MOON'S PLANNING
[TYRANT FALL PLAN]

TikTok:@ctwmoonlsolokoji
Telegram channel: https://t.me/ctwlsolo

Context: The beginning of this plan starts when Moon meets Nambong while Moon is a college student and Nambong is a teen. Nambong had approached him due to the fact they used the same library, Frost had grown interested in Moon due to the fact he frequently found that name in the books he chose. To the point he even looked for Moons name in the books he read.
Nambong and Moon sit on a bench and play a little game of analyzing people they see walking past. [Look further up under the psychologist in the blackroom feats for reference] What is important is that although Moon consistently beat Frost in this game he found Frost to be talented at which point he cooked up this diabolical scheme.

Step one: To obtain a university degree, he decided to ask Professor Chun (Nam-bong's adoptive father) if he could write a paper on the number of suicides among local homeless people, knowing that the answer would be negative. Then he asked a suspicious question, which Chun dismissed. He then made sure Chun noticed him talking to local homeless people. In the end, he managed to raise the suicide rate enough to write his thesis. You'll see how this works later.

Step two: He and Frost reunite. At this point, Frost is very tired of Moon's suspicious behaviour, as he has been following Moon's interests all these years, and his current behaviour does not fit into this pattern. He notices a girl walking by in a large crowd and says to Frost, "Guess what. You're a master at this sort of thing." This sends Frost down an uncertain path. Eventually, Frost manages to identify who it is, but the girl manages to jump off the building. This prompts Nambon to perform a psychological autopsy on the deceased girl.

Step Three: Son Son (not to be confused with Song Yoon) takes Jeong-hyun to therapy. Everything is going well, but oh no... look who's here. Moon. Moon tries to make Jeong-hyun commit suicide, which will have disastrous consequences for Son in the future.

Moon's prediction about these consequences

1. Son has already appeared on television, and the suicide of her previous patient, even if there were no legal consequences for her, would create the impression in society that she was distracted from her work and her mind was a little clouded by the pleasures of fame.

It wasn't said directly, but he WAS the one who planned it, and it was a DIRECT CONSEQUENCE of his actions, so I think it's quite logical to assume that he expected it.

However, Moon expected Frost to resign from his position as professor instead of Son because of the mini-psychoanalysis, which I can explain in more detail if you ask. This is the first tactic he uses to force Frost into hiding. He made sure that the negative reaction was obvious by bringing Son out in public beforehand. Moon decides to become a co-host on a television show. He adapts quickly and is very charming as a host, immediately asking Son what she thinks is the biggest problem facing young Koreans. He even convinces her to participate in the show, saying that he needs her. Now that her role as Nambong's replacement is in the public eye, he can be sure that the negative reaction to her failure will have a greater effect. He also somehow vaguely anticipates the actions of a specific patient. I suppose he seemed to feign surprise when he heard the news about Son's persecution. I suppose he was just basing his opinion on probability. If he understood and was able to express Son's opinion on the question he had prepared, "The biggest problem facing young Koreans is fear," I reason as follows.

1. If Moon was able to understand Son's emotions, which he later reinforced with amazing feats in EP and EU, then he should have been able to predict her answer. She would probably have talked about paranoia too.

2. If he knew she would answer "fear," it means she most likely had patients suffering from fear/paranoia issues.

3. If this puts her in the spotlight, she talks about fear and paranoia, and it is reasonable to assume that patients who fall under these criteria will think that she is talking about them specifically.

You can believe this part of my interpretation or consider it simply intuition or a premonition. If so, it adds another layer of logic, but if not, the strategy itself remains strong. This is further confirmed by the fact that he contacted Son's office, showing that he has some kind of plan here. I believe this was also done to convince Son by showing her the danger she could be in. He launches into a monologue explaining his plan for alternative education, comparing it to a doctor named Ban Tse, who called his two brothers greater doctors than himself because they prevent illness and stop it from getting worse, while he only saves lives at the very moment of death. He compares this to their patients and offers a solution: why not spread alternative education to prevent these mental illnesses? It is an elegant psychological tactic he used to convince her that he was right, and it really worked; it also allowed him to contact Son's father. He knew what kind of person her father was, and by persuading

Son to go with him to the inauguration, he managed to arouse her father's suspicions to such an extent that the reporter had to check his biographical data. It was part of his plan to get Chun to take the next step, his sarcastic ass even saying: "It's funny how politicians are always afraid."

He also reinforced this manipulation by acting modest and kind towards Hyung-gon, knowing that it would make him even more wary. This also achieved the goal of establishing a connection between him and Hyung-gon.

Then he decided to use her by forcing Jeong-hyun to commit suicide, as explained earlier. This theory is further confirmed when he directly asks her if she can do something to arrange a meeting between him and her father on his inauguration day so that his alternative education plan can flourish.

He pointed to a girl willing to commit a crime, achieving two goals in one fell swoop:

1. He managed to create a backup in case Son refused to use her for other purposes;
2. He further traumatised Frost for his plan.

Also, a small note: although his manipulation to force Jeong-hyun to commit suicide remained off-screen, in the one sentence we saw, he used a small tactic when talking to Jeong-hyun.

1. Introduction: He introduced himself to Jeong-hyun, saying that he liked his music, which was very dear to him. It is dear to him because it is a sign of who he is.

His sister committed suicide for various reasons, but in short, because she was unable to pursue her passions, so for Jeon-hyun, pursuing his own was vital.
2. Indirect inclination towards suicide: He knew that Jeong-hyun was going through a difficult time after his sister's suicide, and from the counselling sessions he had with Son, he understood that he felt guilty for her death because he had simply gone against his dreams for the sake of his parents' wishes. This led to Cheong-hyun becoming more rebellious than Cheong-hyun. He assumed that inviting her to the inauguration on the day Cheong-hyun was attending counselling would weaken his mental state and possibly cause him to commit suicide. This flaw is also not a problem, as the same arc mentions that thoughts are like paths: the more you think a certain way, the easier it is to continue thinking that way, so previous suicide attempts could be a small push in the future and cause an explosion. So even if it failed right now, since he had thought about suicide before, it would be much easier than if he hadn't thought about it at all. The dream managed to calm him down the first time, but he made the situation even worse by taking her away again and explaining his alternative education plan to her, further upsetting Jeong-hyun.
Remember, even if Son changed her mind and decided to focus on psychological help for now, it doesn't mean he failed. He succeeded, but at that moment it didn't matter whether Son was on his side after he forced Hyung-gong to move, because he planned to hurt her anyway by keeping her on his side thanks to his anonymity at that moment. This achieved two goals:
1. To use Son Son to manipulate Nambong.
2. To use this to make her believe in his choice by focusing on prevention rather than counselling.

Step 3.5: So, this isn't exactly a strategic step in his plan, but it's the mini-psychoanalysis I mentioned earlier to understand how he predicted Frost's behaviour and his reaction to it (keep in mind that this is a very brief and not detailed analysis of Nambon, but only the machinations that led to his decision).
Moon's calculations:
1. His tactics to persuade Son proved incredibly effective. So much so that Son even considered resigning from his professorship due to the scandal and supporting Sonhyun's alternative education.

2. Son's "hatred" for Nambon has cooled considerably, and given the cold attitude of other Yongan University staff, it is very likely that she will share her decision with Frost.
3. At this point, he made it clear to Nambon that "I am evil" by simply deciding not to stop the suicide, turning it into a guessing game.
4. At this point, we have no idea how he could have determined this with certainty, but looking at the fifth step, we can say that Nambon, despite his very low capacity for attachment, experienced intense grief when someone dear to him died. Considering this, as already mentioned, the fact that Nambon became more emotional during his time with Songa, he may consider this the best way to protect Song from Moon's clutches, in order to prevent both his personal turmoil and... Whatever Songhyun had in mind, he himself did not suspect that it was all just Moon's calculation.
5. While Jeonghyun was preparing to take action, Song was absent.
Moon could easily have carried out this psychoanalysis, as he had already reached similar heights of emotional understanding and perception. Step four: Here, the first step begins again. There is an abundance of indirect manipulation here. Now, at this moment, the actions of Song and Frost himself emphasised that he had become more emotional because of his connection with Song and certain things that I believe he had to go through because of Moon. At this point in the story, it was established that Moon had a key interaction with Hyung-gon Song, Song's father and a politician. Moon manipulates Hyung-gon into hiring a reporter who will then go to Chun, as he was the professor who taught Moon. Chun tells him that he has nothing to share, but later Chun notices what has happened to the suicide rate. He realises that his student is a murderer and, as a father figure, confronts Moon about it, which, unfortunately, was within Moon's calculations. Then, during a conversation with Chun, his brother/right-hand man gets tangled up in Chun's car brakes. When Chun starts driving back home, he gets into an accident and dies. This causes Nambong to cry for the first time in his life. The private detective then tells Baek that Chun's death was not as accidental as it seems and shares his suspicions about Moon with Frost. Frost confronts Moon at the cathedral (chosen by Song-hyun), where they talk, and Moon messes with Nambong's mind so much that he passes out, hits his head on the seat, and falls into a coma. He also rules out any future chances that

Chun, a genius himself, could mess up his plan. He also timed the discussion of Jeon-hyun's suicide to coincide with the moment when the reporter was supposed to contact Chun and inform him of the connection between Jeon-hyun and Seong-hyun. Now let's recall everything he did to make Chun understand that he was behind this suicide.

1. Fourteen years ago, he wrote an article about recurring suicides among the homeless, which he exaggerated so that Chung would know about it all these years.
2. He made it known to the public that Jeon-hyun was Son Son's patient, which is not usually disclosed.
3. He made sure to connect all the dots by making this reporter behave in this manner.

Additional information: He expected that Jeong would not immediately call the police on Moon, as he is not prone to direct conflict. Jeong himself said that he does not understand fights, interrogations, and blackmail, but he believes that harassing students is an unforgivable mistake. Moon understood that all this meant that Jeong would take more direct action to warn Seong-hyun. (Note: the fact that he passed the background check did not actually reveal any information, as it turned out that he was as straight as an arrow, it only prompted Chun to take action without revealing any information, we learn that Nam-bong's lack of empathy stemmed from the fact that a certain part of his brain responsible for empathy was severely underdeveloped. Theoretically, if Nambong had experienced a traumatic event, such as Chun's death, it would have overstimulated this part of his brain, causing him to experience a wider range of emotions. Nambong himself previously compared his mind after coming out of a coma to a blank canvas of emotions, tainted by the experience of empathising with the fears and negative emotions of others. Moon took this into account when developing his plan. He will experience a wider range of emotions that he is not used to. This would overstimulate him. He will experience a multitude of emotions. In season three, Nambong analyses and compares his mental state with very delayed emotions, such as guilt over the suicide of Son, his first patient.

Conclusion: It is logical that this could have prompted Nambong to flee in order to cope with this flood of emotions, which is what happened. Step Five: As soon as Nambong comes out of his coma, he immediately distances himself from Songi and the others, fearing that they will become targets. This causes him to go into hiding for SEVEN YEARS (when he regains consciousness, he also develops panic disorder). Giving Moon all the time he needs to carry out the rest of his insane plan.

What Moon created:
1. YPA: an organisation that stands for "Young Politicians Association," he uses the facade of a non-profit organisation that engages in political debate among young people. At first, the seminars seem normal and rather boring, but they include classes on participant management. It operates by hiding its true nature and functioning as a fake news factory. It spreads fake news everywhere, for example, on Metube, Messenger, and social networks. To make it sound plausible, he even developed a defence strategy, making it a rule (I think it's just a habit, because he couldn't predict when Changyu would start his investigation) to talk about a certain "tunnel ritual" at YPA — a key word that, if mentioned by a new employee, most likely indicates hidden motives and requires intervention.
The main methods of brainwashing:
This is done under the guise of a so-called "rush," which regular employees are subjected to. This normalises the situation, creating the appearance of normal work. They have to spread fake news while suffering from sleep deprivation and severe stress. This meets all three prerequisites: first, extreme conditions, i.e. the aforementioned sleep deprivation; second, the instilling of belief through the propaganda they themselves spread; and finally, isolation, forcing them to work in cramped cubicles. He also ensured that Yeon-jae Kim felt in control of the situation. He even explains in a monologue that hatred stems from fear. However, most people cannot realise the reason for their self-hatred because they are blinded by anger, and Dr Kim's role in this is to instil this pain in them.
Step Five: As soon as Nambong comes out of his coma, he immediately distances himself from Songi and the others, fearing that they will become targets. This forces him into hiding for SEVEN YEARS (when he regains consciousness, he also develops panic disorder). This gives Moon all the time he needs to carry out the rest of his insane plan.
What Moon created:
1. YPA: An organisation that stands for "Young Politicians Association," it uses the facade of a non-profit organisation that engages in political debate among young people. At first, the seminars seem normal and rather boring, but they include classes on participant management. It operates by hiding its true nature and functioning as a fake news factory. It spreads fake news everywhere, for example, on Metube (YouTube, of course), Messenger, and social networks. To make it sound plausible, he even developed a defence strategy, making it a rule (I think it's just a habit, because he couldn't predict when Changyu would start his investigation) to talk about a certain "tunnel ritual" at YPA — a key word that, if mentioned by a new employee, most likely indicates hidden motives and requires intervention.

The main methods of brainwashing:
This is done under the guise of a so-called "rush," which regular employees are subjected to. This normalises the situation, creating the appearance of normal work. They have to spread fake news while suffering from sleep deprivation and severe stress. This meets all three prerequisites: first, extreme conditions, i.e. the aforementioned sleep deprivation; second, the instilling of belief through the propaganda they themselves spread; and finally, isolation, forcing them to work in cramped cubicles. He also ensured that Yeon-jae Kim felt he was in control of the situation. He even explains in a monologue that hatred stems from fear. However, most people cannot realise the reason for their self-hatred because they are blinded by anger, and Dr Kim's role in this is to instil this belief in them.

His understanding of the effects of his own system is demonstrated to be correct because Manny's own situation reflects this he was being successfully brainwashed even though he entered into this KNOWING THE YPA IS EVIL, and was only able to pull through because of Nambongs preparations. He also had Jongwoo, his half Chinese younger brother, micromanaging things tjis worked so that Manny could be brainwashed without him needing to directly supervise.
He also kept Yongjae Kim under his firm grasp with the same methods explained below for Hyeonggong Song [refer to step 7.5]
2: Manipulation of the man behind trigger as a contingency:

Step six: He cleverly manipulated Frost indirectly by using Seonga. Here he used his handy dandy YPA to brainwash one of Seongas patients. Jiseong, who had become a streamer online. He had chosen this man because of his enthusiasm about his ex-therapist had talked about Seonga on stream. This lures Frost out. I'll explain the process of this tactic.
1. He made the man commit hate crimes
2. The man had talked about Seonga on stream before
3. Seonga is popular as of now so the news will comment on her
4. Seonga gets a lot of backlash online because she had been preaching to her patient about expressing his anger in a healthy way
5. This would be misinterpreted by the uninformed masses through a game of telephone (Seonga -> Patient -> Stream -> Others)
6. Due to the fact that Nambong has a soft spot for Seonga and is protective over her such that the reason he entered hiding in the first place is to protect Seonga. He knows this will draw him out of hiding. Which he will need
Something to do with his process of manipulating Jiseong, the YPA did most of the work (which he set up) but he also directly manipulated Jiseong into the attack but deletes his messages later to signal to Nambong it was him without ever giving Nambong concrete evidence. The thought of Seonga being against Moon is horrifying for Nambong this deepens the seed of fear in Nambongs mind even more. Getting Jiseong to do this also tied into latter parts of Moons plans
[BTW the arc about this is literally called "The Trap" lmao]

Step seven: Now that Nambong has successfully been lured out he anticipated Nambong would analyze it like this, the acid attack and the failed bombing were both symbols of hate towards politics and migrants. This spread fear across the entire country for his more overarching plan but for right now it also telegraphed to Nambong a pattern now the pattern itself is something very theoretical but I myself have a hypothesis.
Information available to the reader:
He [Moon] was directly manipulating Yongjae as a puppet leader.
Yongjae provided Jeonghoon (if i remember the bombers name correctly) with attention and the feeling of importance he so desired
In his eyes Jeonghoon had never experienced “The Tunnel Ritual” which he would have most likely experienced had he been treated the same way the other members were.
Inference: Seonghyun understood Jeonghoons psychology perfectly, he had always been in the limelight, student clubs, student council member at medical school, but as he got older that feeling had begun to fade so he was attracted to the YPA. This is exactly why he deprived him of that extra feeling of belonging which would push him even further into the YPAs grasp. He decided to avoid that because by doing so Jeonghoon would even further seek approval by bombing that event with Hyeonggong Song. I believe he was also the puppeteer behind why Jeonghoon was chosen for going to an old farmhouse. In fact a quote from Moon himself also supports this hypothesis as it perfectly mirrors his tactics “Do you know what humans desire the most? It's the feeling that they're in control of something... All I'm doing is giving that to them.”

With this in mind, he expected Nambon to try to do something to stop it, so it made sense to gather information from Jeonghoon, which explains why he allowed Jeonghoon to feel deprived. To ensure that he would help Nambon, he expected Frost to use this to convince Jeong-hoon. He allowed the attack to be stopped in order to sow fear [as evidenced by the fact that he could have used something more lethal, and how quickly the news spread by the YPA itself; after the attack was stopped, both Songa and Nambon supported this theory], and so that Songjun, his brother, would watch over the park to confirm Nambon's return. The tunnel ritual does not even exist (which is why I said "in his eyes"), which confirms this once again: Jeong-hoon did not even know it was fake, which means that Moon most likely deliberately did not inform him. In addition, Song-hyun had already communicated with Chison directly, and considering that he was the reason for the events that led to Chison joining the YPA, he showed that he could have taken preventive measures by manipulating Chison into refusing to help the team so that they would surely turn to Jeong-hoon. Son-hyung's personal observation of Chi-son also implies that he served as a prototype for how Moon planned to manipulate Trigger members in the future. This is also related to step nine.

Step 7.5: Here, he further intensifies Hyung-gon's fear of him by committing sinister acts, such as the phrase I quoted earlier, continuing to walk around Son and mentioning the use of public fear. He kept Hyung-gon on the line by pretending that they had common interests. In this case, he wanted Hyung-gon to seize power using their shared understanding of public psychology. Let me continue with a little lecture.

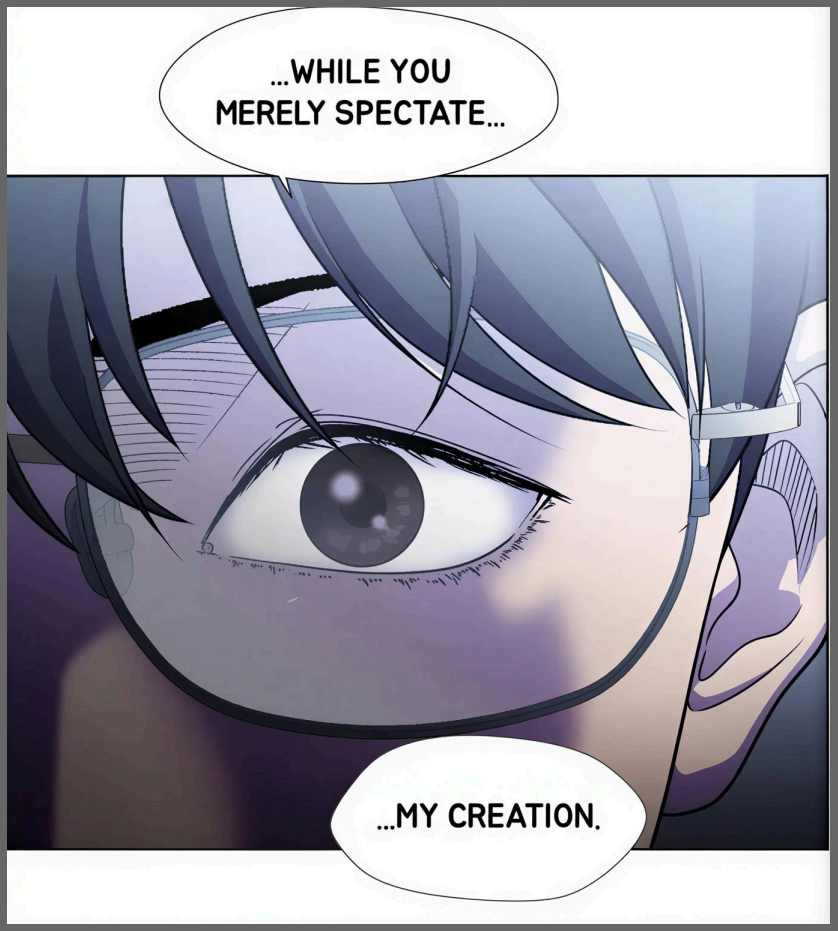

Hyung-gon is a shining beacon for conservative Koreans.

Conservative leaders have always been more successful when the public is deeply concerned about security.
Therefore, Moon lures Hyung-gon with promises of power, sowing fear in a way that benefits him.

At the same time, he hides his true goals from Hyung-gon and exploits his fear.

Step eight: The defence strategy is that, in order to encourage Nambong to continue his investigation of Moon, he tracked down Frost and explained that the difference between them was self-confidence, which is why he had been in hiding all these years. I believe he foresaw, no, he PLANNED the elimination of the YPA. He was absolutely certain that by telling Nambong about the YPA's methods, Frost would find a way. In fact, this is not even a gaping hole in his plan, because, logically, he must have the support of the police, and if he knows about the YPA's activities, that will be enough to eliminate the YPA. He opposed him, explaining this difference as a way to provoke Nambong and support his motivation for the next stage of his plan. Seonghyuns thought process.
I planned for the YPA to get taken down by Nambong

This would make Nambong proud/excited even if a little bit due to his sensitivity to emotions now
Once Nambong realizes he has a whole nother group to deal with (trigger) he and especially his group could be demoralized
He knows that Nambong is most likely working with Seonga and probably Jinhan too, he also has immense influence.
He could use this to track down Frost and reverse psychology him into continuing.
He also has Seongjun Intimidate Yongjae right now and pressure him into not making any moves that will get in Moons way, the feeling of control comes up here again remember how he kept Yongjae in control in the first place. He felt a desire, a thirst, to fulfill his sense of righteousness and a feeling of being recognized so taking the YPA down marinates his mentality for later he gave Yongjae exactly what he wanted and then took it away he also made sure these emotions would stay inside and wouldn't make it out due to his fear of Moon. These feelings would stay hidden until a certain “trigger” is pulled in the final stages of his plan, you'll see. He also made sure his plan was coming along smoothly by wiretapping Mr. Cho’s home (the reporter mentioned before the timeskip) as he could easily anticipate they would talk in his home
He is incredibly fearful and afraid of Seonghyun
He would most likely feel more safe in his own home
Conclusion: He would probably talk to anybody in his home if need be, however what he would not anticipate would be that Seongjun takes matters Into his own hands and kills Mr. Cho [burns the body along with the whole building too holy shit] this was a miscalculation however he quickly redirects Seongjun back on course by intimidating him. He compares this to when he was a child and someone ruined his drawing saying they'd fix It, he then says that his role is to simply spectate his creation.

Or so it seems. While what Moon said was in fact to keep Seongjun in check even if Mr. Cho dying is a miscalculation on his part I think his plan would have succeeded had it been a miscalculation it would not get in the way of his plan regardless, as I will elaborate on step nine

Step nine: He intentionally gets the pharmacist behind C31 caught. For added context the YPA managed upon a man who was a pharmacist which was helpful for making a drug called C31 which apparently heightens fear. Now as for why he did it again for his overarching plan, to spread fear, and to trigger events at a later date (it'll all come together), now the reason why Mr. Cho's death is irrelevant to Moons plan is because either way Moon would have achieved this
If he wasn't dead he and Changgyu would have dropped this information about the YPA anyways
What happened is he did die, It would have been impossible for Moon to anticipate Mr. Cho would give Changgyu the exact item required for these events to unfold so he didn't plan this aspect but c'mon now, this just means he has to find another way which with what we've seen from Seonghyun should be easy, besides plans are meant to be flexible blueprints for him to act on its not like he needed every detail mapped out

TRIGGER: Now his plans are nearing their end this is the stage right after the YPA I'll say this, if the YPA had been taken down before he intended to take it down Trigger could immediately take its place but given that the YPA went well it instead is rather just the next stage of his plan
What Trigger Is
Its a Live Stream meant to induce it's viewers into committing violent crimes and by proxy spreading fear
It leaves no records of its streams behind
It spreads fake news and rumors
There is also an online forum under the same name
The main audience for these videos are socially isolated people
It has a system rewarding it's members with validation and ranks which induces them to boast about their accomplishments to provide them with a sense of belonging
Conclusion: This system attracts groups of people who have incredible amounts of built up anger and this channel directs their hatred so that it explodes into violence it also makes them hate and condemn groups of people like the YPA did. Trigger is even mentioned to operate similarly to how cults do making its members believe they are the law
SHIELDING:
While they publicly meet online they only discuss plans for terrorism on private chat groups where they have every new member submit some ID to have a background check run on them
They chat on an app called Telecord which Is foreign which makes it much more difficult for the Korean police department to retrieve data
This makes it more difficult for the police to act, forcing them to take a more reactionary approach
TRIGGERS CHAIN OF ACTIONS:
Seonghyun commands Yongjae Kim again who commands the man behind the mask in trigger (The live streamer) who influence the people watching who act on their hate which by proxy spreads fear.

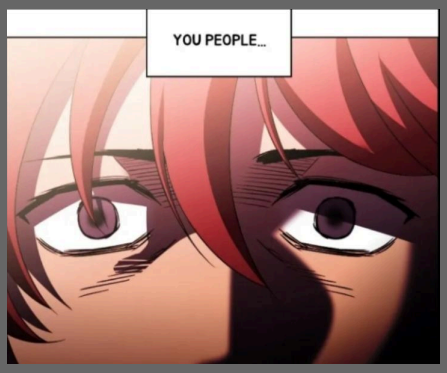

USAGE OF TRIGGER TO SET UP NEXT STAGE:
Seonghyun via his chain shown above makes it so that trigger can set up a rally, at Gwanghwamun Gate in two days he also proposes a law to fix the widespread issue of migrants in the country, he also avoids getting her broadcast taken down immediately by saying that this stream had no association with the other group called trigger which disregards the law where he says the rally will be peaceful
USAGE OF IMMIGRANTS:
He uses Jongwoo Won, his chinese-korean half brother to join Saiyed a man who follows Mr. Jung a politician that wants to help migrants and those who are not fully Korean. Gabriel (Manny's brother btw) wants to help Saiyed so he shares information about what the police is doing with him which reaches Jongwoo who as you know is connected to Moon. He uses this to stay three steps ahead as well as use Saiyed to spread hatred through wanting vengeance with this the goal of the rallies are to provoke a retaliatory response from the group of Jungs followers. Now remember why Mr. Jungs followers want to take action in the first place, because he was hurt, now who hurt him? Jiseong, now who was directly responsible for encouraging him to do this? Moon, it's even said that everyone in the YPA had a different target for their hate so Jiseongs was chosen deliberately
MARINATING YONGJAE KIM:
Think about his role in this, he lost his position in the YPA, then he was terrified of Moon before in his eyes Seonghyun found another purpose for him, he begins his role in Trigger but then gets removed by Moon. Again Yongjae desires to be recognized which means this feeds his deepest fear which matches what Moon says

Step ten: The day of the rally he uses his influence to pressure Yuri Kang. This is not to completely stop her involvement as manipulation of the police is a part of the plan but rather to limit her resources, so that she has to divide them. Limiting her resources also makes a vehicular attack a possibility without any blockades or the mobile field force, he plans to use this to make an attack he uses the migrant workers to attack the protesters combine this with the already hostile attitudes towards the migrants then this triggers some violent riots what with the public attitudes he has cultivated over several years this attack is the one to pull the trigger, all previous attacks only purpose was to spread fear but the purpose of this one was to turn fear into hatred with this his attack mustn't fail THIS is the reason why he was marinating Yongjae's psyche this entire time it was to use him as backup by having him drive a bus into the crowd

Actually, no. Not the crowd the target was JINHAN this time, Moon knows how beloved he is among the police force so hurting him will disillusion the police with what they feel they should protect he even had the lovable Seonga like this

Step eleven: We've reached the climax, where all of his fear mongering should pay off, now he has to converge everyone's fears at one point, this will be Gwanghwamun square a week from the Trigger rally with a projected attendance of 100,000 he plans to turn this into the largest riot in Korean history. He catches Nambong visiting Chuns grave and provokes him by mentioning his death in an attempt to get him to think illogically. While doing this he feeds him a certain lie. He explains that people have become desensitized to killing and that they have trouble understanding themselves until they feel tremendous amounts of resentment and hatred and so his riots are designed to bring about a change by acting as a mirror, making people recognize that on the inside they are all monsters, this is all meant to deceive

Nambong, this was seen through however it is worthy to note this was seen through by instinct and that Nambong didn't notice anything at all that would indicate he's lying. He also directly manipulated Nambong here by saying he's been putting off a choice, this leads him to inform Seon Song about Seonghyun this was to get Seon talking about it in order to cause a new rally to protest him which he arranges to be on that day this spreads the place of convergence to two by having another rally to protest Hyeonggong Song now this is where the polices limited resources come into place now they have to divert their attention to two locations since they do not know which will be the main target now to cause the chain reaction to turn the rallies into riots he uses a group of twelve handpicked individuals he calls Claymore which were also personally trained by Seongjun. He chose them according to mysterious criteria, probably those most susceptible to brainwashing and he let them choose a name for themselves as a linchpin to unite them. Given how he got rid of Seongjun temporarily he expected the police to get this information placing them into a tricky situation if they get caught too early then the location remains unknown but if they are caught too late the riot begins, all of this naturally will put Yuri Kang on edge which will indirectly manipulate her to take every precaution possible like giving all of her men firearms so that when they show up to the rally it will place everyone attending on edge however he never intended to do anything at the rally at Gwanghwamun at all, this was mere misdirection to drag things out, in fact he makes Claymore wait until the riot reaches it's climax so that when they finally move he can split them up 11-1, this confuses the police and with their limited time they have difficulty thinking quickly he even predicted everything like this.
Moon has provided Frost with enough information so that Nambong can infer Gwanghwamun will be the real location that Moon targets because Yeouido has a clear and direct target whereas Gwanghwamun is a hodgepodge of unpleasant feelings
He sends 11 of Claymore to Yeouido and 1 to Gwanghwamun
In the eyes of the police this could balance it out making both possibilities equally likely making them waste even more time Given this indecisiveness and the polices limited resources he can split up the attention given to each location even further. He uses this to even further destabilize Ms. Kangs's decision making, given how the C31 was exposed to the police earlier he induces her to start taking down the ones with water bottles. Given these water bottles look just like normal ones it makes it look like the police are using unnecessary force further prodding the crowd. With this he has drones fly over Yeouido and spray the C31 drug over them. However, I must mention. The C31 drug had never existed, (the whole situation with the pharmacist looks very different in context now), he wasn't actually lucky to stumble upon one because he didn't make it anyways. for months he had been intentionally spreading fear about this dangerous drug to spray some random liquid over the crowd and take advantage of human nature this was merely a bluff using a fabricated substance this works and starts the riots however the riots gets quelled

FINAL CONTINGENCY: He had brought Jinhan out of the hospital and informed him that Chuns death was not in fact an accident and was provoked by none other than Jinhan himself. This was an aim from Seonghyun by killing Chun too, all those years ago. He was attempting to coax Jinhan into shooting him, mainly by saying it is a part of human nature to disobey the orders of ones father

He would fall down and die for certain this would restart the riot. When Seongjun interferes Seonghyun claims he knew Seongjun would seek him out. However, he has one final trick up his sleeve. Jumping off the building let's see what he's done to make this a catalyst to restarting the riots
He wrote several books
He appeared on TV several times
Became a beloved public figure an image cultivated over years

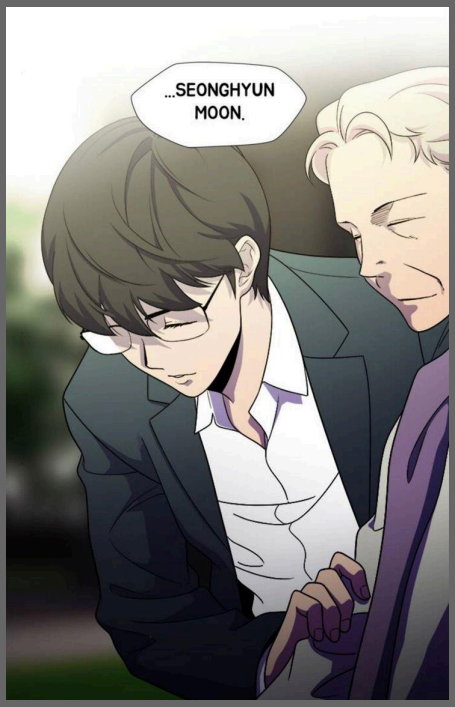

He used this so that when he would kill himself his death alongside the already destabilized state of the crowd the riots would restart. This gets stopped by a cushion

WHY IT FAILED:
Firstly we have to admit, the team got lucky a few times here firstly. (Not to take away from the teams achievements this was still an insane task)
Jiseong's old apartment was the one used for trigger which helped Seonga come to the realization something was off when the man behind trigger was oddly calm
Nambong failed to stop the riots in the first place and they were LUCKY enough to have the devices required to plug it in and activate the sprinkler system to quell the riots this was NOT planned from the beginning by Nambong and Changgyu even tried to stop Seonah from coming to the event in the first place. If she didn't appear there they would have even known they had the tools to stop it
Changgyus prevention of Moons contingency hinged on understanding the psychology of Moon which succeeded through chance. His basis for thinking Moon would take his own life was because most cult leaders end up this way to retain a sense of control. In fact Changgyu was entirely oblivious to Moons main intention by attempting to commit suicide even if deep down Seonghyun did in fact want to keep control of the situation
This plan is virtually unstoppable, impossibly difficult to detect in Nambongs position and even harder to negate once it begins. It was stopped at the only possible moment, right at the start of the riot. Given the fact it's a riot it's pretty uncontrollable at that point so it's the only chance to quell it before it spreads and becomes a nation-wide issue. So you can't stop it before, after, and the only way to stop it during that small interval is to pull off a tactic like Nambong did and calm everyone down before it escalates and THEN even get lucky on stopping Moon's contingency

Length of the plan - 22 years. This is confirmed by a few things
The desires of others arc takes place right after Christmas which the next Christmas is in "Merry Christmas Dr. Frost" showing a year has passed, back then Frost had been 34 and Moons plan begun when they first met, back when Moon was 19 and Frost was 16. This means it had been 18 years since that flashback during the desires of others, add another year and it'd be 19. This is again confirmed when it's mentioned Frost is turning 35 during the "Merry Christmas Dr. Frost" arc. Seven years are added by the timeskip where it's stated Frost was in hiding after leaving the coma for seven years.

(Short Term Planning, Long Term Planning, Preparation Process, Planning Aim, Planning Coverage, Planning Intricacies, Planning Contingencies, Planning Versatility, Strategy Efficiency, Strategy Effectiveness, Strategy Complexity, Strategy Success Rate, Strategy Consistency, Tactics, Calculations, Strategy Versatility, Short Term Strategy, Long Term Strategy, Strategy Shielding, Mass Manipulation, Individual Manipulation, Emotional Manipulation, Logical Manipulation, Psychological Manipulation, Persuasion, Insanity Inducement, Intimidation, Triangulation, Abusing Weaknesses, Complete Control Over Victim, Direct, Manipulation, Indirect Manipulation, Brainwashing, Analogical Reasoning, Probabilistic Reasoning, Risk Assessment, Risk Management, Risk Taking, Logical Prediction, Intuitive Anticipation, Decision Making, Perception, Intuition, Observation, Analysis, Emotional Understanding, Emotional Engagement, Emotional Perception, Emotional Management, Emotional Facilitation, Empathy, Relationship Management, Composure, Leadership, Social Skills, Charisma, Charm, Social Engineering, Social Awareness, Crystallized Intelligence, Interpersonal Intelligence, Intrapersonal Intelligence, Long Term Memory, Linguistic Intelligence, Creative Thinking, Nonlinear Thinking, Linear Thinking, Horizontal Thinking, Vertical Thinking, Systematic Thinking, Application Thinking).

THANKS FOR READING!

...SEONGHYUN
MOON.