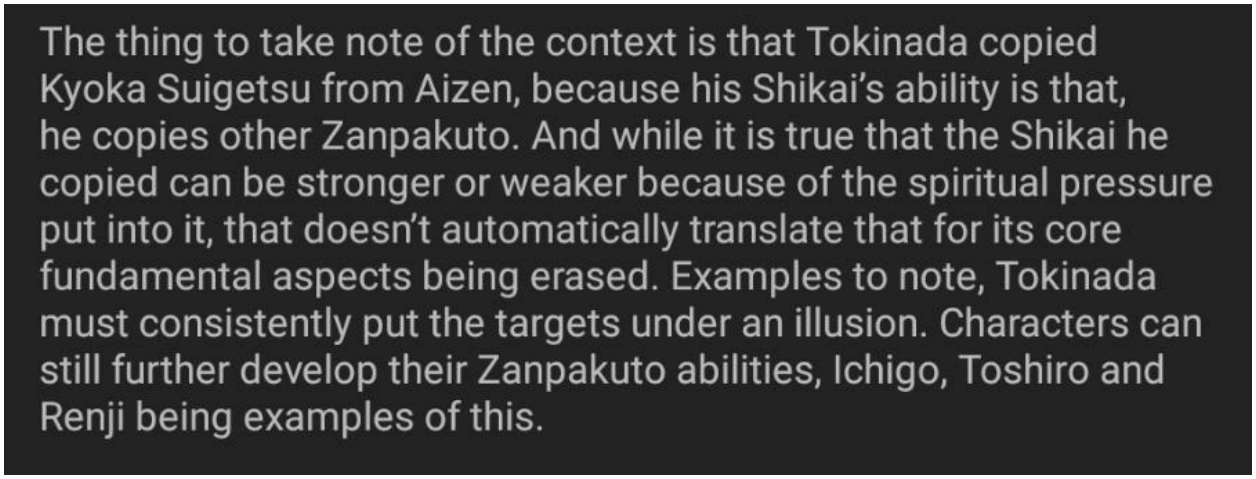

In conclusion Aizen Kyoka suigetsu FSIQ is just hax not a feat of intelligence.

About tokinada needing to observe the voice and movements of the soul reapers to create illusion, how does that even equate to him needing to visualise illusions, it's more of a feat of observation.

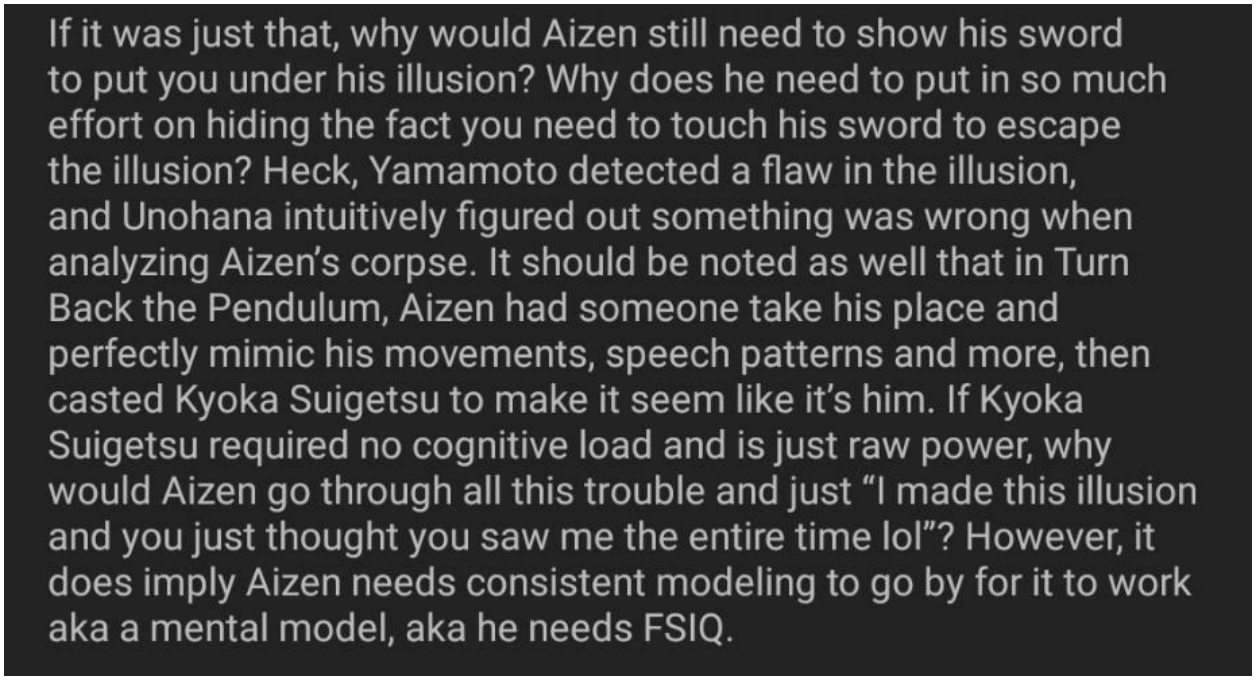

"You…I'm sure I had used Complete Hypnosis on you…"

This is a past tense sentence implying that once you are under kyoka suigetsu the user doesn't need to visualise illusion. Plus this bum Tokinada doesn't even know if he had hisagi under the illusion or not and you are telling me that his brain is visualising illusions to manipulate the senses of the people under kyoka suigetsu?

What are you talking about fundamental aspect erase? This works only on the assumption that visualising illusions is the fundamental aspect of kyoka suigetsu to begin with which I disproved in my previous points to not be the case.

Because that's the process to use kyoka suigetsu and put people under illusion like how does him showing his sword even equate to FSIQ?

Why would he not hide the weakness of the ability? and again like how him hiding his weakness of the abilities equates to FSIQ?

Like what are you trying to say which of my points you are debunking?

?He needs to use a huge amount of spiritual power to use the ability at 1st place. Of course he needs to constantly monitor his spiritual power on a regular basis. Once again doesn't equate to visualizing illusions or him visualising illusion constantly.

But you forget to mention the fact that the visualisation Ganju talks about isn't a necessary factor for the ability to work, it's a trick ganju came up with. So no this doesn't equate to aizen.

Lastly, the way it debunks the statement is just the surface aspect of it, sure it says he needs to observe it, but why would he need to perfectly reproduce those aspects of the illusions happen to his will? What other part would govern those aspects other then at the very least a mental model? If he is using pattern recognition skills, why wouldn't he need the mental model? Or as defined in FSIQ, visual spatial index+working memory.

The statement implies that he needs good FSIQ to make a mental model of what he wants to replicate for the illusion, and the same would go for Aizen as a result, as seen by how both he and Tokinada need to maintain coherence of the illusion aka a cognitive load.

He needs pattern recognition for kyoka suigetsu to understand it and create an illusion that's believable.

In conclusion: I have no idea what Scary examination is talking about as most of his points aren't even related to the points I made in my previous point. Nor does it even relate to Aizen kyoka suigetsu FSIQ claims. So if you are gonna reply to this I suggest you to be more clear like which points you are debunking of mine and how does your points debunk mine and how does it relates to aizen Kyoka suigetsu FSIQ claims.