[Doc Made By Nino_IQ + Yusha]

Daybit Sem Void
“Reaper of Humanity”
“The Man That Can Achieve Anything Impossible”

Your goal is to save the world.

Mine is to save all of creation.

For more information about him, here is official profile :
Daybit Sem Void

Nasuverse/Type-Moon SCD Library

[FSIQ - Intelligence - Reasoning - Thinking - Cognition - Sensory - Insight - Analysis - Methods]
[EQ - Psychology - Psychological Warfare - Deception - Manipulation - Manipulation Methods - Tactics]
[SQ - Social Engineering - Judgment - Adaptability]
[AC - Resistances - Foresight - Planning - Strategy - Countering - Counteraction - Field Skills]
[Unpredictability]
[Notes]

Haxes related to intelligence :

[Angelic Artifact] When Daybit was 10, his father called him to show him an artifact that he was researching, when the Artifact activated, Daybit and his father, who were in its presence, were disassembled on an atomic level by the artifact and erased them from existence, along with both of their names and their background from all people's memories and records in the world, becoming as if they never existed. All that remains is their burnt-out shadows on the floor as the only indication of their existence, unable to be removed no matter what methods were used. Brishisan notes that the shadows, although unmoving, are alive and will remain alive forever even after the universe has completely cooled.

Daybit would reappear 0.2 seconds after the Halo's activation, but recognised that he was not the same Daybit as before who died, but one that was reassembled exactly the same as before using his atoms. Though his body and DNA to his personality and memories besides his name were all identical to before, he knew he was different and wasn't a part of the world. There was one defect he discovered that was he could only record five minutes of memory every 24 hours; each day to him would only be 5 minutes worth of events. He doesn't decide what to remember in real-time: at the end each day, he can choose 5 minutes and then has to cut off the remaining 23 hours and 55 minutes.

In addition, due to spending years living with choosing only 5 minutes a day to preserve, Daybit can evaluate and estimate the future to some extent. This is not true precognition, but in reality it was him having incredible perceptiveness. It is this skill that made him visit Peperoncino in the Indian Lostbelt, as his estimations predicted that Peperoncino would throw away his life for someone else's sake later, so Daybit wanted to say goodbye while he was still alive, a prediction that would come true in the British Lostbelt.

And it was stated that his way of thinking is outside of the universe, and he views everything from "Cosmic Perspective".

[Metacognition - Overall Cognition - Overall FSIQ - Overall Thinking - Overall Intelligence - Perception - Overall Unpredictability]

Before that, I need to explain the scale of the situation [Skippable part if you wish] :

What happened to earth?

- After Chaldea successfully saved earth and humanity from the extinction because of Goetia's plan to incarnate all of humanity, a new problem has occurred which turned out that it was supposed to happen before Goetia's plan but was postponed because of Goetia.

[Note I didn't 100% understand it sorry I will just write whatever I understood]

An alien god (Still unknown right now) and its disciples decided to take over earth by flipping the surface of earth (Yes you read it right) putting all of earth into bleachedness while everyone is theoretically dead but alive in the same time, and the alien god planted 7 giants trees called the "trees of emptiness" on the bleached earth so that once one of them reach the mature state it will be offered to it(alien god) so that it can get stronger and rule over the new earth that will come with the mature state of the tree which is called "Lostbelt".

What is a Lostbelt?

- As opposed to the Proper Human History, the history of "winners" born from correct choices and proper prosperities leading to the "present", the history of "losers" born from the wrong choices and mistaken prosperity is cut off. Considered "unnecessary" and cut off from becoming even parallel worlds, this history which has hit a dead end is known as a Lostbelt (異聞帯ロストベルト, IbuntaiRosutoberuto?, lit. "Belt of Strange Tales"). If one thinks of Human History as one long scroll, the Lostbelts are like another scroll entirely that was discarded once it was clear it was no longer useful. It is unknown how exactly that the timelines selected by the Fantasy Trees managed to exist until the present day, as they would have ceased to have exist entirely within a century of being designated for culling due to Quantum Time-Locks. Despite this, these Lostbelts are being wielded as weapons against the world of Proper History itself in an incident known as the Filtering Outsider Phenomenon (濾過異分子現象, Roka Ibunshi Genshō?, localized as "Felling Theoretical Phenomenon"). Ophelia Phamrsolone proposes the theory that the specific timelines that we see within the Alien God's Lostbelts are actually virtually simulated from their point of culling unto present day using the resources within the Tree; and then iterated without, unto the Tree's environs, the surrounding environment. This is abstractly akin to Emiya Shirou's Projections — rendering into the real world the product of a simulated history, then imposing that simulated history over the Proper Human History in the hopes of replacing it with the Lostbelt's version of history.

The Fantasy Tree then selects a Lostbelt King, a powerful figure who is given the ability to direct the Tree's growth and spread, making the Lostbelt more stable and expanding its scope. The Fantasy Tree also begins gathering energy, which is used to prepare for the descent of the Alien God. The Alien God's true intentions for the Lostbelts as well as the Human Order Revision itself are currently unknown. Destroying the Fantasy Tree sustaining the Lostbelt will allow the culling process to resume, and a Holy Grail formed from the Fantasy Tree's remains can be collected. A Lostbelt without its Fantasy Tree can last no more than a few months (from its inhabitants' perspective- an outside observer will see it vanishing immediately) before the culling process is completed, at which point the Lostbelt and all of its surviving inhabitants will be erased from reality as if they never existed. It is unclear if erasing all the Lostbelts is enough on its own to undo the bleaching of the world, but it is likely to be a necessary step towards doing so.

The events of the Edo Singularity reveals a unique "Subcategory Singularity" (亜種特異点, Ashu Tokuiten ?, localized as "Pseudo-Singularity"), designated the Humanity Destruction Zone, that is able to effect Human History akin to a Lostbelt but while trying to remain a Singularity, when normally Singularities only affect what's within the Singularity's borders. She compares the one in Edo to others such as the Shinjuku Singularity and the Shimosa Singularity as places isolated from standard history.

The Shimosa Singularity is considered Subcategory Parallel World (亜種並行世界, Ashu Heikō Sekai?, localized as "Pseudo Parallel World"), also known as a Micro-Lostbelt (小さな異聞帯, Chiisa-na Ibuntai?), as it is something close to a Parallel World but not quite one. A Lostbelt that was both a part of human history but also not part of it. It is a world observed by the God of a Distant Star and a world resembling a Singularity yet isn’t one. An otherworld (異界, ikai?) rift which exists between dreams and reality, distinct enough that it should be designated for culling but hasn't been. A closed-off subspace not unlike a Reality Marble, a separate timeline, or an alternate world. Due to its isolated nature, the Counter Force is apparently somewhat weaker there, though as it is not within the standard history (but at the same time, not within another universe), the events within should not be able to threatened history. Despite this, with the summoning of Onriedo Castle by Amakusa Shirou's Reality Marble, the events of the world would switch from dream to reality and become quite real. If Amakusa's reality marble was able to fully take root in that world and activate its curse, not only would it destroy that world, but threaten to destroy many other worlds too, including the world of Chaldea.

The Heian-kyō Lostbelt was capable of becoming a Subspecies Lostbelt (亜種の異聞帯, Ashu no Ibuntai?), using a ritual to grow and mature a Fantasy Tree but using the Onriedo Castle summoned in the Shimosa Singularity, a castle from a pruned Lostbelt, as equivalent for a Psuedo-Fantasy Tree; a Subspecies Fantasy Tree (亜種空想樹, Ashu Kūsōju?). This is something that is both a Singularity and a Lostbelt due to being a Lostbelt occurring in 1008 AD, Heian period Kyoto from Proper History. Due to this, the city will become a different world, while at the same time be taking root in Proper History and destroying the future.

Meanwhile, the British Lostbelt reveals that the magical energy of a Lostbelt's Fantasy Tree can be used to turn the Lostbelt into a Singularity - a Fantasy into a Reality - through Rayshifting within the Lostbelt itself, with Morgan Le Fay on Proper Human History and the future of the Lostbelt to the version of her within the Lostbelt's past. Turning a Lostbelt into a Singularity requires the Fantasy Tree to wither and die, as long as the Tree remains, nothing can be changed in a Lostbelt; any element added causes history to adjust in real-time, even if it isn't consistent. Only when the tree disappears can there be an opportunity for a fantasy to become reality if one can sustain the "world" afterwards, which she could sustain through the vast magical energy in her Summoner's Throne from her "existence tax" on the lifeforce of her fairies. If the original distortion of history, the origin point and foundation of the Lostbelt, is corrected - in this case, the original "Holy Sword" not being forged - then the Singularity will be resolved and eventually the Lostbelt's contents will never have existed without its Fantasy Tree to sustain it. Consequently, should this Singularity merge with Proper Human History, then its history would become part of Proper History - in this case, Proper History will lack the Concept of the "Holy Sword", Excalibur.

Turning a Lostbelt into a Singularity changes the history of a Lostbelt and make it "real", a new history capable of comparing to Proper Human History with its "strength", becoming a "Lost World". Because they are as real as inhabitants from Proper History, some Lostbelt inhabitants are able to exit a Lostbelt and can emigrate to Proper History without disappearing. However, in the British Lostbelt's case, as the humans of the Lostbelt are not natural lifeforms and with no reproductive ability, and were created back when the Tree was still alive and history still a fantasy, they remain a fantasy that can only exist in the Lost World. Meanwhile, the fairies are real and can exist in Proper History, as they could be born after the Lostbelt became real. As the time before the Tree died is still considered a "fantasy", it allows for an amount of discrepancy, such as sending a Calamity or a person from Proper History back in time, as no matter how much the Fantasy history changes as a result, the beginning of the "real" history when the Tree dies is set in stone. Once the Tree withers, those time-travelled elements disappear as it contradicts the event of the real history, and inhabitants with memories of those contradictions will revert to the previous version of events without the time-displaced elements. However, if those elements do not make any contradictions in history until they reach the time when they were first sent back in time, they can avoid the paradox and prevent disappearing. Despite this, after history becomes "real", if someone from the Singularity recognises an individual from the Lostbelt as something different to what "real" history says, or an individual from the Lostbelt remembers someone from the Singularity, then the individual from the Lostbelt will become someone who "should not exist" and be erased due to the paradox; memories of that individual will, however, remain.

Following the attack on Chaldea in 2017, the bleaching of the world and the declaration of rebellion against the Proper Human History, with the threat of a regression into the Age of Gods and the recreation of the world, the survivors are forced to use an experimental method of navigating through Imaginary Number Space, through the Lostbelts, in order to resolve the incident.

After all of the Lostbelts have been established, the Crypters seek to expand the "domain" of their own Lostbelts, which will eventually clash with the other Lostbelts. The one that is built by greater Human Foundation will end up overtaking the weaker one and use it as "nutrients". This process will allegedly continue, until only one Lostbelt is remaining.

Koyanskaya describes the Proper Human History as "easy mode" and the Lostbelts as "hard mode", though the veracity of her statement has yet to be fully determined.

Similar to the Human Order Foundation Values associated with the Singularities, the Lostbelts have an associated value known as a Lost Depth (異聞深度, Ibun Shindo?). Lost Depth is a rank to display how much the Human Order in a Lostbelt has deviated from that of the Proper Human History.The trees that I mentioned needed someone to look out for them, therefore with their plant they also come with a whole new foundation of creatures that lives their lives normally just like we do but in their ways, but there is also another reason as to why a new foundation is made there [The alien needs people to rule over, that's it], but most importantly is that the alien god will take the most mature tree and use its vessel and incarnate and take over earth.

What is so special about Lostbelt 7?

- It is the last Lostbelt that Chaldea has to destroy to save humanity, anything else was unknown until a certain point.

—----------

Let's Start :

—----------

{Cosmos in The Lostbelt : Lostbelt 1}

[Prologue Intro]

When Kirschtaria Wodime reveals Chaldea is about to emerge from the Imaginary Numbers Sea, Daybit predicts they'll be in the Russian Lostbelt given the karmic bond between the Oprichniki that attacked them three months ago.

[Prediction - Deductive Reasoning]

—----------

{Cosmos in The Lostbelt : Lostbelt 4 Yuga Kshtera}

[Section 11]

In this section, Daybit shows up and saves his friend Peperoncino from a bad situation. The reason he is here is that he noticed during their last meeting that Peperoncino was acting weird, noting how he didn’t mention anything about his own Lostbelt. He acted on intuition rather than logic, or so he says.

[Picture from “Fate/Grand Order From Lostbelt” Manga Chapter 26]

[EU - EF - EP - Abductive Reasoning - Psychoanalysis - Contrasting - Intuition]
—----------
In the same section, a surprised Peperoncino is unable to believe Daybit has traveled to India to help him. It was stated a Crypter can't interfere in another Crypter's affairs, but there is no rule forbidding personal meetings, a loophole Daybit took advantage of to visit India, be it on a whim or due to fellowship. He reveals that, although somewhat expensive, Koyanskaya can be used to travel between Lostbelts.

Seeing Peperoncino without his assigned Servant and fighting alongside the enemy, Daybit is confused about what is going on and the details. Peperoncino reveals that there have been problems with the Lostbelt King, but since the one responsible seems to be one of the Alter Egos, he couldn't comment about that to Kirschtaria. Accepting the disagreements between the Crypter and the Alien God's emissaries, Daybit concludes that Peperoncino is not betraying his comrades.

He changes the subject and asks if Peperoncino can defeat a god. Hearing the Crypter's answer about how futile it is to even try to do something like that, he advises him to change the way you can deal with one: if there is a need that must be met, then there is a way to sabotage said satisfaction. Upon seeing Peperoncino understanding what he needed to do, he decides that it's time for farewells, asking him to keep the meeting a secret from Wodime.

[Overall Insight - Contingencies]
—----------

{Cosmos in The Lostbelt: Lostbelt 7 Nahui Mictlan}

[Section 4]

Tepeu explained that Daybit was the one that brought the concept of God into the Deinos' lives, and once the Deinos started believing in them that automatically created the ability for Gods from Pan Human History (Basically our history) to be summoned inside the Lostbelt which allowed Daybit later to summon Tezcatlipoca who came from the Aztec religion.

[Mass Manipulation - Influence Building - Knowledge Application - Deductive Reasoning - Short Term Planning - Prep Process]

—----------

[Section 6]

Daybit and Ritsuka meet in one of the streets of Chichén Itzá and Ritsuka asks him what his opinion on the other Crypters and he says :

[Background] [Figure]

Daybit	Kadoc's efforts are currently going as well as I expected. Ophelia died for nothing.
Daybit	Akuta's death was expected. Peperoncino died like a dog and was buried with his past.
Daybit	Beryl got what he wanted, and he's the only one. Kirschtaria's plan was always doomed.
Daybit	Yeah, I always figured it'd come down to this.
Daybit	I'm going to return Chaldea to nothingness on my own.

Saying "Yeah, I always figured it'd come down to this" meaning he predicted everything that happened to them and didn't give much care to what happened to them.

[Prediction - Intrapersonal EM]
——————————————————
[Section 6-8]

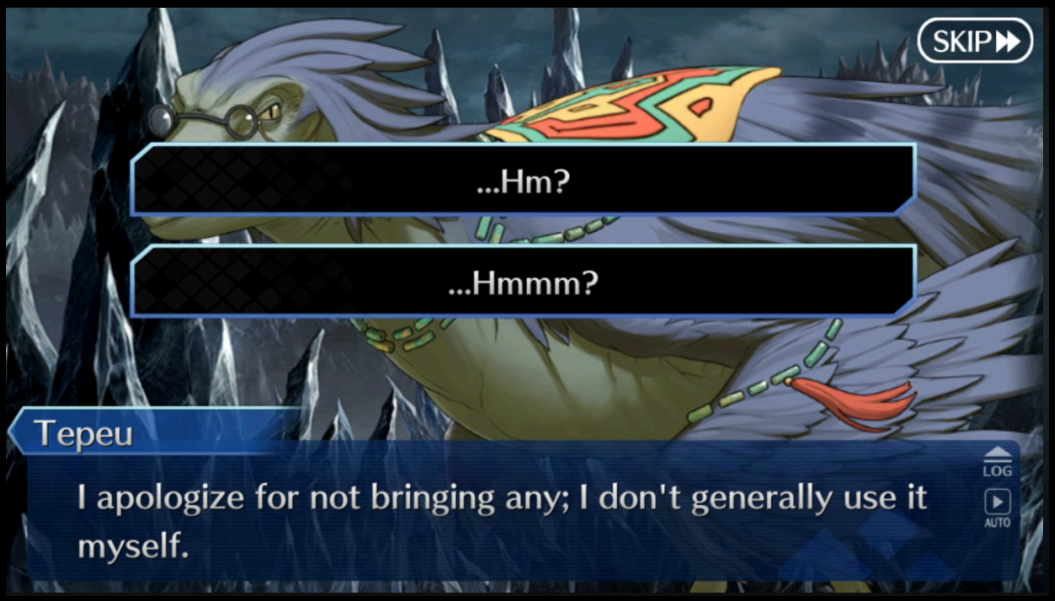

In this chapter, Ritsuka's team were on their way through the Second Underworld -Iztaccíhuatl-, described as a (bone graveyard consisting of a valley of blades and wind). The wind is blowing at ten meters per second, with bursts up to twenty. with wind cold enough to even slow down servants. Tepeu laments that he didn't bring any "honey orchid." with him. That causes the body to generate heat. And something to tie themselves together with.

[Background] [Figure]

Tepeu	Hmm. If only we had some hot pepper water right now...and something to keep us all tied together...

But then Ritsuka remembered something that Daybit had given him and looked through his bag. And found the exact item they needed, Daybit gave them to ritsuka early.

[Background] [Figure]

Daybit	You there. Give me some styptic grass and two of these same yellow cucumbers.
Daybit	Also honey orchards, strong vine rope, more bat ward mint incense, and all the anodized membrane you've got.

[Background] [Figure]

Daybit	There. That ought to cover it. Take it.

Turns out that Daybit gave us the exact needed materials to pass through the second underworld when he met Ritsuka in the streets [In section 6], which later turned out to be exactly what he wanted.

[Concrete Anticipation - Cognitive Discipline - Planning Coverage - Planning Formulation - Long Term Planning - Preparation Process - Field Skills - Deductive Reasoning - Abductive Reasoning]

———————————————

Koyanskaya explained that Daybit was able to replicate her products of guns completely in one day, once he bought them from her and made all the remaining weapons in Mictlan all by himself.

[Background] [Figure]

However, those weapons were loaned out for a trial period to last one month, and not a day longer!

But then that accursed blondie said he'd figured out what he needed to know, and that he'd make the rest himself!

He stole my property, reverse engineered it, and now he's making it for himself! I've never been so absolutely livid with a fellow competitor in my entire life!

[Learning Ability - Crystallized Intelligence - WMI]

———————————————

[Section 9]

Daybit is talking to Kadoc and Sion when he talks about how Wodime “Saw his plans through all the way to the end”. Confusing Kadoc, he started to specify what he meant.

[Background] [Figure]

Daybit	I'm speaking of will, not results.
Daybit	He didn't go about his plan because he was absolutely certain it would work.
Daybit	He managed so much, though he was at death's door the whole time, because he was driven by his will. He had no choice.
Daybit	Even at the end, he never lost that will. He might've wished things ended up differently, but he had no regrets about his actions.
Daybit	That's what I mean when I say he saw his plans through to the end, even if he didn't succeed.

[EU - EP]

——————————————

Daybit drops in, abruptly shifts the conversation from small talk to a tactical lesson: he reveals that Kadoc carries a Sirius Light — a built-in self-destruct device that massively amplifies magical power at the cost of the user's life — and explains how Marisbury intended Crypters to use it as a last-resort insurance to complete Orders (even by destroying a site). He points out real consequences (Ophelia's death, potential destruction of Chaldea), teases Kadoc about using it (noting collateral victims), and frames the Sirius Light as both a bomb and a "wild card" that a master can exploit to force a Servant beyond normal limits. He finishes by saying he came to "see who I'm up against," not to kill them — demonstrating he both knows the stakes and is sizing Kadoc up.

Fate/Grand Order part 2009: México City

[EU - Concrete Anticipation - Deductive Reasoning Abductive Reasoning - Metacognition]

——————————————————

[Section 12]
Koyanskaya revealed that Foreign God deliberately avoided Daybit, not giving him any order. From her judgment, Olga thought of him as somewhat of an equal, maybe even higher. It was then theorized that maybe he wasn't a Crypter at all. This caused Kadoc to remember a file he saw in Olympus.

[Background] [Figure]

Kadoc	Kyrielight, Daybit was a member of Team A. That's not in question.
Kadoc	That said, he was never in the same position as us. He didn't owe the Foreign God anything.
Kadoc	For that matter, the rest of us had never even heard the word "Crypter" until we were brought back to life.
Kadoc	Me, Ophelia, Akuta, Beryl... None of us had heard it before. But it looked like Daybit was already familiar with it.
Kadoc	At the time, I thought that name was like a blood oath sealing our vow to revolt against humanity, but I was wrong.
Kadoc	It was actually the Foreign God who told Kirschtaria that we were to be called Crypters.

He then talked about how for the Crypter to be brought back, they need to resolve the Incineration of Humanity. They had to prove that they had the same power to resolve the Incineration of Humanity incident that Fujimaru and Mash did [But in a simulation made by U-Olga Marie]. But all of them couldn't do it, but Wodime took the task on his own and did it for them. Except for Daybit :

[Background] [Figure]

Kadoc	Anyway, my point is, I never found any mention of Daybit's resurrection.
Kadoc	I'm just guessing here, but...I think Daybit somehow managed to resurrect himself.
Kadoc	Apparently, the Foreign God needed a certain amount of energy to resurrect us. In fact, it took the same amount needed to clear the Incineration of Humanity.
Kadoc	Daybit managed it by generating that energy all on his own. I bet even the Foreign God must've been at a loss.
Kadoc	According to Wodime's records, the Foreign God gave us only minimal support in our Coffins by letting us use Chaldea's summoning system to summon Servants...
Kadoc	...but apparently, Daybit didn't even make use of that.
Kadoc	So even though it was all just a simulation, he still resolved the Incineration of Humanity alone, without a single Servant.

[Strategy Effectiveness- Strategic Thinking - Strategy Complexity - Planning Aim - Improvisation - Observation - Pattern Recognition - Deductive Reasoning - Fluid Intelligence - GAI - Crystallized Intelligence - Lateral Thinking - Abstract Thinking - Overall Adaptability - Decision Making]

——————————————————

[Section 13]

While going through the Third Underworld: Xoxoauhqui, they feared going forward, since they were running low on water. The rest were fine, but Fujimaru and Tepeu would be able to last longer, and they lamented on the fact that they didn't prepare for Xoxoauhqui. Then Kukulcan mentioned how they wished they had gotten a yellow cucumber from Chichén Itzá. Which then causes ritsuka to remember something. And pulled out two yellow cucumbers from their bag that Daybit gave them, along with the rope, and the honey orchid.

Tepeu	It's not your fault, Kukulcan. Almost nobody uses yellow cucumbers these days.
Tepeu	Only a very old shopkeeper would even think to stock them.
Choices	• Hm? • Hmmm?
Sound Effect	▶ 22_ad1177
BGM	▶ Phantom Spirit City
	 [Background] [Figure]

[Concrete Anticipation - Cognitive Discipline - Planning Coverage - Planning Formulation - Long Term Planning - Preparation Process - Field Skills - Deductive Reasoning - Abductive Reasoning]

———————————————

[Section 14]

In this section, Daybit went to Xquic, the archetype of this Lostbelt, and told her to tell him the truth about Mictlān and its history, and to do it in five minutes. And she complied. But didn’t finish what she was saying here since he left, saying that “ he'd already figured it out himself.”

[Auditory WMI - PSI - CPI - FRI - CPI - GAI - IPI - Holistic Thinking - Convergent Thinking]

———————————————

[Section 14-19]

[Daybit’s Plan to Awaken ORT]

Xquic used an ability of her to show us the events that happened one year ago by the time Daybit entered the Lostbelt, Daybit went to meet Xquic to gather information from her and then went into the underworld pilgrimage having completed all the trials in a matter of a few days and fought Camazotez all by himself and got a draw out of him.

Turns out that every year (By humans time) inside the Lostbelt and in the last strata of the underworld and only for a few days, The poisonous gas that fills the eighth and bottom strata disappears once a year for just a few days (Which was the time that Daybit came into the Lostbelt).

After getting a good look at ORT and realizing how much of work he need to do to awaken it because it lack fuel, he decided that he has to wait until next year and rerun the same pilgrimage in the underworld once he is prepared with enough materials to awaken ORT, he realized that it won’t be easy or even possible to do it all by himself therefore he decided to summon a servant that doesn’t care for evil or good but war only.

That’s why he decided to summon Tezcatlipoca through using the land.

[Background] [Figure]

Guess I'd better summon a Servant.

Lostbelt or not, this is still Mictlān. There should be more than enough in the way of catalysts.

Even if I don't count as part of humanity, I can still summon a Servant with the power of the land itself.

A Servant who will respond to my call, who is unconcerned with good and evil, but who still approves of war.

...I've got it. You'll be the one to help me, almighty Tezcatlipoca.

Now, Daybit needs to get high-quality magical circuits to close ORT's wounds.

Tezcatlipoca created an underground path to ORT so that Daybit would go there and use Deinos hearts to close ORT's wounds, but that leaves one issue which is ORT's heart which is the hardest to replace.

Daybit and Tezcatlipoca planned to use Izcali (One of Tezcatlipoca's believers) to turn him a new Tezcatlipoca that should serve as ORT's new heart which will put an order of destruction in ORT's head, Tezcatlipoca started training him for the last year so that he would be ready to be sacrificed by making him think it is the biggest honor in life before he knew that ORT will destroy the planet.

So he'll also be Tezcatlipoca in a year's time, huh? Understood. Make sure you train him well in both body and mind.

[Background] [Figure]

We'll need a clear will and a strong ideology if we're going to give ORT orders.

So we will spend this year furthering our goal of destroying this planet and erasing any trace of humankind.

The gas of the eighth and bottom strata will dissipate in a matter of a few days, meaning Daybit's plan all depends on those few days.

[In section 15] Due to the fact that Kukulkan has left Chichén Itzá to go with Chaldea, that left the city defenseless and Tezcatlipoca took this opportunity to send all of his soldiers into the city and kill as many Deinos so that they gather their hearts and use them later for ORT, destroying the whole city in the process.

[Background] [Figure]

Kill every single one you see! Tezcatlipoca, our lord, requires as many hearts as we can bring him!

Remember, we're doing this all for our sun, and to make México City our eternal home and capital!

And through this attack, they were able to kill the king of dinosaurs and gained enough hearts to close ORT's wounds.

Now it is time to go to the eighth and bottom strata to awaken ORT.

Going through the third underworld, they were attacked by Chaldea (By Koyanskaya more accurately) who were informed of Daybit's location by Ereshkigal, Tezcatlipoca said that he does not see a way to defeat her by himself therefore Daybit decided to go fight her by himself leaving the task of reviving ORT to Tezcatlipoca.

[Background] [Figure]

...I'm surprised to hear a Disciple of the Foreign God ——or at least, someone who enjoyed playing the part of one ——lecturing me on how to be human.

Then again, it seems you're on Chaldea's side now. I'm especially impressed to see that Kadoc formed a contract with you, even if only temporarily.

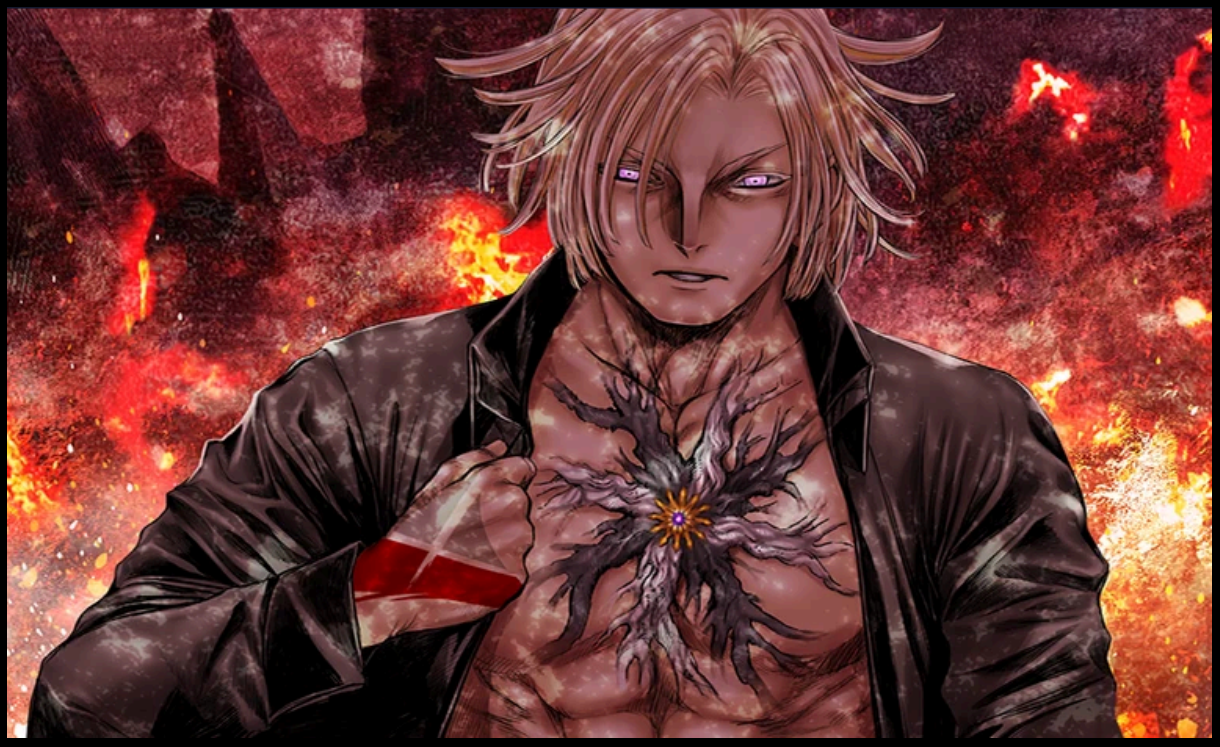

So, they chose to supply a Beast candidate with not one, but two magical energy connections.

I can't muster any surprise at this point, but humans really do walk a razor's edge.

Tezcatlipoca reached for the bottom strata and so does Chaldea, and since Izcalli refused to sacrifice himself to awaken ORT, Tezcatlipoca had no choice but to go fight Chaldea and if possible use Ritsuka as a replacement for ORT's heart.

But all of that turned out to be a misdirection, it was not about getting simply a random heart replacement for ORT, from the very beginning Daybit's plan was to use the heart of the Alien God (U-Olga Maire) as a replacement for ORT's heart.

[In Section 2] U-Olga Marie was fell unconscious in a cave for some unknown reason, but it turns out that the unknown reason was that Tezcatlipoca has ripped off her heart out of her chest while being alive and Daybit took the heart and put it on himself making the impression for U-Olga Marie that her heart is still inside her chest without her knowing the truth.

And Daybit threw himself into the hole that leads to ORT which will consume him and replace ORT's heart, marking his victory against Chaldea.

[Long Term Planning - Planning Invincibility - Planning Coverage - Preparation Process - Strategy Flexibility - Strategy Complexity - Strategy Fortitude - Strategy Logistics - Prediction - Concrete Anticipation - Contingencies - Risk Calculation - Overall AC - Multitasking - Concealment - Misdirection - Fabrication - Tactics

Synergy - Tactics Potency - Tactics Management - Mass Manipulation - Logical Manipulation - Decision Making - Overall Thinking - Fluid Intelligence - Crystallized Intelligence - Overall Unpredictability]

——————————————————

[Section 17]

Daybit explained that he learned driving through online courses.

[Learning Ability - Knowledge Application]

——————————————————

[Section 19]

Daybit started psychologically analyzing U-Olga Marie :

Then again, you were always smart, Olga Marie. You only paled in comparison to your predecessor because he was so absurdly talented.

But an incompetent could never run Chaldea.

That you managed to do so at such a young age is proof of your talent.

But you were unable or unwilling to trust your own abilities, which led to discord with those around you.

[Background] [Figure]

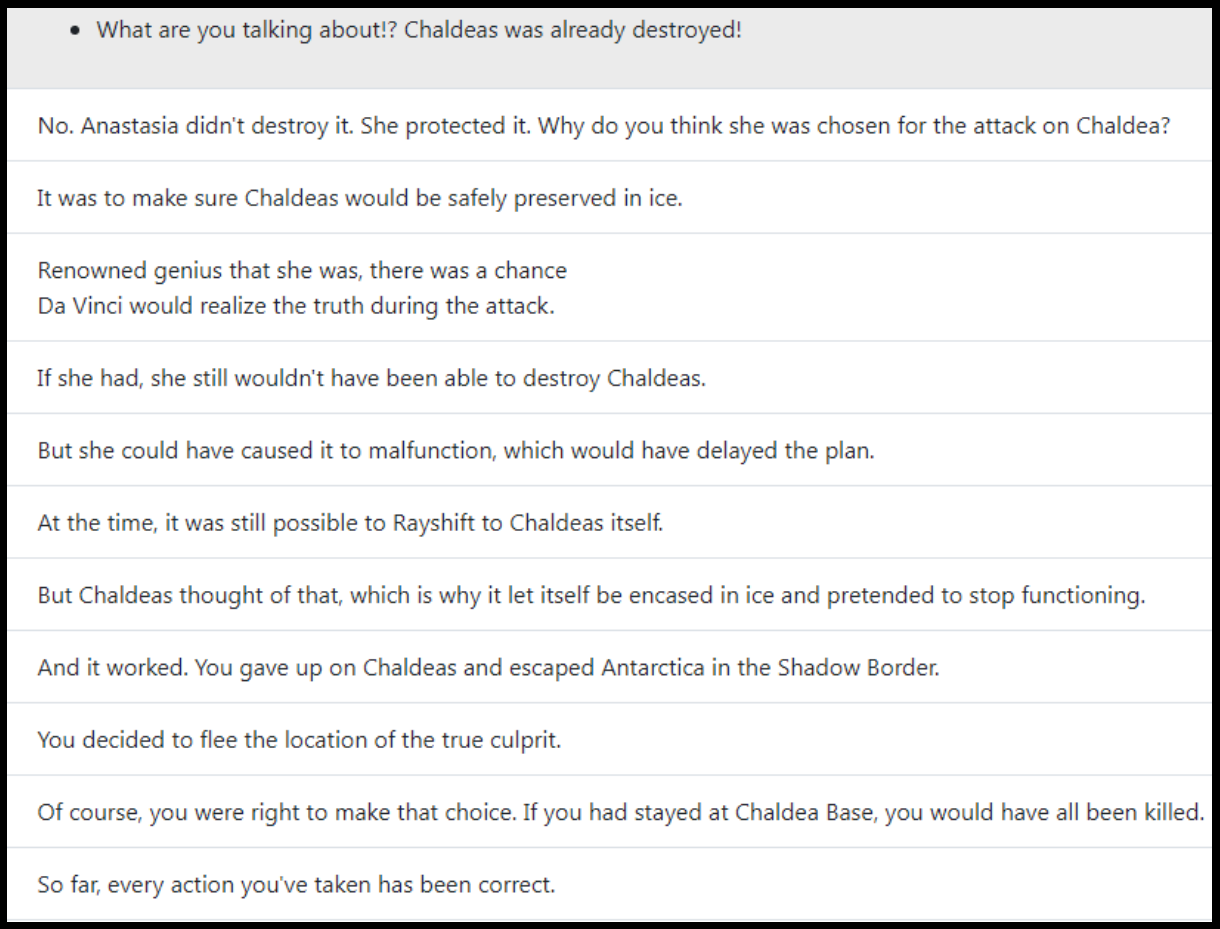

On top of that, you had Lev Lainur manipulating you. He made you dependent on him, and pushed you to put up walls to keep everyone else out.

[Psychoanalysis - Psychological Profiling - EU]

——————————

Lastly he explained all the misconceptions that we had all along saying that everything that happened throughout the story of Cosmos in The Lostbelt were all part of Marisbury's plan :

He then said and I quote :
"...At least, in terms of the test questions Marisbury prepared"

[Overall Insight - Overall Reasoning]
——

[Every statement about him]

[Kadoc Zemlupus in Truam] stated that he is sometimes as smart as Sherlock Holmes.

[IDK]

[Kadoc Zemlupus in Lostbelt 7] stated that as much as Daybit was a genius in comparison with Wodime, he didn’t come from the Astromancy department of the clock tower but came from the Brishsan department.

Brishsan was categorized as the department which studies nonhuman creatures like angels and demons.

[Social Cognition - General Knowledge]