Moriarty Feats

Creators: Indra & Ray & Dominoo & Druxzy & Awaken

FSIQ
EQ
Logical reasoning + observation
Manipulation + deception
Strategy/planning + anticipation
Thinking
Knowledge, information, & intuition
Social/leadership
Miscellaneous

Ch1.
Kid Moriarty takes a short glance at a card on the table(the game is pontoon) and within seconds he calculates all the possibilities and tells the man to “twist”. He was correct and that was the perfect move for the man. An insane CPI feat. After that he helps a mom with planting a flower. His “mother” starts scolding him and is about to whip him and Moriarty just stands there and smiles, mother is stopped by one of the brothers. He speculated about why Albert would take them in(he thinks that Albert wants to know if Moriarty as the will to kill someone for his ideals). Within a week it became the center of his orphanage friend group. He helps adults and children alike with problems ranging from math to helping grow plants. He also helps a group of men who are trying to steal from a safe. Moriarty estimates perfectly how long it is, and how long it will take. Moriarty's plans are insanely good
When Moriarty saw that a high-ranking family member was always visiting the orphanage, he decided to surprise him and set up a ritual to see Albert's true side by gathering the children together and making them scream. "We will beat the evil nobles”

Moriarty soon understood that the younger brother of the family hates going out and spending time with the lower castes of society.
Moriarty decides to use the name of the little boy in the family so that the townspeople will think that he is the real Moriarty and remember his appearance.
Moriarty knew that the little brother of the family could always influence his mother and change her opinion
He predicted that the younger brother was going to take advantage of his mother's weakness and convince her to kick him and Lois out of the house.
Moriarty could predict the exact time and day of the slippers, he knew that to sew the slippers, the mother and little brother would have to sneak into the room at night so that no one would know

There were 3 nobles and 9 servants in this house, Moriarty had to consider all possibilities and solutions to make his plan work.
As we know, there were 548 candles inside Moriarty's house
Moriarty poured some water into the bottom of each candlestick. When the candles melt, the melted paraffin covers the candlestick. When the candle is almost finished, the small flame that remains heats the water under the paraffin and solidifies it. You can make a small spark, and then the sparks will eat the flammable items around the house
Moriarty decided not to kill the little boy of the family's mother's family so that he could fool the coroner into believing that the two of them had died from inhaling the mansion. In fact, everything went perfectly
Moriarty was able to pour enough water on the candle so that they all burn together without any problems.
While doing this, he was able to set a certain time so that no servant would disturb him and he could trap the mother and the little boy of the family in the best possible conditions.

And in the end, Moriarty himself saved Lois and Albert and punished all the bad people in the house in such a way that he convinced even the police and the people that the mansion burned down due to the neglect of the servants. Moriarty's little brother always had the power to annoy his mother, he knew that his mother is sensitive about his father and when he talks about his betrayal, his mother becomes completely weak and listens to her son, so the little brother of the family tried to connect his father's betrayal to Moriarty. And give Lois a connection so that he can bring his mother to him

And this is the reason why that little brother had influence over his mom
I wrote that because it might be confusing. With that it moves forward 10 years. It is revealed that at 16 he entered a university, then published a treatise on the binomial theorem. Which is completely new to the students then at 21 he became a professor.

Ch2.

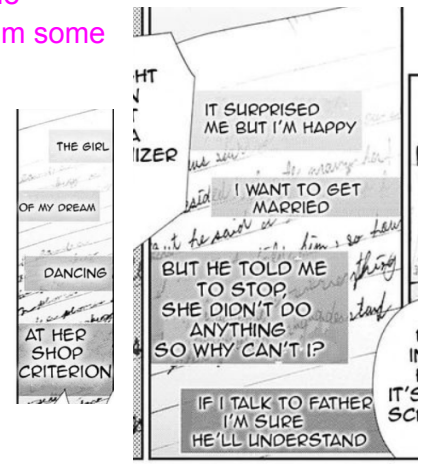

Moriarty is in a town when near him a noble's carriage almost runs over a girl, and the man riding says that it's Duke Dublin's carriage. Moriarty walks up to the girl and asks if she's okay, but she just stares at the carriage with disgust and a look of hatred. Later he meets a commoner who gives him a harsh greeting. He then later is walking around the village when a few men comment on a noble walking on the streets. He then immediately sits down on one of the chairs near them and talks to them, explaining how and why he moved here. Then one of the men rides him using a wagon to the university he is teaching at. When he says thank you to the man he then thanks the man, mysteriously knowing his name. The man also proclaimed that William had read his mind. William is later told that that man is the "leader of the town. He also gets called a different species from the commoners with William telling her that he is also a private counselor and that he will "heal" the people of the town" The lady tells him how the previous nobles made the commoners basically slaves. A few men then walk up and are ready to pay for their rent when Moriarty notices that their hands are worn out and dirty. He then dismisses their concerns and says that they won't have to pay that much. William and Albert both can tell that the men are oppressed by the nobles from the looks in their eyes. Later the Moriarty's invite Duke Dublin to their house for dinner. It is said that Dublin is suffering from a heart disease so he can't drink alcohol and takes medicine. Dublins says that he needs help and says he lost his wife and he has no kids. William then finishes what he was going to say “thus, no one to leave the land and property to, is what u mean”. Moriarty then says that it’s better to ask a detective agency to find a blood relative then them. William then brings up the talk about lands again. He then tells Dublin that they are lowering the price. The next day everyone is talking about how the rent is much cheaper and such. Then a girl shows up(the girl who was almost run over) and when that happens M. Baton goes into hiding. Baton says that, that's his wife and that their son died three years ago by the fault of Dublin. William sees the clear hatred that that family has for Dublin. Dublin then starts to complain to Moriarty about how the workers now want to work on their land. They then have a meeting at Dublin's mansion. Where William brings Michelle and Baton. Moriarty makes another analogy with the grapefruit pie, “you don’t even know how ur workers work, I suppose you forgot the day you killed their child”. This is when Moriarty reveals his plan.

When he saw Michele almost get run over he also saw her holding a knife with a disgusted face. Moriarty deduced that she was trying to murder Dublin(for a bad deed Dublin did). Moriarty decides to use Michele to help him take down Dublin. He first shows a charismatic appearance and lowers the rent for all the workers by 1/7 the normal amount. Gaining trust. This also causes workers from Dublin's side to move to William's side. He uses this to gain trust from Michele and Baton. Then he meets with Dublin, which he instigates with the analogy of not knowing how his workers work to not knowing that he killed Michele’s kid. He also cut off Dublin’s chance to tell the police because everyone is on Wiliam’s side now. Dublin is fully cut off. He is now forced to sign an agreement. After the signed agreement Dublin has to take his medicine. After he takes it, he goes dizzy. William explains that the ingredients in his medicine react with the furanocoumarins in grapefruit to strengthen the effects of it. Making your blood pressure lower radically. They then bring in the servants, saying something happened to Dublin.

Ch3.

The chapter starts off with a girl dancing on a bridge and dying. It is also revealed that William is always plotting something, and he stays up all night. He reads a newspaper that says “bridge suicide, tavern dancer seen jumping off, opium also found in room” Moriarty then reveals that this “suicide” clearly wasn’t a suicide and he wants to dissipate the invisible darkness. When William goes to teach his class, one of his students has been missing for 2 days and while they speculate the secretary of finances (Dadori) walks in and says that the boy is fine, “there's no need for that” he says. “He was feeling ill so I took him to the hospital” Moriarty starts to investigate the boy Lucien, after he goes to the students dormitory. He then gets greeted by Dadori who tells him some facts about the university. Like how the previous students give donations to fund the university, and Dadori says that they have no freedom so he wants them to enjoy their time now. Moriarty then makes an analogy and says they aren’t students but guests. He then enters Luicen’s room. Moriarty then catches something from the boy who is Lucien’s friend. That some noble kids aren’t “warped” and that he wants to make sure they don’t get warped

Moriarty also sees some kids who are sad from the suicide. Moriarty then gets a ton of information from people around and is easily able to figure out that it's Dadori who made Frida die.

William sets the asleep Lucien out in the middle of the night, soon after Dadori is notified that Lucien was waiting for him in the place (they said Lucien sent the telegram) so he went searching and he found Lucien. Obviously Lucien doesn't know about the telegram. William framed Lucien of knowing Dadori's wrong doings in which Dadori got worried, obviously Lucien doesn't fully understand but gets scared when he sees what Dadori has done. Then Dadori hints that he had killed Frida then a fake Frida appears(the fog made it easier to believe cuz it hid parts of her). Dadori confesses that he killed her and questions why she's alive and how he killed her(opium). Then Moriarty uses Moran to shoot Dadori near the legs so he has to run, Dadori is forced onto the bridge, and eventually falls off, making it seem like a murder. Fred then picked up the bullets from that night.

Ch4.

The chapter starts off with the military finding out that there's a new type of Opium in Britain. In which Albert is there. They speculate that it's the Mafia. Albert then learns about MI6, a secret unit from the military that even the Congress doesn't have control over or know about. As of then, it was only a rumor. Albert then speculates on how that could be useful to William. Albert then goes to the intelligence agency which is run by Mycroft(Sherlock's brother). Albert tells him that he will solve the case with the opium, and wants the power of MI6 in return at the same time he calls Moriarty to London.

When they reach, they have some to kill. When Moran and Louis leave his side, William gets ambushed by three men and they throw him in a carriage. Albert prepares his military. William wakes up and is taken to the boss. He acts innocent as if he doesn't know what's going on. It said that Moriarty stole and hid a lot of opium and if they don't get it, the higher ups will be mad. Confirming that there are nobles in the back of the opium business. Moriarty knows which castle they're in. Moriarty sent them a request, with a picture of himself saying to capture William Moriarty because he stole and is hiding a lot of opium (wrote it as if it was from the higher ups). Obviously the higher ups wouldn't make direct contact with them because of their social separation and they don't want to be suspected. William set up a kidnap for him to be taken so he knows who and where the opium is. Then the castle gets raided by the military. Moriarty used Fred to follow him so Albert would know where to raid. Moriarty knew that they most likely had a connection to a powerful noble due to them not having been caught yet. So he thought that the best trap would be to set up a kidnap to lead them to the layer. Albert also bluffs it to the higher ups saying it was a coincidence. With this Albert successfully negotiated with Mycroft to have access to MI6. Moriarty fully anticipated what the kidnappers would do and how they would react.

Ch 5 (The Noahtic)

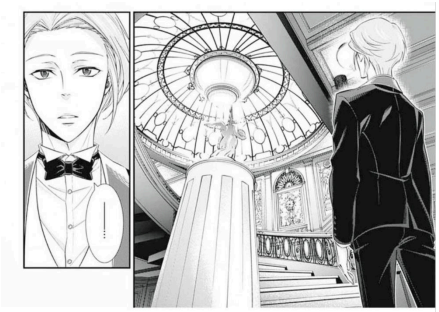

The chapter starts off with William explaining his main plan, he also says that he plans to make London the stage for his plan (we will know more about this in the later volume)

The Noahtic plan starts off with William meeting Duke blitz Indas (the lead character) and acts friendly with him to gain his trust.

William observes and comes to a conclusion that Indas is the type of person who wouldn't think twice before killing a commoner and this is also the reason why he is the perfect person for this plan.

After that Moriarty finds himself infront of the spiral stairway, where he tries to see if the curve drawn by the spiral staircase was made according to the golden ratio

Afterward, he observes and deduces that Sherlock can play violin even tho he isn't a musician, he likes to conduct science experience and seems to have good physical capabilities and he is graduated from Oxbridge.

(Afterwards)

As Moriarty anticipated before, Indas did kill him, later he went into his room to check what's happening , he acted as indas friend and helped him threw the victim's body into the ocean, it was shown that moran and fred caught his body before it fell into the ocean (this is a part of his planning too)

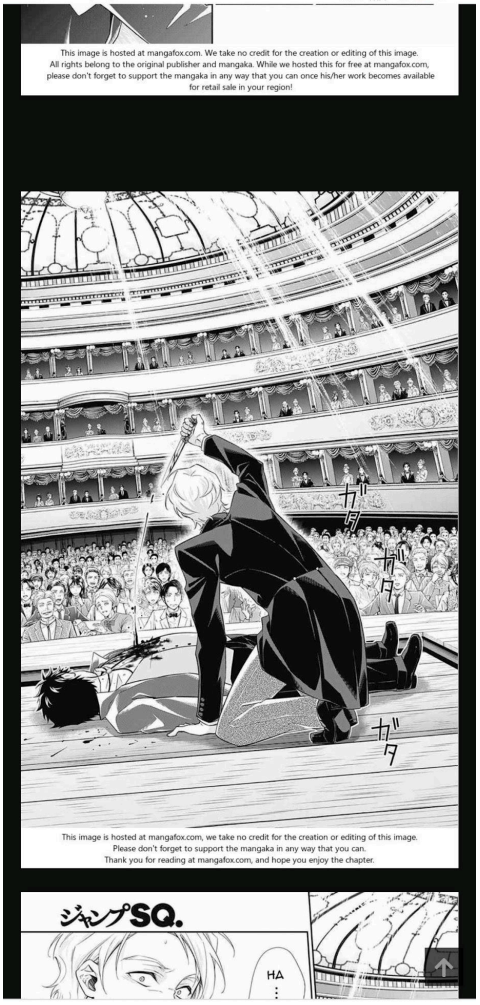

Chapter 6 (The Noahtic 2)

The next day during the performance Moriarty went to meet Indas and asked him if he was sure that he killed the man or not, when indas asked him what happened he said that the man who was supposed to be dead was sitting among the audience watching the show (it was actually fred) Indas then panicked and went to kill him before he reveals his true identity

When he got there, the man was nowhere to be found so he asked the npc sitting there if they saw him , after the npc told him where he went he followed him to the backstage of the ship and found him lying dead there , finally relieved to see him dead he started to plunge the knife inside him many times just to make sure he is dead.

In the end he jumped into the ocean and killed himself.

Chapter 7

Light Novel Feats

Unorganized Feats

Train murder: He deduced that the murderer was a man, who had been on the train from the start, had administered a narcotic to the victim in order to rob him, but this had failed, so he killed him. How did he do it? Well, you can see the footprints of the two people, the killer is 8 inches tall, but why Durham? Look at Moriaty's shoes, they're wet, it was raining in Durham, then Moriarty picks up a bottle of spirits containing a remnant of whisky, which also gives off the smell of chloral hydrate, and when mixed with alcohol its effect is multiplied, he also says that the murder wasn't premeditated because he wouldn't have done it here on the train, he then says that he tried to put her to sleep, the victim woke up and the killer stabbed her with his knife - you can see that he was distraught by the hemorrhage because you can see his fingerprints on them (not the victim's, as there's no blood on his hands). in the end, the criminal was distraught - he didn't steal anything, all he could think about was locking up the compartment and taking it with him.
Moriarty does a psychological profile and traces the killer's movements. He says that after the murder, he went to the toilet to get rid of the key and the knife, throwing them out of the window, but also to wash off the traces of blood. He says that the criminal is a person who won't be able to throw his clothes out of the window, so he cleaned up. Sherlock Holmes came to the same conclusion, but a little later than Moriarty.
They're going to search the controllers and one of them will have the gangs with blood on them, but he'll say that it's true that he's got a hand injury, but William notices a bloodstain on his glasses that's impossible for it to have got here, and after that he'll confess to everything, but in fact this bloodstain is one of Moriarty's that he's put there, he's met all the controllers under various pretexts and he's put a bloodstain there.

The Moriarty family and other noblemen are playing a game of painball, and as we reach the end of the game, there's only one little girl left, and her father is behind with Andy. He decides to shoot to end the game, but the little girl falls to the ground in a bloodstain, looking as if she's dead, whereas normally it's paint. Note that all guns have a number, and Kevin's gun, the one that just went off, was number 8. Andy starts shouting at Kevin, telling him he has killed his own daughter. A little later Moriarty appears and says it's all made up by Andy, and Andy says he's lying. Moriarty then asks kevin how he got his gun, and he replies that he went to a baggare and lost it, then picked it up again and knew it was his because of the numbers on it. Moriarty goes on to say that if someone had replaced his gun with a real one and put the number on it, would he have noticed? Kevin says no and Moriarty says Andy did it to swap his gun for a real one. Of course, Andy will deny it, saying that it's all supposition, that he could have done it, etc. Moriarty will then go on to say that he's not sure. Moriarty then goes on to say that The reason was illustrated by the deal he had tried to make earlier. He wanted to drive Mr. Kevin to ruin by falsely accusing him of murdering his child, and on top of that, he wanted to steal his company's profits. He goes on to say that he had probably planned this when the Moriartys had proposed this because he uses guns that look like real weapons, he could stage an accident in which real bullets are accidentally fired. What's more, the toy guns are marked with cards tied with string, making it easy to exchange one for a real gun.

After this Andy will again say that this is pure speculation without proof at which point Mr.Herder jumps out of a tree (Mr.Herder to explain and referee the game) he will say that After Lord Andy parted ways with Mr. Kevin, he picked up the fallen gun, untied the cord and attached it to a real gun he had concealed on him. William went on to say that he had asked him to be careful with Andy, andy went on to say that Herder is a Moriaty man so he could be lying and he also said that a mistake could happen when handing over the weapons. Herder goes on to say that when he exchanged the weapons, he put Mr. Kevin's revolver in his breast pocket because he couldn't leave it on the floor. At this point Andy confesses his entire plan.

But then Andy asks Moriarty if he's understood all along, and Moriarty goes on to say that yes, Moriarty gave him a game like that on purpose so that Andy could set a trap for Kevin, "this game was a step to prove your malevolence". Moriarty then went on to say that the terrorist attack on the store had been carried out by andy. The first was to damage the store's reputation by staging a disaster, and the second was to kill Helena, who had been caught up in the incident and had given him a clue. Helena in fact had crucial information about her real father's disappearance. Moriarty goes on to say that from the moment he first met you and his business partner, Andy wanted to destroy them both and take away their profits if he could. He first set his sights on Helena's father, Andy thought if he disappeared, then Mr. Kevin would also withdraw from the scene due to his shyness. However, he took her by surprise when he decided to continue the affair. Therefore, in order to bring about her ruin with certainty, Andy resorted to this act of violence. Andy again said it was all speculation, so Moriarty called Helena, who was in fact Fred Porlock disguised as Helena, with a metal plate to protect himself from the bullet. After that, Helena (the real one) started talking, saying that Andy's color was absolute black and that he had erased his father (Helena has a gift for seeing people's color). After this little testimony, Andy made a confession, saying that he had killed her, burned her and thrown her into the sieve.

This time, the plan had been set in motion after William and the others had leveraged their intelligence network to identify the criminal, then shared the information they'd obtained with Helena. From Andy's profile, William had read the man's every move, then intentionally let him loose in order to catch him in the act - that was the whole flow. So, apart from the main players involved, the others had said nothing more than that they would "use the game to capture the criminal".

FSIQ:

WMI

PSI

FRI: Finds many underlying connections like finding the drug lord easily.

VSI: when Sherlock deduced Moriarty's profession he said Moriarty was looking at a staircase he found that the staircase was constructed based on the golden ratio, he accurately visualized how the staircase would look from the first floor while standing on the ground floor.

VCI

EQ:

Really good EQ. He emotional understands people and their desires as exploited from Indas

EM: Perfect composure and changes his facial expression depending on what's needed

EP: deduced who was the killer of Frida by hearing her story and immediately knew who it was.

EU: Easily Understood Indas and read his motives and easily predicted his moves on the cruise ship. Understood Sherlock's motives and that he would want to save Irene over the document used this to exploit him. Knew that Sherlock would want to save Irene's life over the document and that he wouldn't resist the temptation of finding out who the crime lord was. Easily understood how the Militia and the yard felt about Jack and made them separate their differences when revealing a fake Jack the Ripper causing them to unite. As a kid without even meeting a man could easily tell how he would act and use this to his advantage. Anticipated all of the hit moves, motifs, and set up a flawless trap against him. Even predicted how he would react and what he would do, even shutting that down.

EE: He exploited Indas by using his ideals, he engaged him and knew he would kill someone, also knew that he would try to stab the commoner again on the stage when he thought the commoner was alive.

Thinking:

Critical thinking

Abstract thinking: Finds creative ways to solutions such as making Indas commit the murder.

Abductive thinking

Inductive thinking

Applicative thinking: applies his vast knowledge to all his problems

Linear Thinking: his entire life is set up by him and his end plan of saving the class system

Non-linear Thinking: he puts his plans into effect immediately and uses his ppl(fred and so) easily. Bringing out their utmost potential.

Creative thinking: his plans are really creative. Kid Moriarty has an insane feat against noble baxter.

Logical thinking: logically thinks about actions that people will take such as the train murderer and why he wouldn't throw out his clothes or that his clothes wouldn't have blood on them. Logically thought about the steps of Jack the ripper. He asked questions to himself and logically thought it threw as too, why would that person do that. With this he easily deducted that it was a group of people and not one. He also figured out their goals. As a kid could figure out his orphanage's money supply was stolen by logically thinking. With the water in milk, and the big donation. Put the piece together.

Divergent thinking:

Convergent thinking: Always finds a really effective solution to a problem. Which is why we haven't seen too much divergent thinking from him cuz it's usually not needed. Such as the plan with the viceroy in India or with Irene. His solutions are incredibly effective similar to Indas too

Deductive thinking: deducted who the killer was on the train. He was able to figure out who it was using logical thinking then set up a trap for him after quickly knowing who it was(faster than Sherlock). Quickly understood the goal of Jack the ripper, and knew it was more than one person conducting the murders. Knew that Jack the Ripper wanted to start a conflict between the yard and the white chapel almost instantly.

Inductive thinking: using observations easily figured out who the murderer on the train was. Faster than Sherlock.

Abductive thinking

Manipulation:

Manipulates stages

When he manipulates his victims. He usually tries to bring a good picture out of him. As seen with Indas in chapter 5. He starts off with a friendly welcome which paints a good picture of William. He used this to his advantage to get closer.

Charisma: He was so good at acting that Sherlock found that the only person to talk to was Moriarty after the murder on the Noahic

It's hard to detect his pawn usage and he plays them well

Gaslighting

Seduction

Guilt trapping

Deception: deceived Sherlock many times easily. He was said to be one of the least likely candidates for being the crime lord.

Triangulation

Direct control

Indirect control: indirectly controls situations with all his plans. Manipulated Sherlock with Irene Alber. Used him as a way to get Irene on her side. Fully indirectly controlled his kidnapping to his advantage, which resulted in him getting MI6
Love bombing
Dismissal
Persuasion: Knows people's goals and uses this to his advantage
Threats: can set up good threats as seen with Irene and other plans
Misdirection: misdirects Sherlock many times with his investigation against the crime lord
Goalpost moving
Playing on insecurity: He played on Sherlock's insecurity of knowing that he would want to protect Irene and used this to his advantage
Mass scale manipulation
Individual manipulation: Manipulated Sherlock with Irene, Indas, the train murder,
Direct manipulation
Indirect manipulation: Indirectly manipulated Moran during the Viceroy arc to make him more loyal. He easily manipulated his kidnappers into kidnapping him which led to them getting exposed.
Setting up traps: Has great traps such as the trap with killing the Duke which ended up with Sherlock having a reputation for exposing the problems of the nobles. Set up a trap for the murderer on the train with staining blood on him. He set up a really effective trap against his kidnappers. He sent them a picture for them to kidnap him which resulted in them getting exposed. He set up a trap against the Viceroy of India as a way to get him and Moran alone together. He made the wine glass spill on purpose, making them go alone.
Pawn usage: uses his pawns really well and deploys them efficiently. As seen with the Viceroy in India arc he used Moran and Penny effectively to their utmost potential. He used the commoner as a way to kill the noble Debber and made him orchestrate a perfect killing.
See through able(less): Sherlock wasn't able to see through Moritary's manipulation on him with Irene. His manipulation is always covered. In the death of the noble who killed Frida he made it seem like he commited suicide by using Moran to make him jump off the bridge with a sniper.
Effectiveness: his manipulation is really effective with countless examples: Indas, train murder, and the Viceroy. Easily fools the noble after seeing Lucien awake away from the drug stable. He used this to make him confess of the murder and used Fred as a decoy to act like Frida
Acting: he acts perfectly according to his plans. Generally he keeps a kind aura around him making him seem like an easy choice for a conversation. He used this against Indas and especially Sherlock. He acted perfectly even under the stressful moments on the train when Sherlock said he was the Lord of Crime.

Leadership:

Influence: his influence is really high and as a byproduct has insane information gather that come along with allies such as Fred or Moran

Strategy/Planning:

He set up a perfect plan against Noble Baxter without even meeting him. He negotiated with him, bluffed and set up a trap. Which led to the court case.

Cunning and ruthless

His strategies are hard to notice

He can easily anticipate events in the future with ease and sets up all the traps he needs. He staged a kidnapping, manipulating them into capturing him which in the end led to a major success in helping his other plans.

Strategies don't require prep and can be deployed instantly as seen with the kidnapping, cruise ship, or the child hunting

He always has backup strategies as seen on the cruise ship

Planned that the Duke's death and that Sherlock would easily be able to solve this. He also was able to use this to spread propaganda about Sherlock and that he exposes the evil's of nobles.

Strategy complexity: his strategies always have backups making them multilayered. As seen with Moran's trip to India or on the cruise ship with him having multiple layers of his plan against Indas. He first framed Sherlock, knowing that someone would put him in jail. He also knew that Sherlock would be able to solve this and used this as a way to test him. His plan included a super effective backup. He had a backup in his India mission in case someone got captured.
Strategy length:was already thinking of using MI6 for a long time for his personal gain and used other strategies to let him reach this.
Strategy hiding: His strategies are hidden well seen with Irene. He doesn't always go himself, making it much harder for other people to detect him. He uses people like Albert for his strategies and uses them secretly like when Albert gave Irene the note which lead to the ball(so on)
Strategy control: has complete control over the situations he makes, they always work with ease. He easily controlled Sherlock in the arc of him trying to find the crime lord. He controls all of his victims with ease. His plans never slip up and always go as planned without falter. He was willing to give his identity to Sherlock's brother with no worry.
Strategy adaptability: Incorporates other people's idea into his strategy, the kidnapping wasn't expected by Moriarty but easily adapted his strategy to fit the deemed task. Sherlock has interfered with his plans many times but he still adapted. The plan in India was also unexpected but Moriarty instantly sent Moran and moneypenny to India with a complex and effective plan.
Strategy preparation(less): Take no time to go into effect. The kid, kidnappings where he instantly put his strategy into effect. Or the Viceroy plan in India where he immediately sent Moran and Moneypenny to India. Instantly thought of a strategy to unite the militia and the Yard to find Jack the ripper.

Strategy effectiveness: has many backup plans but rarely has to use them. As seen on the cruise ship against Indas. His plan was really effective against the viceroy of India. Even when his plan got disrupted he still had another backup plan which he used to save moneypenny from harm and used this to his advantage being super effective.
Simultaneous strategies(one strategy dealing with two or more problems, or two strategies at the same time): His strategy against the Viceroy. Used it as a way to deal with the war but also to make Moran more loyal to him with his need for vengeance being gone. He used Albert as a way to get the MI6 which he did along with his other plans against the noble drug lord. His exposing the drug lord gained also led to him having control over MI6.
Strategy castling:
Strategy improvisation:
Strategy execution control:
Planning length: He made a plan which coincided with his other plans to get the MI6 for his future plans
Planning time: He puts his plans instantly into effect as seen with friends request to stop the child kidnappings
Planning anticipation: He anticipated many events which correlated with his EU. He anticipated all of Indas's moves, anticipated Sherlocks entire plan against him in the abandoned Chapel(22) Anticipated the exact event that the kidnappers did against him and their motives. He knew that they would go for him and set it up. Anticipated everything happening in "study in S". He framed Sherlock and expected him to be able to solve the case, with this he tested him to see how serious he is about solving the puzzles. Anticipated all of the viceroys moves in the party in India. Anticipated every single move made by the militia, yard, and the killers and in a super short time. Knew that his plan would force them to group up and used this to investigate all the potential meeting places. As a kid anticipated all of Baxter's moves and motifs without even meeting him. Perfectly negotiated and anticipated that he would use the money to his own use. Knew his true intentions after just hearing what he has down from "sister" Anticipated all of his points in the court case and used this to bring in a witness to prove him wrong. Then he pressured him and got him to sell all of his business and donated the money to the orphanage.
Planning adaptability: Adapted Fred's plan of stopping the child kidnappings easily into his overall plan. He had to adapt his plan to Sherlock who was an unexpected rival. But easily incorporated him and used it to his advantage instantly adapted to all of the militia and Yards tactics. Had Moran and Bond as snipers to cover and Fred directed him perfectly.
Planning preparation(less): Instantly did the plan with saving the child kidnappings. All of his plans require no time to prepare. Similar to the Viceroy plan too. Instantly put his plan to unite the yard and the militia to a common goal of finding Jack the Ripper.

Planning effectiveness: His plans are super effective and always work. Against Sherlock, Irene, the duke, and even the Viceroy.
Planning crossover(less):
Planning counterability:
Preparation process
limitations
Planning coverage
Risk calculation

General:

Intuition: Have seen that even as a child has had great intuition and mathematical knowledge from books.

Insane composure has never really changed his impression even in stressful scenarios. When Sherlock said that William is the crime lord his expression barely changed. He could easily see through the bluffing withins a second.

Really good information control has a steady flow and his intel almost seems limitless

Observed the golden ratio at the Noahic arc. Observed many things in the train murder.

Bluffing: completely bluffs throughout the train ride and tricks the train attendant(volume 16) bluffed the entire time with his talk to Sherlock(volume 31)

Deduction: Deduced who the murderer was faster than Sherlock could. Easily deducted who was the cause of the suicide on the bridge

Self awareness: as a kid knew that Jack the Ripper wiped his face without him noticing(volume 25)

Miscellaneous:

Information gathering: Information about the supplement of weapons to the Afghan army or the knowledge about Irene and using that to manipulate her. Has an insane intel of information even as a kid. He was able to get a waiter from the restaurant in which Baxter eats in to prove his case.

Cunning: Since reaching the Moriarty estate he was really cunning. He burned down his and Albert's house without a sweat or worry.

Mathematical: has written many books about math. Has a book called "binomial theory"

Negotiation: Kid William negotiated with the noble Baxter and set up a trap with it. Beat Baxter in court with insane information gathering. He knew how Baxter would think about the initial negotiation and use this to his advantage, by bringing in a witness, trapping him.