This document was created due to the request of a guy who thinks he's smarter than me (he's a serial killer so don't believe what he's saying) and due to me wanting excuses to postpone the Great Doctor who document. But also this document is here to increase the validity of general SCD scaling. Rick And Morty in earlier days of SCD was a verse that was scaled near the highest in SCD due to a misunderstanding of statements by Rick and general assumptions. Then by many people it became considered one of the weakest verses that relies and FSIQ & Intellect to hold a chance. While I agree Rick Sanchez isn't that high in General outsmarting. I do believe Evil Morty from the same verse is far far to underrated and actually should be considered in smart characters debates.

Journey to the citadel:

•During the time he travelled with Rick he would have to deal with being verbally abused constantly, being put in dangerous life threatening situations and having diamonds shoved up his rear end. Yet during all this he didn't have a mental breakdown nor have any bad PTSD.
(Mental fortitude, stress tolerance & perseverance)

•Morty Understands how Rick views Morty, Morty is meant to be in awe of their intelligence due to their own narcissism and need for people to be impressed by them and constant validation by people not as smart as them. With this understanding Morty can create a plan. In a second after Morty had just got in an argument with Rick and had enough of Rick's narcissism. So he formulated a plan to get a life within the finite curve. In second, he instantly puts on a calmer act and tells him "I'm sorry I'm such a high maintenance Morty" then offers him a drink. Morty puts on the calmer act to adapt to the situation by putting on the act and telling Rick he's sorry. Rick would naturally assume due to his narcissism that Morty understands his annoyance and would listen to his suggestion and have a drink. This tactic makes it more likely for Rick to listen to Morty and less likely he ignores him. While Rick is drinking, Morty is perfecting his technological eyepatch. Morty in a couple hours was able to learn technology better than all of humanity from Rick's notes and had no trouble comprehending it. Then applying the knowledge to making his eyepatch. Also creating The eyepatch which uses Rick's technology is more complex than all human technology and Creating a device like it would be similar to a visual puzzle. As you'd have to visualise the positioning of the lord of the wiring and where the electricity would move. This makes this a VSI & WMI feat. Also a PSI & VCI feat as he was able to read through Rick's Notes (which he's been perfecting for 70 years) in a couple hours and fully comprehend it without problem. Which shows great comprehension & Learning ability. Then when he gets down stairs Rick is very drunk and this means he can do surgery on him. Using the advanced knowledge he had gained from Rick's notes he was able to do surgery on Rick so that half his body was technology and his brain would have computer circuits that controlled his entire Cognition. Then he would go to the finite curve information office. When there he gets his mind controlled Rick (who I'll just call Evil Rick) to murder everyone at the office. This would conceal the fact they were ever there. Then they would delete himself from the database of all morty's and Evil Rick from the database of Rick. This would make him completely unknown and Nobody in the infinite number of people in the finite curve would have knowledge of him and Evil Rick. This would work for the next part of the plan as he knew the power of the multiverse and just power in general the Finite curve had and he needed to make sure they wouldn't use it against him.

Preparation process: The Construction & falsification

Firstly he needs someone to take the blame for his crimes, by gathering info on the council of ricks and the finite curve history. From this he finds out that C-137 Rick is the Rick most hated by the curve due to him not being on board with the entire idea of the curve itself. This is the best to blame for the initial steps of the plan. Next he publically murders 27 Different Rick's across the multiverse and kidnaps Morty. He then hacks Rick C-137's portal gun and fabricates multiple locations in his Portal gun history that match with the time and location of several of the murders. Which will cause the council of Ricks to be misdirected that Rick C-137 was the murderer. He also puts a source in the portal gun that can be tracked to his base which works as a trap later on. During all this He's building a giant building where it'll appear to be Evil Rick's base but he needs to conceal this base. He understands that Rick Sanchez cognitive ability is so high that it has its own unique Brain Waves which multiple galactic organisations can track down and use to locate Rick himself. Morty is aware that he's probably comparable if not more impressive in Cognitive ability than Rick himself so the same logic applies to him (plus he has Evil Rick with him who still has Rick's brain with him). To shield against this flaw he kidnaps a lot of normal Morty's to disguise his and Evil Rick's Cognition from detection.

Plus he kidnaps all these morty's in complete secrecy despite the amount he kidnapped. But how many Morty's did he kidnap? Well.... Since you asked.

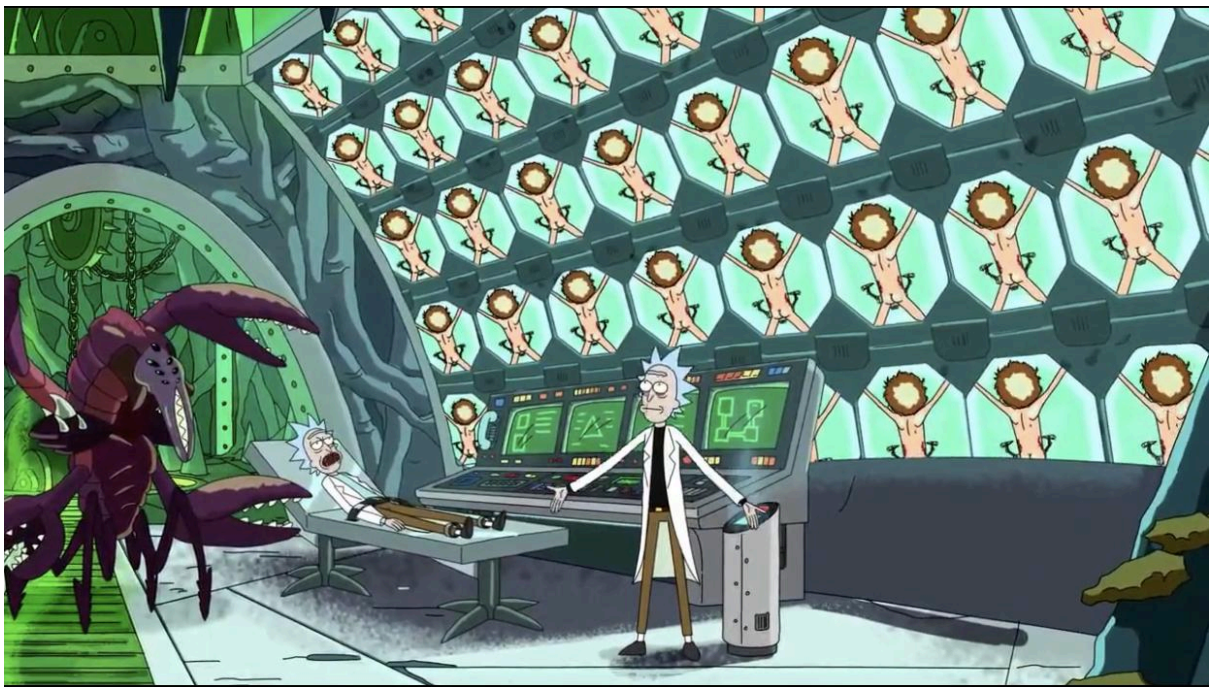

These are images of all the Morty's that appear in his secret base. These are presumably all Morty's that Evil Morty Kidnapped in complete secrecy. By counting all the Morty's attached to the base in the first image we can count 432 Morty's (This might not be exact as some of the Morty's are covered by clouds but I tried my best with such a small image) and considering this is just one side. We can double it which makes it 864 morty's on the outside. And in the other two images there are 26 Morty's which equals 890 Morty's in total kidnapped by Evil Morty in complete secrecy. We do have to minus 27 as the 27 ricks killed had their morty's stolen. Making it 863 Morty's in complete secrecy. You have to realise that to kidnap all these Morty's means going to 863 different universes without any of the BILLIONS of Rick's noticing someone else having such impressive technology and using it for such a weird goal. This is an incredibly impressive concealment as If one Rick noticed him travelling to all these universes they would murder him due to someone other than Rick being the smartest in the universe. He was able to conceal this by using evil Rick to kidnap them all. During these kidnappings he makes sure that the 26 Morty's he kept inside the building were more stupid and more likely to form a belief in a higher. This will ensure a later part of the plan he anticipates will go according to how he expects it to plan out. During this Whenever Evil Rick's mind control fails he can always improve it to keep him under control, showing resilience in his strategy. Finally we need to talk about the construction of his base and the technology/knowledge required for it.

These images show every part of the building that we see on screen. Now I dunno how you would figure out the size of the building since there's nothing to compare it to in the images. So I have to find something similar In real life. The best I could find is the Gherkin located in London.

I know it obviously it's a lot taller but it's also a lot thinner meaning the area is probably similar (like comparing me to when I was a baby, I was thicker but shorter as a baby but I'm Taller and thinner now). Now the area of the Gherkin is 64,470 square metres or 693,900 Square feet, I'll assume a low ball in comparison for Evil Morty's base to this building. Meaning I assume it's 64,000 square metres or 196,850 square feet. This would be how much Morty would have to visualise when creating the base. Since when construing a building you usually visualise the building you're going to create and since Morty created the base we can assume a month since he hasn't aged. The amount of the base he would have to visualise and Remember would practically be a giant blueprint of the base inside his mind. This is Incredibly Impressive VSI & WMI as he practically has an image of every room, every bit of technology in the base and basically the general design of a base that's 64,000 square metres in size.

Also there's the fact that the technology in this base is more complex than everything ever created in human history up to this point (by about 2014). Now everything is prepared, Now let's get onto the execution

The Execution: Elimination and fabrication

Now this area of this plan is completely anticipated by Evil Morty. This can all be anticipated due to How intimately Evil Morty understands Rick and how he knows how he will act in all situations. (I'll get to How well Evil Morty understands Rick & Morty later). He expects that C-137 Rick will Bring his Morty with him to the curve, then he will talk about the curve and its functions and how every Rick usually has a Morty. Then he anticipates that without Rick's Permission The council would look at his portal gun history and Then due to the falsification Morty did of Rick's portal gun being to all the locations and times of the murders. The Council counted him guilty and C-137 would run away with Morty and then eventually Escape the Council. He then predicts Rick will Check his portal gun and see how it's been hacked and will track the source of who stole it and track it back to his base. He also expects Rick will explain that For Rick's to conceal himself they use Morty's dumber brain waves to hide their own unique brain waves. He knows that this will annoy Morty, which works for a later part of the plan. Also the Hundreds of Morty's on the outside make sure only C-137 Rick can locate him as he has the source in the portal gun. Then with Evil Rick who's being Technologically controlled he pretends to be The Sidekick of Evil Rick by having Evil Rick do all the talking and him acting Slightly depressed but mostly emotionless. Then Evil Rick kidnaps Rick and ties him to a chair. He tells Rick that he wants to take over the finite curve and to do this he'll take the brains of a bunch of the smartest Rick's and put them into his brain making him the smartest and most powerful. Him saying the "smartest Ricks" makes C-137 more likely to accept this as the actual plan of the situation as due to him believing he's "The Rickest Rick" he also believes he's above all the other ricks and would accept him being the smartest. This shields against The possibility of C-137 Deducing the real plan with Evil Morty. During this he scans Rick Sanchez brain for information. Meanwhile with Evil Morty who's still acting Emotionless and slightly depressed. He's taking Morty to his cell, he tells Morty when he reaches "it would be pointless, there's no chance of Morty defeating a Rick". This provokes Morty a little and makes him more likely to do the next step of the plan (I'll get to that shortly). Evil Morty then Puts Morty inside With the other Morty's. The other Morty's have been in there for a couple weeks with barely any food or hygiene and they would've grown a hatred for Rick. The ones with the most despair would form a worship towards a fake Morty god who will set them free. As Evil Morty understands that when in moments of extreme despair you turn to a higher power for hope and since Morty isn't religious and he wishes he was stronger than he is (more explanation on Evil Morty's Understanding later), therefore he would turn to a potential perfect version of himself for hope. From this understanding of Morty Is how Evil Morty predicts that the Morty's in only a few weeks of despair formulated a practical Religion around a potential version of themselves. Now Evil Morty purposely did this by having Evil Rick put them in the Unhygienic, dark and despair filled Room. Plus the prospect that Rick, the person they care about the most, is such a horrible thing to them. Gives them extreme levels of despair. Which indirectly causes them all to turn to creating this religion and makes a lot of the Morty's heavily content with their situation and basically making them ignore their despair. Which counts as not just Indirect mass Manipulation of all the Morty's but also a form of insanity inducement as he caused them all to basically remove their despair by making them believe in a potential higher power. Next C-137 Morty who's due to being provoked about Morty's not comparable to a Rick. He Instantly takes charge of the Morty's locked in the room and tells them that he doesn't have to be submissive to Ricks and that they can be their own person without Rick. All the Morty's due to seeing his charisma and charge believes he's the Perfect Morty they've believed in and Do everything he says. They then charge down the door and Kill Evil Rick. From here the council of ricks send spaceships to take all the morty's to have life on the curve, here Morty blends into the crowd fabricating the lie that he's part of the crowd of Morty's kidnapped. He then destroys his eye patch and walks off into the spaceship and gets a life on the curve.
The main aims of this plan is to: Free a bunch of Morty's from there Rick, Gain a life on the citadel as an unknown recently saved Morty & kill his Original Rick. Every single step of his plan/strategy was executed to absolute perfection, including everything he foresaw. It was anticipated to the exact detail with no flaws at all. He had also before hand calculated the amount of power and the risk's of the finite curve and how bad it would be if any of the steps failed. If any of his steps failed The finite curve woudk torture if not execute him for cognitively modifying Rick. This plan wasn't discovered by anybody, not even the possibility of this plan being possible was considered by any of the Rick's or Morty involved and he kept himself completely secret from everyone. This entire plan solved the problem he had with living with Rick and got him a life by himself on the citadel of Rick's.

Escape of the finite curve:

This plan and the journey to the citadel are the same plan but are simply superset incracies. Also the usurpation of the election is planning versatility as he adapts his plan due to the environment of the citadel and takes advantage of the fact there's an election happening.

Preparation process: Usurping the the election

This is the first Presidential election of the Citadel of Ricks, so he knew he had to steal this opportunity to become a Morty president before Rick steals it and For the rest of history. The presidents are all just variants of Rick Sanchez for the rest of time. So he studies the Society in the finite curve. So in less than a month he's able to gather enough info to give him a complete understanding of the society of the Citadel of Ricks. From here he takes up the identity of "Candidate Morty" and gathers more and more Morty's to fuel his candidacy. During his rise to power a bunch of the citadel was destroyed during the events of Rickshank Redemption. Despite millions of people dying he was to survive and keep his candidacy going. During all this he is able to consistently keep up the act of a Kind, loving Morty who cares for all Ricks and Morty's.

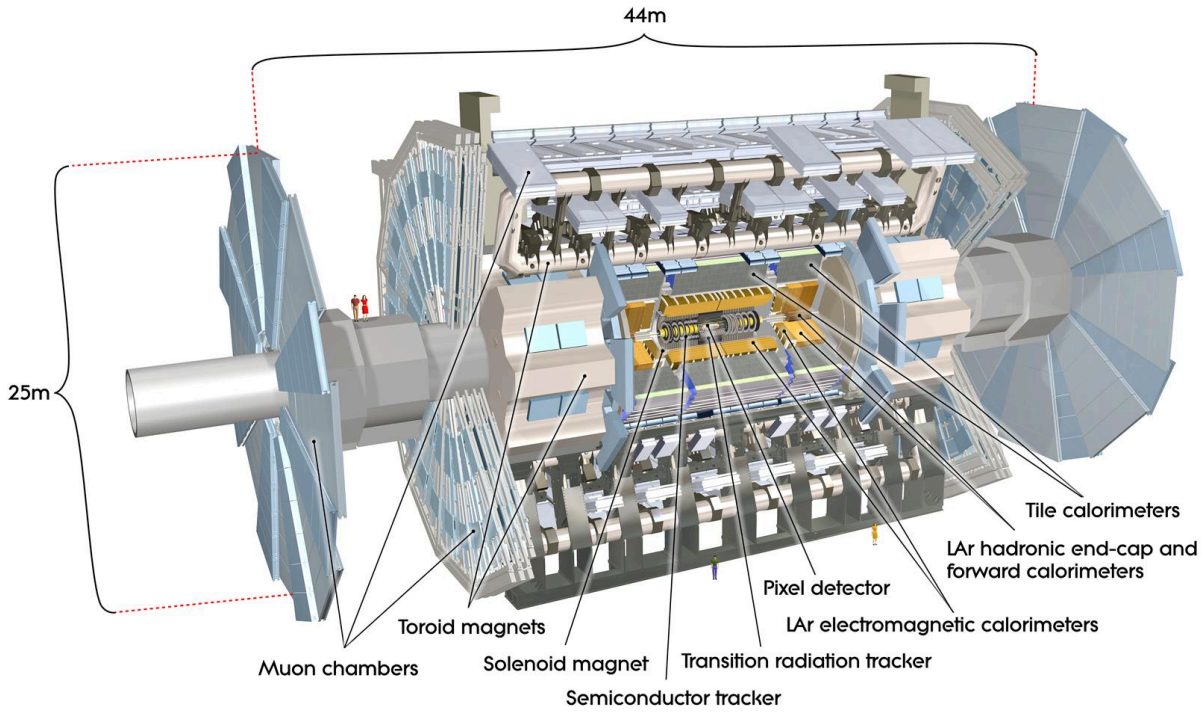

The day for the candidates to give their speeches has arrived. Stress would be high as he has billions of people watching him and If he fails in any way. Then he would lose the election he would be stuck working on the citadel and probably become a slave to Rick for the rest of his life. Despite this, He keeps his act up. He then goes up to the stand. All the Ricks are generally mocking him saying how "A Morty could never rule the citadel" and "A Morty would shit themselves in that situation. Evil Morty stayed silent and asked "Are you done?" Which made them go quiet. Rick asked him a question from the stand telling him "how are you going to fix the divide between Displaced Morty and Satisfaction levels of Ricks". In response Evil Morty says
"I don't see a divide between Ricks and Mortys. The division I see is between the Ricks and Morty's that like the citadel divided and the rest of us. I see it everywhere I go, I see it in our schools where they teach Morty's they're all the same because they're scared by what makes us unique. I see it in our streets, where they give guns to Morty's so we're too busy fighting each other to fight the real injustice. I see it in our factory's where ricks work for a fraction of their boss salary. Even though they are identical and have the same iq. The citadel's problem is homeless Morty's or outraged Ricks. The real problem is the ricks and Morty's feeding on the citadels Debt. But I've got a message for them, From the Ricks and Morty's keeping it alive. A message. From the Ricks and Morty's who believe in the citadel and the Ricks and Morty's who don't. You're Outnumbered!"
Ok let's analyse this speech, firstly the social awareness here is insane. Evil Morty in a couple months was able to figure out that the entire citadel teaches Morty's they are all the same. And all share the same purpose. Which is to work for Rick and never deviate. He's aware that despite All Ricks having the same IQ, they are still ranked by power in the citadel and aren't equal despite them all being the same. He understands that to make sure the lower down Morty never fights back against their bosses, they are given guns and other things to be mad at so they never fight against Rick himself. Secondly This speech was so good it convinced billions of Ricks and Morty's to vote for him. To note, All Ricks are narcissists. They all believe Morty should be lower down than them and that All their opinions are right and that All Morty's opinions are useless. They literally all believed they are the smartest beings in the universe and that no matter how hard somebody else tries. They will always be the smartest in the entire multiverse (which is infinite universes) For Evil Morty in one speech to convince billions of them to vote for him. This means his charisma and persuasion was so good he was able to bypass the god complexes of billions of ricks without any problem. Think about that, millions of People who all think they're the smartest in the universe were willing to vote for someone they believe to be an idiot to rule their home (the citadel). Thirdly let's look at the specific wording. He makes sure to address Problems that bother both Ricks and Morty's so that they appreciate him more. For Ricks is the hate of control and Morty's it's not wanting to be the same. He makes sure not to say that Morty's are slaves to ricks specifically as that would make ricks dislike him but he makes sure not only to mention Rick's problems. Because that would make Morty dislike him. This shows incredibly good Oratory skills as makes sure only to say specific things to make people like him as much as possible. This works absolute wonders and a population that originally laughed at him, now has complete respect for him and his ideals.

After this he fires his Campaign manager, since he knows he'll be the first to figure out his true plan. And needs him out the equation. Unfortunately, this backfires and the companion manager figures it out either way and shoots Him. Despite this very big inconvenience, he perseveres and his campaign wins The election in a landslide. And Evil Morty becomes President of the citadel of ricks with the majority of the ricks and Morty's supporting Evil Morty in his presidency. Next he meets the cabinet of Ricks and asks them exactly which ones think that a Morty being president is a bad idea. And he murders all of them. This will ensure that any form of resistance from other political members will be null. Also murdering all of his rivirals ensures that the people who do support him never change their mind due to fear of being executed.

Execution: The Grand escape

Firstly with his influence he starts to build an enlarged version of operation Phoenix containing 10 million individual containers for each person. He connects them all together and makes sure they kill the person inside once activated and then takes their blood. Now let's talk about the FSIQ of building this. Operation Phoenix was originally built by Rick as a way of basically being immortal. As soon as he dies his mind would be put into an identical body. This machine is obviously more complex than anything ever made in human history. Which would also include the large hadron Collider which has schematics that look like this.

(It’s obviously more complex than this but I can’t find anything else more detailed). A machine that can place your mind (from anywhere in the universe) when it dies into an identical body with all its memories and thoughts still in perfect condition is considered impossible by scientists today. Which would make it I assume thousands of times more complex to make an individual operation Phoenix than it is to make a large hadron Collider. And Evil Morty was able to visualise over 10 million. He made one for each person on the citadel and since there’s roughly 10 million People on the citadel this means he made 10 million Operation Phoenixs. Inside each one would be a copy of a Rick and a Morty. Now we can see that when the ginger Rick and Morty die they end up in an identical copy of themselves in operation Phoenix.

This shows that Evil Morty, when putting bodys in each of the containers, made them all absolutely identical to the Rick and Morty that had died. To do this means he would’ve had to copy the person's body down the exact cell and basically recreate the entire body. Now there are at least 30 trillion cells in the human body and 200 types of cells. When creating the body he would have to visualise where every single cell goes in the body in absolute perfect unison to The Rick and Morty that died. Since there are 10 million ricks and Morty’s in this singular device. That means he would’ve had to visualise the position of 300,000,000,000,000,000,000 cells. Which translates to three hundred quintillion.

How do we know he visualised all of this at once?
Well the amount of time he had to build it. You see Evil Morty through the entire series has stayed 14 meaning all of this takes place in the same year. Now the construction of the original evil liar would've taken a couple months. The election would take a couple months and the construction of this would've only taken a couple months. Meaning 6 months in total (we know this wouldn't have taken too long because after S5 E10 at least 4 months had passed and he was still 14). Construction on this scale with only at most a 100,000 workers would've taken years unless he already had a design of the entire thing in his head which he could just tell them to build without them having to consider anything themselves as he's already thought through it. Meaning now he's visualising 10 million individual devices that are all thousands of times more complex than the large hadron collider and 300 quintillion unique Cells for each body. This isn't everything though. Then he hacks the portal device of 5 million Ricks and makes it so that they all lead to a universe which will kill them instantly. He also builds at the same time a giant supply of portal fluid and stores it in the bottom of the citadel.
This becomes important later. Next he simply waits for Rick C-137 to return to the citadel. From there he'll invite him to dinner and during the dinner he'll scan his Brain and put it onto a device. He does this so he can get the schematics for the dimensional drive for the citadel which he'll use to rip a hole in the finite curve. He only sees it for a couple seconds before he turns it off and Rick steals it. In this time he's able to remember and visualise the entire thing and quickly apply it to the construction. He then makes an announcement using a Rick voice for every Rick not to leave the citadel. This makes every Rick try to leave the curve due to their desire to deny Authority. This desire to defy authority is just in Rick's nature but for Morty's. Due to the speech he gave a couple months earlier about saying the Rick and Morty's outnumber the Ricks and Morty's that want to control and separate them. This makes all the Morty's naturally want to defy control so when they are told to leave they naturally defy it due to evil Morty's speech. Since earlier Evil Morty hacked all the portal guns, they are all sent to universes which kill them and they are transported to the giant operation Phoenix. Next He starts the dimensional drive on the citadel which shoots a laser and starts to make a hole in the finite curve. To start this he sends all his portal fluid supply into it, which also leaks into the higher levels of the citadel which kills even more of the Rick and Morty's that didn't try to portal out the citadel when told not to. Also doing this means the only way to leave the citadel is for the Rick and Morty's to use operation Phoenix, this means the last of them who survive all kill themselves thinking they can survive through operation Phoenix which transports them to the giant operation Phoenix on the citadel. It then grinds them into just blood which is used as extra fuel for the dimensional drive. He then gets into his spaceship and flies into the hole in the finite curve and escapes. With the citadel destroyed and him in one piece.
This plan's main aims were: Stop the Morty farm on the citadel by destroying it, getting out in one piece, escaping the finite curve & killing all the Ricks in the citadel. The plan was completely invisible to everyone in the citadel, even the people working for Evil Morty didn't know its true intention when creating it. The Operation Phoenix, Portal fluid, All the Ricks Mortys dying and getting the dimensional drive from C-137's mind all align perfectly in the destruction of the citadel and hole created in the finite curve which lets evil Morty escape. Despite earlier not being able to scan all of Rick's brain originally the plan still resists and is just able to scan all of it at a later date. He had calculated the risk of letting the portal fluid flow to the citadel and made sure it only attacked the top layers of the citadel and that he's affected.
(Strategy complexity, strategy effectiveness, strategy efficiency, strategy execution, strategy resilience, strategy shielding, strategy alignment, planning coverage, planning preparation, planning intricacies, planning invisibility, risk calculation, Direct manipulation, indirect manipulation, mass manipulation, Emotional manipulation, psychological manipulation, logical manipulation, persuasion, provocation, suicide inducement, fear inducement, mass deception, concealment, info control, fabrication, acting skills, VSI, PSI, WMI, scientific knowledge, crystallised intelligence, charisma, social skills, social awareness & info gathering)

And with that, the liberation from the finite curve scheme has concluded. And Evil Morty leaves the curve to live a normal life without Rick Sanchez ever bothering him.

Emotional Quotient explanation:

Emotional understanding:

Evil Morty has an incredibly in-depth understanding of not just Rick Sanchez but also Morty smith. He understands that When Rick created a Morty farm to supply himself he justified it by thinking he's the victim of his own sadness and depression due to his wife and daughters death. His narcissism & arrogance is justifiable because it's just an escapism from his sadness that he can never get over his wife's death. And to add to this escapism Morty needs to be there for him to show off his genius intellect. Morty to him is just a means of escapism as it lets him buy more into his narcissistic Mad scientist act as Morty acts as someone to tell him he's a genius and to be the idiot he feels so smart when next to. The farm he created of Morty's is completely justified as he thinks it helps with his escapism and he needs the escapism to continue and He thinks it's not his fault that Morty dies so much.
With Morty, he wants to do something interesting with his life and he doesn't want to spend his time masterbating at home doing nothing. No matter what Rick does to him he will always forgive as if he doesn't he won't be able to do anything in his life and he'll sit at home being lonely and pathetic.
With this understanding he's able to anticipate the exact actions both Rick and Morty will take and Manipulate them so that they like him as much as possible.

Emotional Engagement & Management:

During the entire multi month period he put on an act of being incredibly kind and considerate and not a single person in millions was able to tell its fake. He never broke this, even when he got shot he kept the act up to keep sympathy from the public high. Also when he killed millions of Morty's by basically putting them in a blender he had no reaction. Take into account that he looks exactly like all the Morty's so seeing this is like watching yourself die millions of times. And yet he had absolutely no reaction to it at all.

Well you've reached the end of the document, hopefully this has changed some of your minds on scaling Evil Morty intellect wise. I had quite a lot of fun when making this and Well Evil Morty is now a very solid character in my scaling. He does have more feats than this but those aren't part of his plan and are more minor so I won't be including them in the document.
Well goodbye y'all.
