Debunking the Lila Rossi Debunk

PD: This is all done with a translator, so there are probably some parts that are misspelled.

Lila Rossi Debunk Doc: Made by Spritethecola

Debunking the Lila Rossi Debunk Doc: Made by Hellos

It's been a while since the Lila Rossi Debunk document was published, during which time I've been busy, but now I have to clarify a few things. First, yes, it is partly my fault for certain statements I made in the past, and second, I don't mean to offend the creator of said document, as it was practically partly my fault for not being clear about the facts. With that explanation, let's start with the "destruction" of the destruction.

Hellos

Sprite

Alliance Feat:PSI

Yes, it's true, it's just a theory/speculation of mine, but I've never claimed that it was a complete reality and I've never made statements like "it's controlled with just one button" either (this statement if I'm not mistaken had been made by another person with whom I get confused sometimes because I'm also a Lila climber). It's also true that there's no concrete backing for this theory, but we can speculate what were the possible ways in which Hoaxer's (Lila) search to find Nathalie happened. Of which Sprite assumed that there were much simpler ways that would reduce or even nullify PSI "feat", such as: What 's the proof that she couldn't just search through the interface? / Lila could've most likely just find her name in one go / Lila could most likely just use this ability to hack into the mainframe then find Natalie.

All of these arguments can be summed up in a single interpretation, which would be that Lila transformed into Hoaxer would simply hack the Alliance system to search for Nathalie in the interface in one go, as if it were a simple internet search. This interpretation from my point of view would be totally wrong and even a little hilarious, since if we take into account that it happened this way, then Lila (Hoaxer) would practically be risking her entire plan, since she would literally be specifically searching for Nathalie (taking into account that we are referring to a literal search bar) to give her a different order and then send the other users the order to catch Marinette, in addition, the Hoaxer update reaches all the Alliance rings in less than 1 second, which would be practically impossible for Lila to do a search in the interface, give an order, and then give the others another order. And why do I say it's risky? Because of the simple fact of doing a search instead of sending everyone the order and that's it, it would be very suspicious for Monarch, and even if Monarch couldn't be aware of Hoaxer's actions in the digital world, Hoaxer couldn't know if he could or couldn't, and even if she tried it could be detrimental to her entire plan.

That would be the main reason why this kind of "other ways that nullify the feat" are completely discarded to try to explain what happened and what Hoaxer did to find and give a different order to Nathalie. But still, there may still be other ways that nullify the PSI feat, so below, I will try to make a list of all those possible ways and debunk them:

1.- “At the time of infiltrating the rings, Hoaxer should have sent the order only to the people who did not live in the Agreste mansion, and then given a different order to Nathalie, this way he would not have had to be looking for her and therefore there is no feat” (or any assumption that says that Hoaxer simply looked for her and nothing more).

-It may not have occurred to them, but although it sounds possible, I consider it totally strange, if she did something like this, she would be putting herself in danger of being discovered, also if she knew that Gabriel is Monarch, Hoaxer would not think about that at the time of blocking that place, wouldn't it end up being suspicious for Gabriel? And even though in the end he never receives this update since he took off the ring, Hoaxer could not be careless, and even so, it is likely that Hoaxer knew that he was going to take off the ring, would it be possible for her to make a restriction like that? She would literally be saying "not this place but the others yes", without even her having the power to block a specific area, I doubt that Monarch gave her the power to decide "who yes to who no" or "where yes or where no", Monarch simply gave her the power to infect the rings, not to decide who to infect, and you can say that in the end Hoaxer ended up giving the order to Nathalie much later in the episode, and therefore she did not give him the order at the time she gave it to the other people, but no, it's not that she left him for a moment, but rather, the scenes of the chapter are out of order (especially the ones at the end), if you think about it, it would be strange for Hoaxer to give the order to Nathalie a long time later, since she needed him to give her all the information she needed from Gabriel, and surely it was a lot of information, so she required much more time, that is why the scenes are in disorder, that scene happens exactly at the same time that the others receive the update.

2.- “The digital world Hoaxer is in can already see all users, which is why it would be easier for him to see who Nathalie was, and thus give her a different command” (this includes any assumption that the digital world Hoaxer is in makes it easier for him to find her and nullifies his feat).

-Well, where to start, any idea that implies that the digital world, which Hoaxer infiltrated, facilitated the search for Nathalie, is totally discarded as a possibility, why?, for the simple fact that the digital world of the Alliance, should not have that capacity or that appearance, the digital world is not just seeing the users and that's it, or not simply a search bar or things like that, but, my interpretation of this digital world, is a social network from the first to the last detail that we know about it, I say this because the Alliance ring itself asks you to identify and choose your preferences, these characteristics are not assimilated to a cell phone, but to a social network, in which there are many extensions (applications), which are supported by the internet and the network, so it would be difficult to believe that Hoaxer only sees the user names, instead of seeing all their content / being in all the content of the Alliance. Why can rings be interacted with (or used)? Not by users, but by the network and everything that complements it, which coexists with all the material in the Alliance ring.

With this I think I was able to cover most possibilities (who knows). Now, I will proceed to explain why my theory could be the most accurate to explain what happened at that moment:

3-Once Hoaxer infiltrates the Alliance digital world, she prepares/formulates 2 proposals (orders) which the first would be the normal one that the others would receive, and the second would be the one made especially for Nathalie. Once she has them prepared/formulated, she would launch the update to all users with a "digital shockwave" (which is not visible), and in the process in which the "shockwave" is running she would be processing each of the Alliance ring usernames in Paris, so that the moment she found Nathalie, she would instantly send her the second order, and thus achieve her goals.

-With all my previous arguments and debunkings about the possible interpretations of his search, the appearance and capacity of the digital world, and the limitations of Hoaxer's power. This is possibly the best interpretation. Although there are surely still doubts and supposed debunkings to this interpretation, such as:

*Formulating/preparing the proposals, doesn't that mean she thought about it and performed this action? Therefore this interpretation would also have been risky for her plan, and therefore makes no sense. Also, didn't you say earlier that doing these things would probably leave her exposed to Monarch? In that case you would be contradicting yourself.

-I think I needed to clarify something, yes, it is risky in those cases, but, it is likely that Monarch did not notice this, since the time span in which the update was launched was less than 1 second, Monarch could not detect those thoughts, since in addition to being in practically a world that is accessed through digitization, it is unlikely that he can detect it, and why is this one not risky and the other interpretations are? If I am saying that Monarch cannot access Lila when she was in the digital world, then why did I say previously when I discredited the other interpretations that she could? First, the others are risky because Hoaxer is directly looking for Nathalie in very obvious ways and suspects that if Monarch could know what she does in the digital world, she would be exposed, while my interpretation suggests that she processes each of the names to give the order to each one and at the moment of perceiving Nathalie's username in that small and instantaneous moment she would give a different order, and this in case Monarch could know what she does in the digital world she only knows that if she received an order like the others (which in this case she cannot know what she does). Second, I only said those things because I wanted to cover all possibilities, and I even said later that “even if Monarch couldn't do it” so I was practically covering all possible aspects to clarify the situation.

* Through a non-visible digital shockwave, what do you mean by that? It sounds totally far-fetched. How would something like that work?

-No, it's not far-fetched if you're a little curious, we'll get to that a little later. About how it would work, I said before that Hoaxer to launch his "system update" was going to have to do something like this, a digital shockwave, which would make him detect each user and instantly give them the order, only when she detects Nathalie she instantly gives her a different order. You could say that the "digital shockwave" would be an update that is transmitted only through the Alliance network that detects the users around in order to infect them. Now getting back to the subject of curiosity, if you watch episode 16 of season 4 called "Hack san" you can see something similar.

To summarize, Shadowmoth would have akumatized Markov (a robot with emotions) and gave him the power to infect cell phones so that the person who carries it and falls into his trap will give him his most precious thing. A power very similar to that of Hoaxer, and as seen in the images, this akumatized as part of his power sends a shock wave with which the cell phone trap reaches people. If Monarch already did it once, why wouldn't he do it again? Although of course this is only a theory but I suppose it makes some sense. Even so, after all these arguments and discrediting, there is the possibility that there are other interpretations that are more possible than mine, although I do not believe it is possible, there is still that possibility. And I have to clarify that this is only a theory/assumption, so it is not proven but if you think about it, it may make sense. You may or may not have been a little confused, if you have any questions or arguments you can write to me at my Discord account: arroace_0 (nickname: Hellos)

*"Wait a minute, in the episode we see that when Hoaxer sends the proposals she appears with an "update" introduction, but when we see Nathalie receive the proposal no introduction appears, therefore there is no feat!!!!!!!!!!!!"

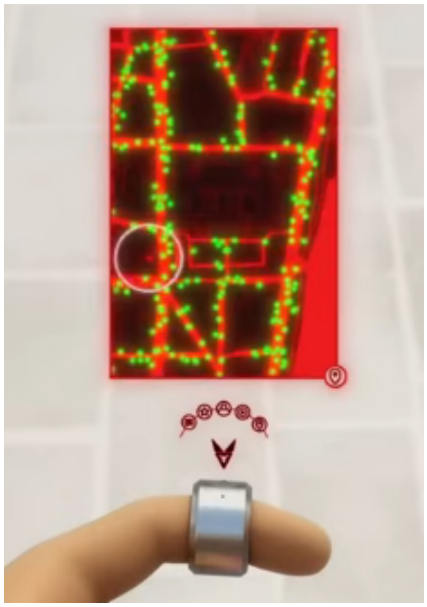

-No, it's probably an animation error or they simply forgot, also, if it were true that means that Nathalie must have been previously infected, then why would she arrive like "hello update" *waits a few seconds" and then introduces herself, and finally that wouldn't cancel the feat, so really more than not making sense it is a visual error in the series (which has many).

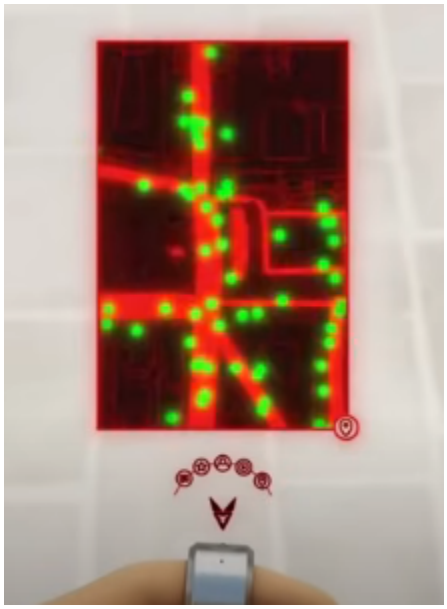

*"Wait again, the reason Hoaxer was able to perform this """"feat""""""" is because he was akumatized, and in his normal state he couldn't do it, therefore it was all thanks to the power that was granted to him and not because of herself, and that's why there is no feat!!!! ...

-No and simply no, I have already repeated this several times, but for the simple fact that she searched for someone, that implies having to process each of the user names in order to send to a specific one what she wants. If that were not the case then she would not be paying attention to what she sees. The power gave her access to this world, but it was she herself who decided to process all of this to find her, and it is not that Monarch gave her the power to "process everything quickly", he gave her the power to infect Alliance users, nothing more.

PD: In fact, something that could give more credibility to my interpretation of that moment is that when Hoaxer communicates for the second time with the alliance users, it is shown that Hoaxer has access to the location of each of the rings, and has a 2D image of it, and if this is seen with what I said before, it somehow gives some credibility.

After all this abstract analysis, my brain is resting, if it still exists.

Hellos brain right now:

Alliance Feat:Deception, Manipulation,EM, and EE

Well to start here we have some arguments/debunkings of Sprite: Once Marinette is done with her speech, she'd cry and claim she called her an idiot (Dumb manipulation ik) / I'd like to mention how absurd her manipulation is here, kiek she manipulates her classmates into believing Marinette called her stupid? That's dumb. / EP hax system (of Monarch) that basically tells if someone is feeling despair or not. This system can easily be bypassed as it most likely tells from physical appearance and what they do/act rather than actually read through them. Monarch himself can even manually check aka just recheck if her emotions are genuine by looking at it himself. This feat required basic acting skills and no real concealemen or EM. / Hellos stated that Lila would need to bypass Monarch's Mind Reading which is shown on the episode "Risk" which is NOT valid. / So this would mean what Lila would be dealing with is basically a system wherein it tells emotions from appearance and actions while Monarch double chelcs WITHOUT mind reading. This is literally easy for Lila, not only is she dealing with such a basic system, Monarch hasn't even encountered someone who'd take advantage of it on purpose and the fact she actually hates Marinette would make her job easier. / And why did I include EE? Well Hellos claimed that she could've engaged with her fake emotions, which I say her emotions aren't even faked moreso more directed to Marinette than Monarch. She wouldn't even need to engage with her emotions to do it as Monarch will just see "Oh, she is mad at Marinette cuz election, okay" and that's it. / What the feat is claimed to be: (Impressive Deception,EM, and EE) What it is: (Acting skills at minimum)

First, no, it's not a stupid manipulation, at least it's decent, for me it's good to be honest, since she practically turned Marinette's words, which were intended to be reflective for the minds of her classmates and teacher, into a direct attack towards her (Lila), what she did was take advantage of some of Marinette's arguments to turn her against her, practically a logical manipulation, and about the purpose of this manipulation (besides making an excuse to run away and feel "resentment" towards Marinette) is to be a point of connection with her next plan. A brief explanation of it would be that with this manipulation/deception she would be able to achieve 2 things (besides getting the perfect scenario to be akumatized), one, make her class believe that Marinette practically offended her (which would cause them to feel that Lila is right, and they would have this mentality until the next plan), and two, encourage the thought of suspicion in Marinette (which would cause her way of acting in the next plan).

Second, yes, I was partly wrong when explaining how Monarch's "EP hax system" worked, but still, it's not basic at all, and it's even wild to say that it's an easy system to bypass. So I'll start by explaining how exactly Monarch's powers/abilities work when sensing emotions.

Monarch can basically sense emotions and hear what people are saying (not thinking) during that moment, this is done involuntarily, meaning Monarch doesn't need to do it manually. This power of sensing emotions and listening to people's dialogues from Monarch will always prioritize those people with the strongest/most intense emotions, but this only happens on some occasions, so mostly Monarch only perceives occasional negative emotions. Furthermore, it should be added that when Monarch uses his Miraculous for his own benefit and with malicious intentions, the emotions he perceives are negative, since apparently his Miraculous seeks emotions that are related to him (in addition to the fact that if people have negative emotions, they are more likely to fall into Monarch's manipulation and incidentally corrupt his intentions), this can be confirmed in the Paris special, in which Monarch's antithesis, called Betterfly, is of a pure soul and full of hope, and his Miraculous seeks those emotions.

Returning to Monarch's powers, besides the 2 previously mentioned, there is one more, which must be executed manually, which is about being able to associate the emotions that a specific person feels, and by associating I mean discovering the reason for these emotions. And this can be confirmed in 2 episodes of the 5th season called "Migration" and "Revelation":

“MIGRATION”:
Context: Luka causes “Kitty Section” (his and his friends' band) to end up being completely stolen by Bob Rob, this situation makes him feel guilty and frustrated, which Monarch takes advantage of to try to akumatize him, but Luka, upon realizing that Monarch had contacted him, those emotions he felt previously would have diminished their power and now there are other emotions much stronger and more intense than the previous ones.

Monarch feels this sudden change of emotions, Luka no longer felt the guilt and frustration of before, now that he has just been contacted by him (Monarch) he is feeling very intense emotions which are fear and panic, Monarch is confused, since Luka was resisting much more than someone would in this situation, so Monarch proceeds to manually investigate what these emotions are due to, and discovers that the reason for this is because Luka does not want Monarch to discover that he knows the identities of Ladybug and Chat Noir.

“REVELATION”:

Context: Lila has created the perfect situation that excuses her from feeling new resentful feelings, which were previously directed at Gabriel, now due to this situation they would be "directed" towards Marinette. So she would lock herself in the bathroom so that Monarch akumatizes her, and for that to happen, she manages her emotions in such a way that they are so intense that Monarch perceives them among all the others as the most powerful.

But Monarch realizes that it was Lila Rossi (which he had previously refused to akumatize since her hatred was directed towards him), so he proceeds to do the same thing he did in the episode "Migration" (that is, discover the reason for this anger, and realizes that Lila Rossi no longer feels any resentment towards him, but rather all her hatred was directed towards Marinette, so now it was "safe" for him to akumatize her.

About the “fake emotions” that Sprite mentioned, it was a misinterpretation on his part, I’ll explain a detail later. But there’s still one last thing, Sprite’s category distribution, he mentioned that Lila doesn’t perform any EM + EE + Deception feats, but only made use of acting skills, seriously, I’m sorry but, at this point I question if Sprite really knows the definition and distribution of each category or even if you analyzed Lila for this 😭.

Deception: For my part, I consider that the whole moment of the episode “Revelation” to be a feat of Concealment + Acting Skill + Sophistry for the deception section. Lila would have created a situation to excuse herself to Monarch (indirectly) of her new hatred, she would have hidden her true intentions, goals and even emotions from everyone throughout the progress of her plan (she pretended to do something positive while from the shadows she was already getting the tools to become the next bearer of the butterfly miraculous), the most important part being, when she intended to be akumatized, since Lila had to overcome Monarch's "EP hax system", and if Monarch agreed to akumatize her, it was because Lila knew how to handle her emotions in such a way that they were truly genuine, being probably her best acting feat (those who make use of acting to deceive others always tend to do so only by appearance, meaning that only this is credible by what is seen on the outside, it is superficial. But Lila's case is different, she faces someone who can perceive the emotional side of people on the outside and inside, so Lila's acting skills go beyond that. (Not only does she act like she's a monster, but she can actually act out this as a genuine experience and emotion.) Lila straight up lies to Monarch about what happened earlier, and how she's absolutely furious and wanting revenge, which Monarch could perceive as the truth, and also that from her own words Lila no longer holds a grudge against him (meaning that despite everything Gabriel put Lila through she was able to hide those emotions), and even later when Marinette offers to make things right with Hoaxer, she ends up giving in to this proposal and even feeling regretful for accepting Monarch's powers and also feeling touched that Marinette "gave her a chance", which at this point Monarch must have felt that these emotions were genuine.

Emotional Engagement: Probably the most confusing category, since in this category there are different concepts between me and Sprite about it, for my part I only see it as the use of emotions to achieve cognitive objectives, and for Sprite according to one of his videos, the EE subcategories would be: Cognitive use of emotions + Motivation + Emotional Creativity + Emotional Adaptability + Willpower. To be honest, I only see the first one as being related to the definition of EE, then things like Motivation or Willpower are probably subcategories that are somehow related to the categories Mentality or Discerning, while Emotional creativity would simply be Creativity and Emotional Adaptability is simply Emotional Management. The truth is that I don't think that in addition to the definition that EE has by itself, more things can be added. Now, back to Lila, she literally did exactly what the definition of EE says, making use of emotions to achieve goals, she literally uses a wide variety of emotions throughout the plan, including in her contact with Monarch, as she literally had to use negative emotions in order to get him to perceive her and agree to akumatize her, negative emotions that were in fact so intense that Monarch perceived them first out of all the others in Paris. Also, it should be noted that Lila's EE is insane, as she literally always uses complex emotions at any moment in the series, being that it is in this way that she connects with people, and causes them to believe her lies. And about the "fake emotions", I'm sorry for confusing you Sprite that time 😓, I was referring to the moment when she turns her emotions into genuine ones.

Emotional Management: I consider that this feat involves EM, basically by its definition itself, which is to manage/control your emotions, and Lila literally in order to overcome Monarch's "EP hax system", had to abandon all her previous resentment directed towards Gabriel and from one moment to another feel a great anger and resentment towards Marinette, and these feelings could not only be noticed on the outside, that is, by appearance, but also on the inside, that is, the mentality, these emotions were genuine from Monarch's perspective when verifying it with all the powers he possessed. So, we can practically say that Lila is capable of feeling anything she wants, and even abandon past grudges for the sake of her plan. And if you still don't consider it an EM feat, another character named "Kirari Momobami" from the manga "Kakegurui" went through a similar situation. In the movies, Kirari made a bet against Makuro, who had a Hax that read emotions. She could see emotions in colors like an aura around the person. When Kirari was turned into a pet by Makuro, her aura was filled with despair, showing it in a dark purple. But Kirari did that deliberately to fool Makuro and his hax. Many people can fake their emotions... but that would be useless against someone who can visually see emotions as colors. Makuro could see the person's emotions and know that they are faking them. But Kirari is not faking them, she is actually intentionally showing those emotions, showing that she can perfectly control her emotions and show whatever she wants (she is not just pretending to feel that way, she is actually being able to control her emotions to the point of feeling whatever she wants whenever she wants). (These arguments were made by Hayatoz.) As you can see, both of them faced similar situations, in which someone could recognize genuine emotions, the difference is that Monarch can directly associate the reason for those emotions, unlike Makuro who has to use reasoning.

In short, Lila makes use of all those categories in her encounter with Monarch. There's nothing more to say... True, about feeling angry towards Marinette making Lila's job easier, well... that's exactly what she wants, to maximize the success of her plan, logical manipulation.

London Special Episode:Plan

Well there's not really a lot to say here so I'll break it down into a few short sections:

* A plan that is stated to be impossible to counter, which without plot armor would be true, but is less than what it intends itself to be. How did the plan not work? Cuz of Bunnyx and Marinette.

- The plan is almost unstoppable, many might think that if you have the powers at your disposal you could easily stop this plan, but the real reason why this plan could not be applied in the last attempt that Ladybug had, was because of the creativity (and power) of this one, that was the only factor that Lila underestimated, she took care of covering many aspects including time travel, but she would have underestimated her opponent, that is why at the last moment she could not apply her plan. Although it is true that it was very overrated in its time, it is still a very good plan.

* Now yes without those interventions this plan would work, but my main concern is prolly it being higher than ML, which is false.

- Well, it's true, Light's Memory Loss plan is better in some aspects than Lila's London plan, in fact I have ML > London with high diff (-), ML takes Versatility + PP + Applicability + Intricacies, while London plan takes Coverage + Formulation.

* This plan is basic, tho it is uncounterable most likely, the plan doesn't have any depth to it nor does it have anything else, just that. It's coverage is atleast like a few minutes then it's over without covering on other contingencies other than 1. It's only goal is to end the universes, which isn't allat as Lila didn't calculate other possibilities that she'd be satisfied with, so nothing really versitile.

-No, not at all basic, but consistent, since Lila is not going to make things more complicated when she can make it much easier at her disposal, she did know how to take full advantage of the butterfly miraculous unlike Gabriel, being a similar case to Felix with the peacock miraculous, Lila used what she had at her disposal to be able to cover all possible ways for her plan to be interrupted. Categories like FSIQ + EI + AC + Deception + Thinking + Reasoning + Sensory are involved throughout her plan, and even more categories, so this plan is like a race to which Lila in the different timelines adapts to new obstacles (convenient, since literally in the Spanish dubbing it is called "London: the race of time"). No, we still do not know exactly what Lila's goal was, but it involves restarting the entire universe, but her goal was not to destroy it, rather it involved destroying it. And to say that it is not versatile is to say that it is wild, I have already explained this before, so there is no need to repeat it.

Manipulation and Deception Overall:

Well, there are things to clarify here:

* Lila's manipulation is very inconsistent, like some of her lies and all won't even work sometimes, and then all the sudden she constructed a “Baku" level lie. / Her arrival was basically her being influential and going on trips with others, along with her lying about being with Ladybug in order to gain influence. This manipulation wouldn't work in other cases and that the classmates simply just believing her is so hilariously dumb since she has no proof to back up her statements.

- Well, yes, I'm aware that in the first seasons she told absurd lies, but not so much to include her manipulation, and degrade her in the process. In fact I myself tried to find a meaning to those absurd lies (Secret: working on it), but no, it never crossed my mind that Lila was at Baku's level of deception, but Lila herself takes a few categories from him in deception (my extermination is coming ☠️). About her arrival, I already explained that it is a strategy, but what can be confusing are her lies that are totally hilarious, but if you get a little curious watching the series you could come to a somewhat strange conclusion (Secret again, working on it), so I can't explain it fully yet, so it depends on the point of view you have at the moment.

* She basically manipulates her (Kagami) into believing Marinette isn't her friend and stuff and she slowly starts to stop having faith in their friendship. Again,another case of characters not being competent, ngl this might be one of her best manipulations, but not allat since Kagami is average and not really emotional stable at that time.

- More than not being competent, she is emotionally somewhat unstable as Sprite said, but that does not mean that it is not a good manipulation, in fact Lila during their conversation uses credible arguments that from Kagami's perspective (who herself observed) seemed true. It is a good manipulation on Lila's part, but it is overshadowed by others that are extremely better.

* Her best manipulation I believe is during her first akumatization where she fabricates situations for the public. The others? Inconsistent and somewhat dumb.

-Saying this is totally wild ☠️, saying that her best manipulation is in her first akumatization is showing that you didn't see anything from season 5 😭:

*Lila manipulating the entire school and other people to expel Marinette, on 3 occasions ☠️ (Emotional / Logical / Mass manipulation).

*Lila manipulating Kagami to get away from Marinette with several methods, the first one with a list in which she says that if a person has such behavior then they don't consider you a friend, literally Lila knew exactly how Marinette was going to act when Kagami was around, to the point that Kagami will mark all the signs. And second, the same one from before, in which she makes Kagami think that Marinette doesn't help others, but that others help Marinette, and she takes advantage of that, using arguments that make it seem like what she says is correct (Logical / Emotional / Individual / Direct manipulation).

* During her second akumatization, she made everyone believe that Ladybug had joined the evil side and killed Chat Noir, which generated fear and worry in all the people of Paris, which was exactly what Lila wanted (Emotional / Logical / Mass manipulation).

* Lila is constantly attending to several of her lives, and to excuse herself for her absence and have control over the people around her in each of their lives, she uses multiple deceptions and manipulations that so far have proven to be effective, to the point that no one has discovered this.

*She manipulated Monarch into agreeing to akumatize her, which she achieved by making him believe that she now felt resentment towards Marinette for everything that happened before (Indirect/Logical manipulation).

*She manipulated the entire class into choosing her as the new representative, and even later manipulated Marinette and Sabrina into discovering her and putting together a whole plan to unmask her (Direct/logical/emotional/individual/massive/indirect manipulation).

* In the episode “Collusion” she manipulates Gabriel’s way of thinking and acting, it was literally because of her that he came up with the idea of defaming the mayor, making Chloe the new mayor and akumatizing Chloe to catch Ladybug and Chat Noir (Indirect / Logical manipulation).

Overall scaling:

Pelant victimizer
(joke) or maybe not

Note: Well with this I finish this "destruction" of destruction, so, nothing, see you another time, and I hope that another time is an explanatory document and not to discredit (Sprite is watching me), well anyway I have nothing against him, we are all people here, or who knows.

SPRITE YOU KNOW I DIDN'T DO IT WITH ANY EVIL INTENTION

He is my friend (I hope I am a friend to you too, Sprite), so see you soon.

After the destruction of destruction:

SPRITE

