Season 1:

His ritual is the same, almost every single time. He stalks his victims for weeks, finds an opening in their schedule to kidnap them, takes them to a previously set up location (which had been wrapped in plastic to stop any forensic evidence from being left behind) and kills them, after which he cuts them into several roughly equal pieces, puts them in garbage bags and dumps them in the same location in the ocean. (Thinking: Systematic + Planning: Applicability + Methods: Optimization + Behavioural: Consistency and Caution)

Broke into Mike Donovan's car and waited for a presumably long period of time without being detected by anyone. This is after stalking him for weeks, also undetected. (Adversity Capacity: Mental Fortitude, Impulse Management and Cognitive Discipline + Intelligence: Crystallized)

Having a previously prepared location to bring Mike Donovan, he was also able to coerce Mike into driving to that location by keeping a wire wrapped around his neck the entire time while giving him directions, implying that Dexter had memorized this path and could describe it perfectly despite it being dark out. (Cognition: Memory + Strategy: Logistics + Planning: Applicability and Coverage + Tactics: Potency + Coercion: Threats and Assault + Cognition: Memory)

Despite being fairly emotionless at this point in the series he's able to appear extremely affable and charming to keep up his facade. This is shown fairly quickly after his first kill, while he's boating back home he passes a boat full of people whom he greets in an excited and friendly tone. Something his monologue completely contradicts, showing how he's able to enact whatever emotions he wants in any moment despite what he's truly feeling. A few minutes later he arrives home and when walking to his apartment someone off screen greeted him enthusiastically, showing how he's also managed to maintain a level of popularity around his neighbours. (Social Intelligence: Integration and Awareness + Deception: Acting Skill and Disguise + EQ: Facilitation, Realization and Understanding)

Even when he was just a very young boy he managed to kill several animals undetected, some of which being pets. He managed to do this without being caught until he killed the neighbours dog, at which point Harry (a seasoned detective) finally came across a "grave" which Dexter had been using to hide his kills. (Social Intelligence: Integration and Awareness + Deception: Acting Skill and Disguise)

Despite not being fluent in Spanish he's shown to understand it and be able to speak a few phrases competently. Something he's implied to have just picked up on. (Intelligence: Crystallized and Fluid + FSIQ: VCI and FRI)

Brings in donuts everyday as a subtle way to get people to like him more, during this he'll also engage in small talk, and usually make a witty joke of some kind. (Social Intelligence: Awareness, Cognition and Integration + FSIQ: VCI)

Camilla described Dexter as charming, this is especially shown when he goes to see her in the records room, he does this to get access to some old cases, this is despite the fact that she could get into serious trouble for doing this. Dexter also claims it's just for fun, Camilla supposedly believes this and just hands him old murder cases, this is the main way Dexter gains awareness of some of his victims, by solving cold cases, cases that entire teams of detectives couldn't solve. (Social Engineering: Charisma + Behavioural: Cunningness + Deception: Sophistry, Acting Skill and Disguise + Intelligence: Crystallized and Fluid + Thinking: Critical)

Can tell just by the blood spatter patterns what weapon was used to commit a murder and the skill level of the assailant. (Intelligence: Crystallized and Fluid + Insight: Contrasting + Sensory: Observation)

Was stalking Jamie Jaworski from a distance and noticed a unique tattoo on his arm, despite being so far away and only seeing it clearly for at most a few seconds, he was later able to use this to identify Jamie in some footage that obscured his face. (Cognition: Memory and Knowledge Application + FSIQ: VCI and WMI)

Effortlessly picked a locked door in just a few seconds. (Intelligence: Crystallized + FSIQ: VSI)

While searching Jaworski's house, Dexter made sure to put everything back exactly how he found it, even down to the angle at which an object is facing. (FSIQ: VSI, PSI and WMI + Behavioural: Caution)

Despite the busy and extremely loud crowd of people he was able to quickly (and inadvertently) spot a police car a good distance away. (Sensory: Observation + Resistances: Perception)

Figured out The Ice Truck Killer's mindset just by noticing a discrepancy in how the two bodies were found. The first body was cut up normally but had a small incision on the upper part of her leg, the other detectives took this to mean he was interrupted, but Dexter was able to see that he wasn't interrupted given that he seemingly had time to wrap the pieces. The second body was cut up fully and had a piece of bone fully fileted, with this information, Dexter reasoned that the killer was likely experimenting and was having trouble finding his "inspiration". (Insight: Contrasting and Constancy + Psychology: Hot Reading + Foresight: Prediction + Reasoning: Deductive and Causal + Thinking: Analytical)

Despite Doakes being certain that the "cokehead murders" were a crime motivated by a rival dealer, Dexter was able to walk into the crime scene and deduce that the crime was likely one of passion given that the blood spatter indicated that dealer was killed first and quickly while the woman was killed last and slowly. LaGuerta was initially on Doakes' side but after listening to Dexter's argument she was quickly convinced and changed the trajectory of the investigation to look for an ex boyfriend. Dexter was later told by Maria that he was right about the suspect. (Manipulation Methods: Persuasion + Reasoning: Deductive + Thinking: Critical + Intelligence: Crystallized and Fluid + EQ: Engagement and Management + Sensory: Observation)

Got a floorplan of an abandoned construction site and used that to plan Jaworski's murder. He set up a kill room hours prior, in a location he knew Jaworski would be in, he also set up a picture of his victim in an obvious location, something he knew would draw him in so that Dexter could take advantage of Jaworski's curiosity and sneak up on him without him noticing. Dexter also states that Jaworski had been coming to that construction site for weeks, implying that Dexter had stalked him for that long and used that to build a timeline for when he was most likely to be there. (Planning: Intricacies and Formulation + Strategy: Logistics + Field Skills: Trap Setting and Information Gathering + Foresight: Prediction and Field Envisioning + FSIQ: VSI + Intelligence (Gardner's Theory): Spatial + EQ: Understanding and Facilitation + Behavioural: Consistency + Psychology: Psychological Profiling + Adversity Capacity: Impulse Management)

Used Maria's infatuation with him to his advantage, allowing him to leave a crime scene early. (Manipulation Methods: Seduction + EQ: Perception and Facilitation)

Over the course of his 12 years of being a blood spatter analyst he'd been a part of 2,103 cases exactly, something he mentions in court. To which one of the lawyers said "give or take" when Dexter reiterated that he had been involved in exactly that many cases. (Intelligence: Crystallized + FSIQ: VCI + Thinking: Analytical)

Despite being in court for his real job, after he was finished he observed a family crying on a nearby bench, he followed one of them into a courtroom "sensing opportunity" which is how he found his next victim "Matt Chambers", Matt had murdered someone in a hit and run, he was crying on the stand, trying to show some level of guilt he even had a plan laid out so he couldn't be charged, claiming that he had reported his car missing hours before the murder. However, despite others clearly buying the act, Dexter wasn't. (Resistances: Dissonance and Manipulation + Judgment: Situational Awareness and Intuition + Thinking: Non-Linear and Critical + EQ: Perception and Understanding + FSIQ: VCI + Social Intelligence: Awareness and Cognition)

Arrived at a seeming suicide scene, however just mere seconds of being on the scene he was able to see that the victims body seemed to display damage that could only happen from a 50 to 60 foot drop, he was able to rule out that he had truly fallen to his death at this scene because the causeway was only about 40 feet, he quickly came up with the possibility that he had fallen from a separate causeway, one that could've caused this kind of damage. (Thinking: Critical and Convergent + Intelligence (Gardner's Theory): Logical-Mathematical + Sensory: Observation)

He was also able to spot a very small object poking out of the victims mouth, something that all the other detectives had missed. (Sensory: Observation)

Was taking photos of an attempted murder scene and after reviewing the photos he noticed that the blood had a strange rectangular shape on the carpet, he used this to figure out that the victims phone had slid under the couch. (Sensory: Observation and Perception)

Although he claimed he wasn't sure, he knew just by looking at the refrigerated truck parked well over 40 feet away, was the same truck he had chased the night before. (Sensory: Observation and Perception)

Recreated an entire murder scene just by the blood spatter left behind. He was also able to notice a tiny drop of blood a few meters away, he knew based on the previous blood spatter that the victim never made it over to the place that blood was, meaning it was likely the suspect's blood. Dexter used this to prove that Cervantes was responsible for the murder of an undercover cop and his wife. (Sensory: Observation and Perception + Intelligence: Crystallized + Intelligence (Gardner's Theory): Logical-Mathematical + FSIQ: VSI + Reasoning: Deductive and Cause and Effect + Thinking: Critical)

Created a backstory tailored specifically for Matt Chambers in a short amount of time. He recalled Matt referencing a drinking problem in court and presumably followed him into a bar where he saw Matt drinking, showing that he had lied about his recovery. Dexter then sat next to him and started a dialogue, this dialogue led to Matt asking about him, Dexter then claimed that he recently moved down to Miami to get away from his ex-wife who said he “drank too much”. To further convince Matt of his deception, he also changed his usual body language and diction, Dexter slurred his words ever so slightly and sat in a poor posture. Something he knew was consistent for someone who claims to have “a drinking problem”. During this conversation, Matt had reacted negatively to something happening on the TV, Dexter picked up on this and used it to further build Matt's trust with him, saying “I thought I was the only one who hated the Hurricanes”, this is also impressive given that Dexter doesn’t watch sports, meaning he either noticed what teams were playing and extrapolated which team Matt was against, or he has this kind of information on standby just in case he needs it for something like this. This entire conversation was a tactic employed by Dexter to gain a deeper insight into his victim, during the course of the conversation Dexter successfully extracted that Matt wasn’t from Miami, he moves around a lot (which he used to figure out that he’d likely committed similar crimes before), he doesn’t feel guilty and has a history of driving while drunk, all this in the span of a few minutes. He also used this as an opportunity to get his hands on some of Matt's fingerprints by sneakily taking his glass after he had walked away. After doing this, he quickly discovers that Matt has killed and/or injured dozens of people prior to this incident and uses an alias to get away with it each time. (Planning: Process, Versatility, Formulation and Applicability + Field Skills: Trap Setting and Information Gathering + Strategy: Logistics and Efficiency + Unpredictability: Creativity + Counteraction: Improvising + Social Intelligence: Awareness and Integration + Deception: Fabrication, Acting Skill, Concealment and Disguise + Social Engineering: Influence Building + Manipulation: Indirect and Individual + EQ: Perception, Understanding and Facilitation + Adaptability: Cognitive + Insight: Constancy and Contrasting + Psychology: Psychological Profiling, Psychological Insight, Cold Reading and Hot Reading + Judgment: Situational Awareness)

Knew that a victim's fingertips were cut off after she was already dead because of the “skin gloving around the joints”. (Intelligence: Crystallized + Sensory: Observation and Perception)

Constantly able to intimidate others into confessing their crimes when they are on his table, this is shown with Matt. Initially he claimed he was set up, but soon after, Dexter got him to admit that he had been the one to kill Alex. (Coercion: Assault and Threats)

His kills usually take place late at night, despite this he’s able to go to work the next day and perform at his usual capacity despite his lower amount of sleep. (Adversity Capacity: Perseverance)

Kept his face scrunched in a sorrowful position for two hours straight in order to convince others that he was grieving, despite, at this point, not understanding the emotion very well.

(Adversity Capacity: Mental Fortitude, Impulse Management, Perseverance and Cognitive Discipline + Deception: Acting Skill and Disguise)

Knew just based on crime scene photos that Jeremy had murdered a boy on purpose (this is despite the coroner's analysis that the knife strokes were impulsive and random, Dexter on the other hand, noticed that the cuts targeted too many major arteries. (He managed to do this only with the up close pictures of the body)) (Intelligence: Crystallized + FSIQ: VSI + Thinking: Critical and Analytical)

Claims to have a “green thumb”, and even offers a suggestion on how to maintain Rita’s lemon tree with a specific type of fertilizer. (Intelligence: Crystallized + Intelligence (Gardner’s Theory): Naturalistic)

Able to figure out the Ice Truck Killer's motive for placing the victim's body in a hockey arena. Saying it’s like he’s metaphorically trying to show “us” and all of Miami his “work” by placing it in a hockey stadium with 20,000+ seats. (Thinking: Critical, Holistic, Analytical, Analogical and Abstract + Intelligence: Crystallized + Cognition: Knowledge Application)

Stationed himself in the same place Jeremy murdered his first victim years ago under the assumption that he would take his next victim to the same place in an attempt to ritualize his first kill, he was proven right. (Foresight: Field Envisioning, Prediction and Preclusion + Psychology: Psychological Profiling + Judgment: Situational Awareness + Intelligence: Fluid + Thinking: Critical, Analytical and Holistic)

Deactivated the lights in Jeremy’s halfway house, but kept specific lights on, lights that he knew would obscure Jeremy’s vision of Dexter’s face. Even when he attacked Jeremy he made sure to do so when his back was turned then he positioned him into a place where the lights shone right into Jeremy’s face, making it impossible to see Dexter clearly. Meaning Dexter likely memorized the layout of the building and which lights he should activate accounting for Jeremy’s likely position. (Strategy: Logistics, Alignment and Efficiency + Planning: Intricacies, Formulation, Applicability and Coverage + Field Skills: Trap Setting and Risk Calculation + Counteraction: Field Navigation + Foresight: Field Envisioning + Cognition: Memory + Judgment: Situational Awareness + Thinking: Analytical and Holistic + FSIQ: VSI)

Was called to crime scene and was asked to look at a disembodied hand left on a beach chair, he was asked if it was left behind by the Ice Truck Killer and Dexter gave his first impression analysis on the crime scene, noting that the hand had blood pooling around it and it was a male victim, two things that contradicted the Ice Truck Killer’s M.O (the presence of blood and the gender of the victim), however he does note the cut had been surgically performed around the carpals which did point to it being the same killer. After this, Batista showed Dexter a postcard the killer had left behind, the postcard seemingly emulated a memory from Dexter's childhood, something he was able to recall and recheck his photo album for confirmation. After making this connection he's able to start recognizing every crime scene the Ice Truck Killer creates as one that is somehow related to a childhood memory of his and after the second body part (a foot next to a soccer ball) shows up he realizes that the Ice Truck Killer is aware of Dexter's dark secrets and in Dexter's own words "isn't corrupting the happy memories of his youth, he's showing the hidden truth behind them". (Thinking: Critical, Analytical, Holistic and Abstract + Reasoning: Inductive and Abductive + Sensory: Observation + Cognition: Memory + Insight: Contrasting)

Stated multiple times to be the best blood spatter analyst in the state.

Noticed that both the hand and the foot (despite being found a day apart) had the same level of decomposition which meant that it was likely that Tony Tucci was still alive. (Reasoning: Abductive + Thinking: Critical and Analytical + Sensory: Observation + Intelligence: Crystallized)

Gave the police force a purposefully "bad" lead that he knew would be extremely time consuming to distract them from solving the Ice Truck Killer case, however the "lead" was also based on a correct observation (albeit one he knew to be a wild goose chase) being that the places the Ice Truck Killer chose to dump the bodies were places that had changed in some way (Like the beach changing its name). (Deception: Misdirection, Concealment and Information Control + Manipulation: Indirect and Mass + Sensory: Observation + Thinking: Critical, Analytical, Associative and Abstract)

Even when he was just a kid he was faking his emotions so skillfully to the point that even Harry (a trained and highly experienced detective) was unable to recognize that Dexter was faking it until he outright told him, in fact; Dexter himself even said that he was getting an allergy attack and was bored out of his mind and yet he was able to fake joy convincingly. (EQ: Facilitation, Engagement and Management + Social Intelligence: Awareness and Integration + Deception: Acting Skill and Disguise + Adversity Capacity: Stress Tolerance and Cognitive Discipline)

Sent Debra a message through dispatch (anonymously) and told her where to find Tucci, he did this in an effort to advance her career and get her off "surveillance tape duty". Despite the fact that La Guerta (her boss) seems to dislike her, he was successful in this. (Psychological Warfare: Demoralization and Reinforcements + Manipulation: Logical + Deception: Sophistry and Information Control + Strategy: Efficiency)

Through a single conversation he managed to extract enough information relating to a “coyote” that he could find their names in the police database, he did this by asking if there were any suspects and after the man mentioned that there isn’t enough evidence for a conviction or a warrant he extrapolated that they likely tried to get warrants and were denied which meant that he could get the suspects name himself by looking in the system. After this he got the list of people and quickly eliminated 4/5 of the suspects via only one being remotely close to a place one of the coyote’s victims were supposed to drop off money, and after walking through the suspects junk yard he analyzed his surrounding and observed that there were no neighbours and a limited amount of foot traffic which made it more likely that he was the one. (Social Intelligence: Cognition and Integration + Reasoning: Deductive and Abductive + Thinking: Critical, Analytical and Convergent + Field Skills: Information Gathering)

He was caught by Jorge while walking through his “private junk yard” and in response he quickly said that he was just looking for a car part, said the car part was also very specific and would have likely required some type of heavy prior knowledge of cars/mechanics. He also continued the conversation, acting affably and building up his disguise by talking about his supposed “restoration” of a car. On the way out he kept talking to Jorge, possibly trying to get something out of him, he noticed after he pulled out his keys that he had a “floater” attached which Dexter used to reason that he likely had a boat, he then centred his small talk around boats, fishing, etc. likely in the hopes of finding out if Jorge had a boat that could transport people, although he ended up lying; Dexter was able to see through this anyway and find Jorge’s boat which let him find two burner phones aboard, one of which matched a number that had been used to contact a victim's family which proved he was guilty. (Deception: Misdirection, Fabrication, Acting Skill, Concealment and Disguise + Social Intelligence: Awareness, Cognition and Integration + Manipulation Methods: Gaslighting + Sensory: Observation + Field Skills: Information Gathering + Strategy: Logistics, Flexibility and Efficiency + Adversity Capacity: Mental Fortitude and Perseverance + Intelligence: Crystallized + FSIQ - VCI: Information and Comprehension + Thinking: Critical and Analytical + Reasoning: Deductive)

Set up dozens of candles along a linear path to lure Jorge into a secluded location. (Foresight: Field Envisioning + Manipulation: Direct)

To Dexter’s annoyance Batista actually considers Dexter his friend without him even trying to or even understanding why he feels that way. (Social Engineering: Influence Building and Charisma)

Season 2:

After Doakes appears in his office he starts say things like “you finally decided to fight back”, to which Dexter responds with telling him that he’s not going to respond to that in the interest of making sure Doakes can’t record him on a hidden tape recorder, something he assumed Doakes had running, however, after that Doakes starts talking about how he had tried several methods to dig into Dexter’s past, some of which he implied to be illegal, to which Dexter immediately uses this to reason that there isn’t a tape recorder running after all, which allowed him to speak a little more openly and use it to his advantage. After gloating a little he headbutt Doakes, stunning him long enough for him to leave his office and casually walk out into the hall, Dexter knew Doakes would be blinded by rage and rush out to attack him in retaliation in front of everyone, which resulted in Doakes being suspended. When Angel asked what happened, Dexter made a conscious effort to breath heavily (which implied an adrenaline rush), and act confused and scared while claiming “he just jumped me” and “he’s always had it out for me”.

Season 3:

Miguel wanted to loop his brother Ramon into the fact that Dexter killed Freebo but Dexter didn't want to because he saw Ramon as a loose cannon. So Dexter devised a plan to show Miguel why Ramon shouldn't be trusted with this.

1. The first step was to call Ramon anonymously with tips about Freebo, asking to meet up at a bar to exchange information. Something Dexter obviously had no intention of showing up to, he knew that the frustration of having his time wasted, his grief over his brother's death and his coincidental location being at a bar would inevitably lead to him drinking and getting drunk.
2. This led to Miguel showing up at the bar and bringing Dexter along, something Dexter agreed to, purely because he knew it would further upset Ramon if he saw Dexter there, Ramon inevitably got angry and drunkenly pushed Dexter away, to which Miguel told Dexter he could go and that he'd handle it himself, Dexter acted concerned but started to walk away.
3. Before he left, he got the attention of a bouncer and told him that Ramon had just grabbed a girl and that he thought he saw a gun, this led to the bouncer getting up and putting his hand on Ramon's shoulder to get his attention, which led to him swinging on the bouncer and showing Miguel how impulsive and dangerous his brother can be.

Season 4:

When Rita went to his apartment to "find what he was hiding"/why he'd keep his apartment despite the fact that they're married she found a crate in his closet, Dexter walked in on her sitting on his bed staring at said crate with her saying that she was going to break the lock but was "too afraid of what she might find" Dexter remained calm and offered to open the crate for her to see, when she agreed he unlocked the crate and showed her what seemed to be a rifle and some ammo on top of a white cloth, Dexter claimed it was Harry's and that he didn't feel comfortable leaving it in the house with the kids which is why he kept it here. This provided a possible explanation as to why he kept his apartment, made logical sense for why the crate would be locked, and furthermore, he actually does keep his kill tools in that crate (knives, scalpels, syringes, bonesaws, etc) but he keeps it under the white cloth, meaning this gun is meant to be cover so that if anyone was curious and opened the crate the gun would likely satisfy their curiosity and wouldn't find the incriminating evidence underneath and in Rita's case, it worked. (Deception: Misdirection, Sophistry, Acting Skill and Concealment + Field Skills: Contingencies + Counteraction: Trap Evasion and Improvising + Foresight: Preclusion + EQ: Engagement, Facilitation and Management)

Season 7:

After kidnapping Estrada, he says something that makes Dexter realize that he was being set up by La Guerta, she was the one that got Estrada out early and banked on Dexter not being able to resist killing him. This led to him narrowly escaping several police coming to catch him in the act. A day later, the police knock on Dexter's door and take him in under the suspicion that he's a the Bay Harbour Butcher, when he's led through the precinct everyone is shocked and some people (such as Angel) are actively defending him and trying to get Lag Guerta to uncuff him, during this Dexter is acting clueless as he's led to an interrogation room where Angel sits in, actively defending Dexter any chance he got. (Social Engineering: Influence + Social Intelligence: Cognition + EQ: Facilitation, Management and Engagement)

1. La Guerta pulled out a file of evidence, showing pictures she had gathered of Dexter taking garbage bags onto his boat which she claimed were Estrada's body parts, Dexter quickly countered by saying that it was ice for any fish he caught because his cooler broke. (Foresight: Concrete Anticipation and Preclusion + Deception: Fabrication, Acting Skills and Information Control + EQ: Facilitation, Management and Engagement)

2. When she showed an image of him throwing some bags in a dumpster she claimed it had a piece of Estrada's shirt with some blood on it, along with his wallet. Dexter acted shocked like he genuinely didn't know what she was talking about and went on to say that it was his dinner he had thrown away, he even provided a specific restaurant name and said they could "check". Afterwards he turned to Angel and reinforced his innocence by taking advantage of their relationship "Angel you gotta believe me". Foresight: Concrete Anticipation and Preclusion + Deception: Fabrication, Sophistry, Acting Skills and Information Control + Social Engineering: Influence and Influence Building + Social Intelligence: Awareness and Cognition + Manipulation: Emotional, Logical and Direct + Manipulation Methods: Gaslighting, Triangulation and Persuasion + Psychological Warfare: Reinforcements + EQ: Facilitation, Management and Engagement)
3. After all this, La Guerta basically condemned Dexter and brought up how he must've framed Doakes and how he betrayed everyone around him. To which Dexter took advantage of her grief over Doakes and stated that this was a desperate attempt to prove that her friend and colleague (Doakes) wasn't a "cold blooded killer", he then started to bring up their personal relationship in an effort to show how her judgment is compromised, once he's laid all this out, Angel seemingly nods in agreement, showing that despite this seemingly compelling evidence, Dexter was able to turn the tide in his favour. (Deception: Misdirection and Acting Skills + Social Intelligence: Awareness + Manipulation: Emotional, Logical, Indirect and Direct + Manipulation Methods: Triangulation, Scapegoating and Smearing + Psychological Warfare: Abusing Insecurities, Emotional Inducement, Demoralization and Reinforcements + EQ: Perception, Understanding, Facilitation, Management and Engagement)
4. Finally Masuka and Deb walk in, and it's at this point that we realize that Dexter had planned this entire situation. Masuka said that he reran the blood on Estrada's shirt and found that it's a piece of his shirt that was put in the evidence lockup when he was first brought in over 40 years ago, which means that Dexter broke into the precinct's evidence lockup, stole the wallet and the shirt without anyone knowing, somehow placed La Guerta's fingerprint on the wallet, purposefully placed the evidence in a trash bag that he knew La Guerta would search, allowed her to photograph him, all so he could destroy her reputation and make it more difficult for her to investigate him as well as make her less reliable, especially on top of all the reasons Dexter gave for her wanting to prove that Doakes wasn't the real Bay Harbour Butcher. (Deception: Acting Skills + Manipulation: Indirect, Logical, Emotional and Mass + Manipulation Methods: Scapegoating and Smearing + Field Skills: Trap Setting and Risk Calculation + Counteraction: Trap Evasion, Improvising and Tactical Responsiveness + Strategy: Flexibility, Complexity and
