Corpse Box Strategy Rebunk

Reverend Insanity

Doc by: Rain

INTRODUCTION:

Some days ago Revy made a debunk doc for my Corpse Box Strategy analysis doc. Through this doc, I'll refute all his arguments and prove why Revy's debunk doc is just wall text of low comprehension.

For any questions, feel free to reach out to us on Discord: divinerain5956

IMPORTANT:

I'll just be addressing the points that Revy has raised. I don't see the need or necessity to provide my reasonings for things that he hasn't mentioned.

Also, just for formality: I am not making this with the intention of proving Revy's lack of comprehension on Reverend Insanity, but rather just to defend my own doc. Nothing else. I don't have any animosity with him. So if anyone thinks I'm doing this because I want to have enmity with Revy and I dislike or hate him, then you are wrong, and I am sure it's the same case for Revy (hopefully).

In fact I have no interest in making a rebunk about a debunk which doesn't even make sense. The reason I made this is because of Revy debunking another doc made by my friend Herald and claiming that Herald probably hasn't read Reverend Insanity or even understood it.

So I'll show his hypocrisy through this, about how he claims others of fake reading or not understanding something when he himself lacks decent knowledge on it. (Yeah, I contradicted myself, but whatever.)

BLACK COFFIN LUCK:

Revy's main claims about Black Coffin Luck:

1. Black Coffin Luck wasn't relevant in Volume 1 because Fang Yuan only became aware of his luck decrease in Volume 4.
2. No proof connects Black Coffin Luck to the Corpse Box Strategy feat since Fang Yuan never explicitly says it affected his actions.
3. Fang Yuan was careful due to his knowledge and experience, not because of Black Coffin Luck.

I'll provide counters for each point.

First claim of Revy:

Black Coffin Luck wasn’t relevant in Volume 1 because Fang Yuan only became aware of his luck decrease in Volume 4.

Counter:

Black Coffin Luck is a direct consequence of using Spring Autumn Cicada, which Fang Yuan quite literally did in Chapter 1. Since this is a causal effect, it must be present from the moment of his rebirth.

Just because Fang Yuan only realizes his luck is worse in Volume 4 doesn’t mean it wasn’t affecting him in earlier volumes. His later recognition is just an explicit confirmation, not a retroactive change.

By the way, Black Coffin Luck's name was introduced in Volume 3, not Volume 4. Revy, did you even read Reverend Insanity?

According to Revy's logic, Venerables didn't exist before Chapter 163 because they were not mentioned yet. (Oh no, he might say I used Straw Man Fallacy in his next doc.)

This entire claim is based on Appeal to Ignorance.

Second claim of Revy:

No proof connects Black Coffin Luck to the Corpse Box Strategy feat since Fang Yuan never explicitly says it affected his actions.

Counter:

Now, I don't know if you actually read the novel or not, but Black Coffin Luck doesn't act in the way you demand it to be presented:

“If you can actually prove instances where he was affected, if it was he would mention why things went out of his calculations or why he was met with a problem suddenly” — Revy

If you've actually read upto Volume 4, you'll realize that there is never any sudden problem. Everything that is affected by Black Coffin Luck is very fluid and very hard to notice, unless explicitly stated.

You seem to have a misunderstanding of how Black Coffin Luck even works. It doesn't create sudden problems for Fang Yuan or make his calculations go wrong. But what it does is, try to affect the effectiveness of Fang Yuan's actions.

Now, one thing I find funny is Revy completely ignoring this sentence from Corpse Box Strategy doc:

“With each use of Spring Autumn Cicada, the Gu Master's luck would decrease proportionally with the user's cultivation until they would suffer calamities and disasters one after another.”

If Revy had carefully read the doc, or perhaps even Reverend Insanity, he would've understood that this means Fang Yuan's Black Coffin Luck's effects works in relation to his cultivation rank. Meaning Chapter 30 Fang Yuan, who is a Rank 1 Initial Stage Gu Master would obviously have less effective Black Coffin Luck as compared to Volume 4 Fang Yuan who is a Rank 6 Immortal Zombie. It's basic logic. Not to mention by Volume 4, Fang Yuan had used Spring Autumn Cicada two times more, which actually made the effect of Black Coffin Luck more intense.

Third claim by Revy:

Fang Yuan was careful due to his knowledge and experience, not because of Black Coffin Luck.

Counter:

Uhh… well, no shit, Sherlock.

How is that even relevant? We never claimed in our doc that Fang Yuan knew about Black Coffin Luck or took measures against it.

Instead, our aim was to inform about the factor, known as Black Coffin Luck, which was affecting Fang Yuan's plans and strategies. By doing that, we made people aware about the contextual adversity of Fang Yuan's feats.

In fact, this makes Fang Yuan’s feats even more remarkable as he could plan and strategize in such a way that even a factor like Black Coffin Luck doesn't affect him despite not even knowing about its existence.

I have nothing else to say about this point.

My final words for this point:

Revy misunderstands how luck-based adversities work and contradicts himself multiple times. His argument is invalid and is literally based on Appeal to Ignorance and Straw Man Fallacy.

EXTORTION FEAT:

Revy’s main claims about Extortion Feat:

1. The feat is misrepresented.

2. Extortion was a simple feat that didn’t require deep thought or metacognition.
3. Risk assessment, holistic thinking, and critical thinking were unnecessary since Fang Yuan already knew the clan wouldn’t punish him. So categories are exaggerated.
4. Fang Yuan didn’t have any issues because the students were inexperienced teenagers.

I'll provide counters for each one.

First claim by Revy:

The feat is misrepresented.

Counter:

Revy uses this from sentence from the doc:

Since this was a relatively minor issue, and Fang Yuan was just extorting his classmates rather than bullying or acting power-hungry, the school elder turned a blind eye to this.

And then he wrote this:

Im not quite sure where this line was heading towards, extorting someone is essentially a power move to gain short term and long term benefits, really multiple contradictions. This isnt towards the feat itself but how it is represented.

I'd really like to know if Revy even read the novel. I won't say much. This scan from Chapter 29 will be enough:

However Uncle shook his head. “You think too simply of things. Fang Yuan will not be expelled, in fact there may not be any punishment.”

“Why?” Aunt was puzzled.

Uncle snorted. “Brawls and fights are encouraged as long as there are no heavy consequences. Did any students die in this fight? No.”

Aunt refused to comply. “Husband, how would you know there weren’t any casualties? There are always accidents happening from fighting.”

Uncle closed his eyes, leaning against the back of his chair. “Woman, you are really naïve. Do you really think the academy elder is just for show? When did the guards start acting? They came out at the last moment, this means that the entire scene was under control. If someone was heavily injured, they would have rushed over a long time ago, not at the last moments.”

“You are not a Gu Master, so you won’t understand. The academy does not forbid brawls among the students, but in fact they maintain an encouraging attitude towards it. The more brawls there are, the more helpful it would be for battles. Some students can even create strong bonds through fighting. The elders will not pursue this. It is already a routine. If anyone wants to take action on behalf of their offspring, it would break the rules.”

In short, the Academy Elder didn't even treat this as a major issue like bullying. Here, Revy clearly showed his high attainment in Low Comprehension Path again, and perhaps Fake Reading Path too. This is called Fallacy of Quoting Out of Context, and Revy does this a lot of times in his debunk doc. So I won't talk about similar points unless I feel it is necessary to do so.

Second claim by Revy:

Extortion was a simple feat that didn't require deep thought or metacognition

Counter:

Revy misrepresents the nature of Fang Yuan's extortion. He assumes that because the act of taking resources was direct, it didn't require deep thinking.

Fang Yuan clearly used thoughtful actions like, extorting only a certain amount, not giving heavy injuries, when to extort, etc.

This is deep thinking. Surface level thinking would be something like Fang Yuan going and beating up his classmates randomly, not caring about how much he injures them, and extorting as many primeval stones from them as he wants.

This is just False Simplicity Fallacy.

Third claim by Revy:

Risk assessment, holistic thinking, and critical thinking were unnecessary since Fang Yuan already knew the clan wouldn't punish him. So categories are exaggerated

Counter:

Revy says Fang Yuan "didn't need risk assessment" because he already knew the clan wouldn't punish him. This is false for several reasons:

1. He specifically made sure the extortion was seen as mild enough that the elders would turn a blind eye.
2. He made sure to not hurt someone so much that it became a big issue.

I could give more, but even one assessment would prove that Fang Yuan analyszed the risk of his actions.

Revy says:

Holistic thinking is the ability to see the big picture and the interconnections between different aspects of a problem or a situation. It can help you make better decisions, avoid oversimplifying or overcomplicating issues, and generate creative solutions.

Uhh… okay. So I guess Fang Yuan taking the academy rules, Academy Elder's behavior towards his action, etc. into consideration was not seeing the big picture. (If anyone is stupid enough to not see through it, then get it that what I wrote in this paragraph was satire.)

I don't know what Revy was even trying to say here.

Revy says Fang Yuan didn't use critical thinking because:

Fang yuan wasnt solving complex problems which required excessive thinking, he had foresight in which he knew that the clan could not suppress him because he wasnt breaking any rules.

Well, you're correct.

But I'd like you to show you the definition of critical thinking that I got from its wikipedia page:

Critical thinking is the process of analyzing available facts, evidence, observations, and arguments to make sound conclusions or informed choices.

I think anyone who has more than two brain cells understands what this means. But if anyone doesn't, then I'll explain it in simple words—Fang Yuan analyzed available facts (his knowledge) to make informed choices (how to extort).

Literally Information Comparison Fallacy.

Fourth claim by Revy:

Fang Yuan didn't have any issues because the students were inexperienced teenagers.

Counters:

Again, I don't see what Revy was trying to achieve by saying this.

Did they not fight back at the start? Is that not causing an issue?

Damn it! Now I'm realizing I should've added a few more categories to the feat like strategy resilience, fear inducement, etc.

My final words for this point:

Revy used some fallacies like Straw Man Fallacy, Fallacy of Quoting Out of Context, False Simplicity Fallacy, Incomplete Comparison Fallacy, etc.

LOW COMPREHENSION MOMENT:

Revy quotes this from my doc:

This is why the family head didn't view the issue as a serious one. If the person bullying his grandson had been from a prominent family or someone with high cultivation potential, he would have taken action, as it could become an issue later on.

Then he says:

This essentially is a contradiction towards a few lines after which stated the clans nurturing tactics.Why would he need to think of someone from a prominent family, does that imply that the individual who with a higher status conforming to the same extortion methods is somehow breaking the clan rules? The same rules apply regardless of which status, and the family head has absolutely no reason to think of this because its a contradiction. They are in the same age group so regardless of who you are or what status even if you extort. the family head still cant do anything to you, he is bound by rule restrictions and the observation of other clans.

So, before I give any counter, I'll just drop a few scans:

Fang Yuan is just small trouble; next up you must study hard and train diligently on your basic martial arts and get your dignity back. —Chapter 29

As his sister, if you really care and want to protect your brother, you should not interfere with his growth. Fang Yuan is just a boy with C grade talent while Mo Bei has B grade talent. With us supporting him, he will step over Fang Yuan and drive him into the ground eventually. —Chapter 31

Of course, if I had better talent and was at least a B grade, the Mo family would feel threatened. —Chapter 38

I don't know about Revy, but most of you guys who are reading this must have understood what this means.

Revy argued that the same rules apply regardless of what status. Yet we have scenes like these where other characters and Fang Yuan himself stating that others didn't take Fang Yuan seriously because of his low cultivation aptitude.

Revy, if you want to debunk my doc, do so with actual arguments. Not with these low comprehension understanding of the story you have.

FANG YUAN EVALUATING HIS CLAN:

Revy's main claims about Fang Yuan evaluating his clan:

1. Fang Yuan didn’t use a “method” to gauge cultivation strength—he just read the rank on people’s belts.

2. What the fuck is “refined bloodline”?
3. Fang Yuan didn’t enter the inn to observe his clan—he was just feeding his Liquor Worm.

Obviously, I'll give counters to each one.

First claim by Revy:

Fang Yuan didn’t use a “method” to gauge cultivation strength—he just read the rank on people’s belts.

Counter:

By now, I have understood that Revy is a low comprehension merchant. But after reading this, I also understood that he is an attention deficit skimmer as well.

Why?

Of course here's the answer.

Revy read this:

Fang Yuan, due to his keen insight, has developed a method to gauge a clan’s cultivation strength, military power, and wealth. Knowing that in Gu World, wealth correlates with higher cultivation potential, he started observing populated areas to evaluate the Gu Masters. Sitting in a main area, he can assess the number of Gu Masters and identify their ranks. More Gu Masters indicate a populace with refined bloodlines, and a high count of elite Gu Masters suggests a wealthy area with many talented individuals. Fang Yuan, therefore, chooses to spend his evenings at the inn, using it as a place to observe and evaluate his own clan.

And concluded:

Although fang yuan has very good insight, this feat is merely observation from his understanding of the power distribution in the clan, Gauging cultivation strength? The title was ingrained in their belt which stated which cultivation level, again he has very good insight but this is overcomplicated. How does one develop a method to gauge cultivation strength? The wording expresses some sort of supernatural capabilities in reading things, his insight comes from his expertise in social intuition. He can deduce things based on physical characteristics and clothing. The use of “method” is simply his social intuition, stretching the feat and adding words to create unnecessary weight towards a feat does not help its quality

Revy… this is some poor nitpicking skills, bro.

Despite my doc saying, “Fang Yuan, due to his keen insight, has developed a method to gauge a clan’s cultivation strength, military power, and wealth.” You only choose cultivation strength, and don't even use the other words like military power, and wealth. Nitpicking is really wild with this one.

Also, it was about clans's cultivation strength, not individual Gu Master's cultivation strength. Now please enlighten me how a clan can wear a cultivation belt.

And of course what I was referring to here is military strength and wealth as well, not just cultivation strength when I wrote Fang Yuan had developed a method to gauge them.

Second claim by Revy:

What the fuck is "refined bloodline"?

Counter:

I used the word, "refined bloodline" in one of the sentences, to which Revy said:

Im not quite sure what this means could be a wording error or it was not properly fleshed out, refined bloodline isnt a word in any dictionary or anywhere on the internet. And im not sure what its supposed to mean.

No it's not a wording error. Revy's problem is that he is taking it as a single word and trying to find its meaning. I don't know if Revy knows this or not, but the English language doesn't work like that.

Refined: It's an adjective that means—polite, well educated and able to judge the quality of things; having the sort of manners that are considered typical of a high social class. This definition is taken from the Oxford Dictionary.

Bloodline: A noun that means—all the members of a family group of people or animals over a period of time, especially when considering their shared family. Definition is taken from Cambridge Dictionary.

Now, if you mix both, it becomes—a high social class family.

Hope you guys liked the english session.

Third claim by Revy:

Fang Yuan didn't enter the inn to observe his clan—he was just feeding his Liquor Worm.

Counter:

Revy says:

Fang yuan didn't enter the inn to observe his clan, why would he do that considering he knows so much? This text mentions gao wan and him standing in front of fang yuans academy dorm. At this point he was hiding liquor under his bed feeding his liquor worm, which is why he also went to the inn. It was a 3 layered deception that involved him drinking in the inn so the clan assumes he is having a phase and is a liquor addict in fact he was feeding his liquor worm.

I don't know what chapter Revy read to come to this conclusion, because this scene happened in Chapter 31 and 32. Liquor Worm wasn't even mentioned once in it.

This doesn't need more words.

My final words for this point:

Again, Revy used multiple fallacies like, Nitpicking, False Simplicity Fallacy, Appeal to Probability, and False Attribution.

MO YAN'S PLAN:

Now, this point is one of my favorite in the debunk doc made by Revy.

Why?

Because it tells me so much about Revy's intelligence. You'll see what I'm talking about after you finish this section.

Revy's main claims about Mo Yan's plan:

1. Mo Yan’s actions weren’t a “plan” but an impulsive reaction.
2. Mo Yan wasn’t a real threat to Fang Yuan.
3. Fang Yuan didn’t “adapt” because he already knew what was going to happen.
4. Most of the categories are exaggerated.

Man, I'm gonna have so much fun writing the counters of these dumbass claims.

First claim of Revy:

Mo Yan’s actions weren’t a “plan” but an impulsive reaction.

Counter:

Unfortunately, Revy is not built for SCD. He doesn't know half the definition of the categories, and also doesn't know how to scale them.

Mo Yao had sent Gao Wan with the aim of capturing Fang Yuan, it was a plan. No matter how small or unimpressive, you can't argue that this is not a plan.

Plan: A set of decisions about how to do something in the future. Definition from Cambridge Dictionary.

Revy himself said:

This plan could not even be considered a plan but a impulsive course of action deviating from her fathers guidance.

Course of action… that's literally a plan.

Also, Mo Yan's father? I don't know that character. Heck, even Gu Zhen Ren doesn't know that character. It was Mo Yan's grandfather, not father, who had scolded her earlier.

Second claim of Revy:

Mo Yan wasn't a real threat to Fang Yuan.

Counter:

A Rank 2 Gu Master is not a threat to Fang Yuan who was just a Rank 1 Initial Stage Gu Master at that time?

Even if she wasn't smart or scheming, she still posed an immediate threat to him. She was stronger than him and like you yourself said, she acts on impulse. Who knows when she decides to hurt Fang Yuan?

Stupid Point.

Third claim by Revy:

Fang Yuan didn't "adapt" because he already knew what was going to happen.

Counter:

Adaptability isn't just reacting to the unexpected—it's also adjusting a plan in real time for optimal results.

Fang Yuan didn't know what was going to happen. He was randomly approached by Gao Wan. Then Fang Yuan cooked up a plan. That's adaptability.

So this was another stupid point.

Fourth claim by Revy:

Most of the categories are exaggerated.

Counter:

This point is very good. Because I can show how much SCD knowledge Revy lacks.

First Revy asks:

Disguise? Which disguise was he using here, he didnt say that he wasnt fang yuan nor did he say he was fang zheng, she was just considering the possibility based on observation it was a 50/50 because they looked so alike he didnt imply anything.

For this, I'll give a scan from Chapter 32:

Regardless of this, the situation was still too peculiar. She had to test and probe further. Fang Yuan laughed and squinted at Mo Yan, saying, "Who told you I was Gu Yue Fang Yuan?"

Disguise: To obscure the existence or true state or character of : Conceal. Definition taken from Merriam Webster

Here, by saying, "Who told you I was Gu Yue Fang Yuan?" Did Fang Yuan not indirectly conceal his identity? Which is disguising?

Revy had asked:

Disguise is basically acting as someone you are not to gain certain benefits, where did he conceal himself?

There bro, I gave the answer.

Next Revy said:

Where did he adapt?

I explained it above already.

Next Revy asked:

How exactly is aura relevant to outsmarting, I couldn't find this in the scd category doc either.

This is from DAX-PMFT's doc:

Social Engineering

Resource Allocation -

Influence Building -

Communication -

Leadership -

Charisma -

Aura -

I won't say more in this. This much is enough.

Next Revy asks:

Who did he mass manipulate?

Again, I'll pull up some scans from Chapter 32:

They had a drawing of Fang Yuan, but they did not know that Fang Yuan and Fang Zheng were twins that looked almost identical.

“No wonder this young man looked like he had no fear. He is actually Fang Zheng and not Fang Yuan.” Mo Yan’s servants guessed in their minds.

“Fang Yuan cannot be compared to Fang Zheng. The former is merely a C ranked loner with no background. The latter however has A ranked talent and was pulled into the clan head’s faction at the Awakening Ceremony, and as long as he grows smoothly, he has a bright future ahead!” Mo Yan did not get proper a reply from Gao Wan, causing her to be even more hesitant.

At this point, the only ones who knew Fang Yuan’s identity were the inn employees. However, they could not afford to offend either parties so they only kept their mouths shut.

You can clearly see, he deceived and manipulated multiple people (Mo Yan, Gao Wan, other servants of Mo Yan). This is mass manipulation.

Next Revy asks a profound question that I can't believe someone could even think of asking:

On what ground was he explicitly mentioned thinking and solving through his metacognition, was it stated that fang yuan was thinking?

Did I read that correctly?

was it stated that fang yuan was thinking?

Bro……what?

Am I missing something here? Does Fang Yuan have no thoughts? Does he not think?

Metacognition: Metacognition is an awareness of one's thought processes and an understanding of the patterns behind them. The term comes from the root word meta, meaning "beyond", or "on top of". Metacognition can take many forms, such as reflecting on one's ways of thinking, and knowing when and how oneself and others use particular strategies for problem-solving. Definition taken from the Wikipedia page of Metacognition.

Now, I'd like you to focus on—Metacognition can take many forms, such as reflecting on one's ways of thinking, and knowing when and how oneself and others use particular strategies for problem-solving.

Now, scan from Chapter 33.

If he had closed the door, or even half shut it, Mo Yan had at least a 50% probability of breaking into the house. But when he purposely opened it fully, it had instead made her more wary and calm as a result. Thus there was barely any chance of her forcing her way in anymore.

Fang Yuan knows when he or others will use particular strategies for problem-solving. This much enough.

And yes, Fang Yuan does thinks. Another scan from Chapter 33 proves this:

"This is the pathetic side of humans." Fang Yuan sat up and stared at Mo Yan who was outside looking like a fool, thinking to himself, "At times, the things preventing people from taking action is not physical difficulty, but instead it is the restrictions they have placed on themselves subconsciously."

Amazing right? Fang Yuan can think!

Next Revy yaps about something and gives his own flawed interpretation of Fang Yuan's strategy. But after that he asks:

Information control? "Information control refers to the strategies and tactics employed by authoritarian regimes to manage and manipulate the flow of information within society. This concept is critical in maintaining power as it influences public perception, suppresses dissent, and shapes the narrative around the government's actions."

Which information was he managing here?

Uhh… which information he controlled?

I don't know man. Something related to him being Fang Yuan. (This is satire. I'm telling in case any idiot doesn't gets it.)

Next Revy asks:

Where did he use influence here?Considering he barely has any influence in the clan how exactly did he use influence towards his benefit?

See. Revy has analyzed Reverend Insanity so much that he forgot the basic things about it. It's a literal rule in Southern Border that a Gu Master was higher in status than a Mortal.

A scan from Chapter 32:

At this point, the only ones who knew Fang Yuan's identity were the inn employees. However, they could not afford to offend either parties so they only kept their mouths shut.

Why could they not afford to offend them? Because both parties were Gu Masters. Gu Master naturally have influence over Mortals due to their higher status.

Next Revy yaps again about his own flawed interpretation of Fang Yuan's strategies and says:

These categories are either irrelevant or quantified unnecessarily.

I've already answered why they are not irrelevant. Are they quantified unnecessary? No. If it was used, there's no reason to not add them. Isn't the purpose of a doc to analyze the feats in-depth and detailed manner?

My final words for this point:

As usual, Revy used various fallacies like, False Equivalence Fallacy, Definist Fallacy, False Attribution, Straw Man Fallacy, etc. He also uses hypocrisy a lot and does too much nitpicking.

FANG YUAN'S PLANNING

Revy's main claims about Fang Yuan's planning:

1. Mo Yan wasn't setting a trap, so "trap evasion" is irrelevant.
2. Fang Yuan didn't bluff.

Revy doesn't have many claims for this topic considering how big it is because:

I will be skipping until the supposed interrogation by the academy elder, as the rest is the same.

Sad. I would've liked to see what more braindead arguments he could put up. Anyway, I'll provide counters for those two.

First claim by Revy:

Mo Yan wasn't setting a trap, so "trap evasion" is irrelevant.

Counter:

Revy says:

Which trap exactly was he avoiding here, mo yan wasn't exactly trapping fang yuan she was simply trying to make fang yuan stop bothering his younger brother, not to admit, what exactly would he be admitting to, he extorted which already falls under the clan rules, this cant even be considered a trap let alone trap evasion

And how exactly was she trying to stop him? By giving him a knuckle sandwich. Chapter 32:

Mo Yan did not even take a look at the groveling Gao Wan; her eyes were fixed on Fang Yuan. She took a few steps forward and demanded in a fierce tone, "So you are Fang Yuan? You seem to be having a good meal. Hehehe, have you ever had a knuckle sandwich? I'll give you a taste of it, it might be even more delicious."

Mo Yan had clear intentions of doing something to Fang Yuan. That's why she wanted to find him in the first place.

How did Fang Yuan evade her trap (plan)?

Well, that's easy to answer. By taking her to the Academy ground by disguising as Fang Zheng, where she couldn't hirt him.

Isn't it amazing how it doesn't take two brain cells to understand this.

Second claim by Revy:

Fang Yuan didn't bluff.

Counter:

Well, let's first understand what bluffing is. I'll use Merriam Webster for the definition.

Bluffing is to try to trick someone into believing something, esp. in order to get an advantage over that person.

Fang Yuan quite literally did that by tricking Mo Yan into believing he is Fang Zheng.

Not only that, him cultivating with open door in front of Mo Yan was both a bluff and psychological tactic.

Bluffing is about playing on emotions and uncertainty, not just lying. Mo Yan knew the rules but was emotionally compromised.

By leaving the door open and taunting her, Fang Yuan forced her to acknowledge the consequences of breaking clan laws. He escalated her hesitation by reinforcing the political risk of attacking him.

This was a psychological bluff—Fang Yuan didn't need to fabricate anything. He just amplified Mo Yan's fear of punishment, which forced her into inaction.

My final words for this point:

Two irrelevant claims. Revy then said that the same case is for the rest of the part, but since he didn't specify which particular one—I don't see the need to give counter for them.

TRAP QUESTION 1:

Revy again started crying about the categories in this section. So I'll clear the conceptions.

Revy asks:

Where did he use deductive reasoning?

Well, very good question. First good question from Revy in the entire debunk.

In the Corpse Box Strategy doc, I had written this:

In this exchange, the academy elder's question was an indirect attempt to make Fang Yuan morally acknowledge his wrongdoing. Fang Yuan, however, figured out the elder's intentions and misdirected the conversation by strictly adhering to the clan's rules and ethics.

How did he figure it out? Deductive reasoning.

I'll explain how using Revy's explanation of how deductive reasoning works.

Major Premise → Killing is morally wrong.

Minor Premise → If you did something morally wrong, people expect you to feel guilty about it.

Conclusion → Academy Elder wants Fang Yuan to accept his guilt.

Next Revy asks:

There was no trap, unless you can argue for how exactly he was avoiding a trap, it would be a heavy one sided correction.

The section is literally named TRAP QUESTION. Academy Elder wanted him to accept his guilt by forcing him to answer the questions. Fang Yuan answered in an unexpected way, thus evading the trap.

I don't understand how someone can be so dumb.

Next Revy asks:

I would like to hear arguments for how he adapted here, I'm very clueless?

Just for information—Revy has a very flawed definition of Adaptability. According to him, it is:

Adaptability is only used towards a difficult situation where one requires mental fortitude and fluid intelligence to overcome it.

Meanwhile, Adaptability is:

Ability or willingness to change.

Definition taken from Cambridge Dictionary.

Fang Yuan quite literally adapted to Academy Elder's question and answered in a way that exempted him from accepting his guilt.

Then Revy asks:

Strategic flexibility?

First of all, I wrote Strategy Flexibility There. There's a difference betweem -gy and -gic. They can completely change the meaning of word.

My answer to this is very simple. Adaptability and Strategy Flexibility go hand to hand. By adapting on the spot, Fang Yuan also shows that his strategies are flexible and can be changed or adapted according to the situation.

Then Revy asks:

Perception?

"Perception can be defined as our recognition and interpretation of sensory information. Perception also includes how we respond to the information. We can think of perception as a process where we take in sensory information from our environment and use that information in order to interact with our environment."

Does Emotional Perception not count in Perception?

Fang Yuan perceived Academy Elder's true intentions—making Fang Yuan accept his guilt.

Then Revy asks:

Dismissal?

"Ignoring a persons feelings, ideas and thoughts to make them feel unvalued and therefore likely to not share any more of their feelings and thoughts"

I think Revy should read the story instead of trying to debunk some docs. Perhaps if he even read my doc with good attention, his debunk doc would've been half its size.

My doc clearly stated this scan:

He evaded the crucial point and did not mention Gao Wan's death.

Fang Yuan quite literally dismissed the main point of the question.

In short, Revy is a nitpicker and has low comprehension so much that he can't even understand these basic things without needing elaborate explanations.

TRAP QUESTION 2:

Here Revy did his usual crying about categories.

But this time he only asked about one category:

Lateral thinking ?

“Lateral thinking involves looking at problems from new angles and making unexpected connections. Lateral thinking is a creative way of problem-solving. It can help you find unique and practical solutions. Lateral thinking is a powerful tool when conventional logic doesn't work.”

Fang Yuan implicated that Gao Wan was a traitor so that nobody would question him about murdering Gao Wan further.

Is this not a creative way of finding a unique and practical solution?

Revy asks this:

How is it possible to stretch this more so or going by the docs words supposed semi interrogation to so many categories? I'm genuinely curious.

I don't know man. Almost entire doc was written by me. I added the categories that were used.

This happens when you are putting actual explanation and analysis of feats in the doc instead of just recaping the feats cough cough Revy's docs cough cough.

I mean, I get it. It must be painful to see that a 10 chapter analysis doc is much longer, comprehensive, and better in quality than your entire volume analysis doc.

My advice? Git gud.

Next Revy cries about how the rest of the doc is similar, so he won't make debunks on specific points.

Since he didn't do it, I don't see any reason to defend them either.

He also again yaps about his own interpretation of Fang Yuan's feats. He tries to downplay Corpse Box Strategy by basically claiming:

1. The strategy wasn’t unique—Fang Yuan could have used other methods to send a message to Mo Chen.
2. Mo Chen was already restricted by political factors, so the Corpse Box wasn’t necessary.
3. The feat is overhyped because it was just intimidation.

I'll give brief counters of each one.

First claim by Revy:

The strategy wasn’t unique—Fang Yuan could have used other methods to send a message to Mo Chen.

Counter:

Just because multiple strategies exist doesn't mean they are equally effective.

The Corpse Box was uniquely powerful because:

It combined psychological, social, and political pressure into a single move.

It forced Mo Chen into action while maintaining Fang Yuan's plausible deniability.

Second claim of Revy:

Mo Chen was already restricted by political factors, so the Corpse Box wasn't necessary.

Counters:

Sending the corpse box was about sending a message. It helped Fang Yuan establish his own identity in the mind of Gu Yue Mo Chen as a remarkable person —which comes back as benefit to Fang Yuan when the wolves attack Qing Mao Mountain when Gu Yue Mo Bei dies and Gu Yue Mo Chen decides to make Fang Yuan his new successor.

Third claim by Revy:

The feat is overhyped because it was just intimidation

Counter:

Who's even hyping this feat? This feat is like Takuya victim in strategy.

But again, its more than just intimidation. It had long term consequences, which I explained above already.

It's also funny that he mentions it's better to read the original source than a doc, but he himself is making docs on all 6 volumes of Reverend Insanity.

Hypocrisy has a limit bro.

ATTEMPTING THE DEBUNK ATTEMPTS:

Now, I won't go into details with these because Revy is yapping too much in it.

Revy says "This isn't downplaying, I'm just saying the feat wasn't that big."

But downplaying is literally dismissing or minimizing something's importance.

His own wording confirms that he is downplaying Fang Yuan's feats.

By definition, downplaying means reducing the significance of something.

If Revy says "this feat wasn't that big", then he is downplaying it.

His argument contradicts itself—he tries to reject the label of downplaying while doing exactly that.

His reasoning is inconsistent.

At earlier points in the doc, he says "Fang Yuan's feats aren't impressive."

But later, he argues that Fang Yuan executed them efficiently.

So which is it?

If Fang Yuan's actions are not impressive, why do they require such efficiency?

If efficiency is needed, doesn't that mean the feats were complex and noteworthy?

Revy says:

Fang yuan didnt need to be tested? The main criteria is to be an otherworldy demon, and through his eventual achievements heavens will saw fit to use him.

Yes, any Otherworldly Demon could have theoretically been chosen, but:

Not all Otherworldly Demons are equal.

Fang Yuan's specific intelligence, adaptability, and persistence made him the optimal choice.

This is explicitly stated in Volume 5, Chapter 1076:

"You were the most suitable candidate to be the tool."

Not just any candidate—the most suitable.

If Fang Yuan's abilities didn't matter, then why didn't Heaven's Will pick someone else?

Revy dismisses Fang Yuan's intelligence but acknowledges that he was chosen for his capabilities.

If Fang Yuan's abilities weren't relevant, then why was he specifically picked?

FINAL THOUGHTS

That's it.

All Revy did was use multiple fallacies, show his attention deficit, skimming, and low comprehension.

He tries to Oversimplify Corpse Box Strategy doc, despite the fact that docs are made to be comprehensive and detailed because they are analysis.

Anyway, at start I had said that I am not doing this because I want to prove Revy's low comprehension, but guess what? I lied.

But what I didn't lie about was saying I don't hate or dislike Revy. I have not even talked to him once in real time, so there's no real reason for me to hate or dislike him.

To me, he's just a random fellow Reverend Insanity editor who I could care less about since he is not my friend or even someone whom I regularly interact with.

I wasn't even gonna make this doc because of how dogshit Revy's debunk was, but what actually pissed me off is the fact that Revy didn't contact us to clear any confusion he had about our docs. We left our Discord ID in the docs for a reason.

Anyway, this wasn't even that much. I wasn't seriously trying to rebunk it. I was more focused on trolling, that's why this doc is not professional like my other ones. Also the fact that this is made in a few hours and I haven't reread it to see if anything needs to be fixed, also makes it looked unpolished.

Well, thanks for reading this. If you want to discuss anything about this, you can find me in Discord. Thanks, again.
