

Was accepted by a gifted program, Gifted is often assigned as needing a minimum Full Scale IQ of 130 (https://www.bluebirdpsychology.ca/blog/what-is-the-minimum-iq-for-gifted-programs). This would Give Yokoya and estimated Full Scale IQ of 134 since the minimum of 130 at the bottom of gifted level intelligence would imply the middle would be twice the rarity. A Full

Scale IQ of 130 is considered 1 in 44 so the avarged would be 1 in 88 which comes out to an Full scale IQ of 134 (https://www.iqcomparisonsite.com/iqtable.aspx)

(WMI,VCI,FRI,VSI,PSI)

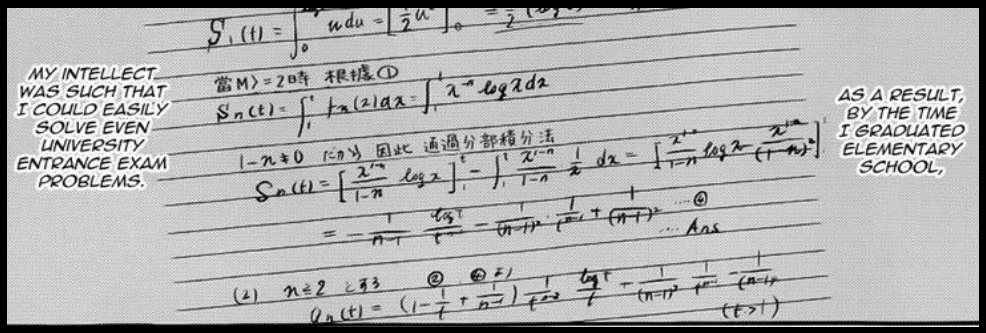

Spent every day of his life from elementary school to junior high spending every day to his studies with private tutors (https://interacnetwork.com/school-life-in-japan/). He did this till he graduated from elementary school which since he's in Japan would be a total of 6 years in total and 2190 Days of total non break studying every day without breaks which he even mentioned didn't strain much. Factor in the fact that he had a minimum Full Scale IQ of 130 and a more likely measure of 134 and multiple private tutors and his knowledge would be insanely high

(Mental fortitude,Cognitive discipline,Crystalized intelligence,Mental adaptability,Academics,Knowledge)

Could solve College entrance exam questions without any difficulty by the time he graduated from Elementary school with Elementary school graduates often being 12 and University entrance exam questions being answered by 19 year olds. Despite this the question is visibly much harder then most college entrance exam questions (Chat GPT thinks it’s around Tokoyo university level entrance exam questions but take it as you will I don’t have the energy to research all that for a doc about a younger Yokoya)

(WMI,VCI,FRI,Crystalized intelligence,Linear thinking,Learning ability,Academics,Knowledge application)

Stated that at the end of elementary he could enter any prestigious middle school he wanted without any effort

(Academics,Knowledge)

Despite that fact his father chose a public middle school for Yokoya to enter for a few reasons

1:It was known for having a ton of delinquents which would test Yokoyas domination abilities against other dominators instead of well behaved studious kids
2:To let him gain experience of the real world since a public middle school resembles it a lot more then prestigious private schools due to the lack of control

He then gave the 12-13 year old Yokoya a mission to tame the school to see his capabilities.

Yokoya despite being a rich kid and the son of a billionaire managed to take over the entire school despite the fact that they probaly had it out for him at the start due to Yokoya being rich and the fact that there were likely people there that were 2 years older if it followed the normal junior high system

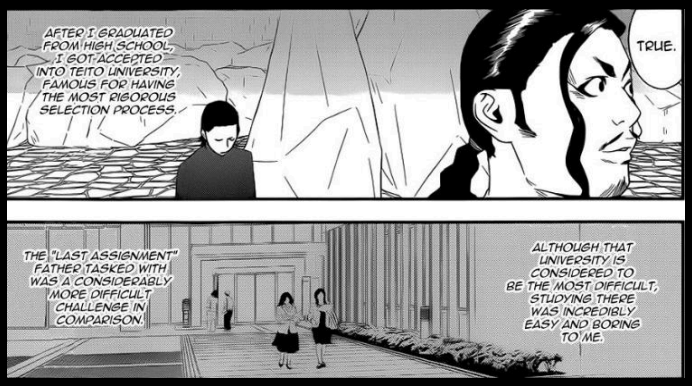

This happens offscreen so I can’t add to many categories

(Social interrogation,Social engineering,Crystalized intelligence,Fluid intelligence,Social adaptability,Mental adaptability)

To make sure it wasn’t a fluke Yokoyas father made sure to change his school 3 times afterwards all of them likely having different social structures and challenges

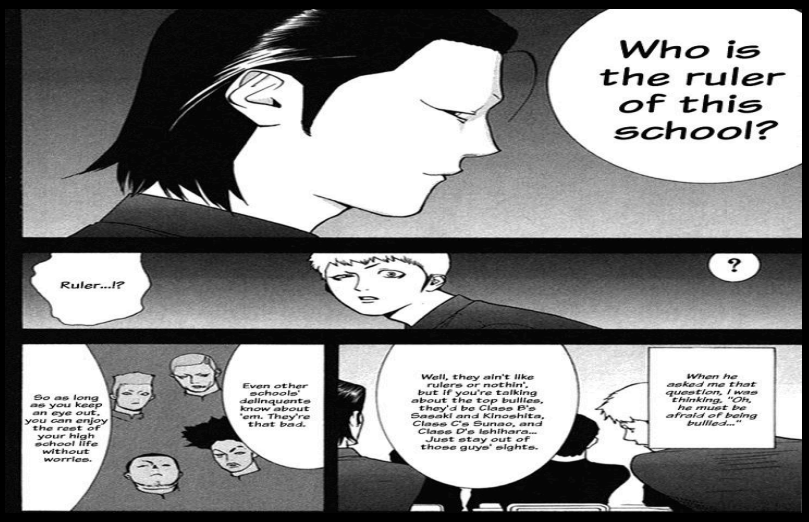

(Social integration,Social cognition,Fluid intelligence,Critical thinking,Social adaptatability)

Got accepted into Teito university which was implied to be the hardest and most prestigious university in Japan if not the entire world, which Yokoya described as Easy to the point of it becoming boring espically since he could be at top university level even as a 12 year old child

(WMI,VCI,Learning ability,Crystalized intelligence,Academics,Knowledge)

Yokoya managed to take over an entire high school in his backstory, by first asking the guy he got seated with the question “who is the ruler of this school” knowing that the question could just be taken as him being afraid of bullying, this then earns him some information about the current rulers of the school

1:They are bullies/delinquents rather than rulers meaning that they likely just rely on brute force instead of having any authority behind them.

2:They are a group composed of 4 people

3:They are aggressive and forceful enough to be feared by other delinquents

Knowing this (slight theory but it makes sense since the rumors must have came from someone) he spread the information of his wealth to the rest of the school in order to create a strategy to take over the school

Knowing that they are aggressive delinquents it’s likely that hearing about someone as rich as himself would earn their intrest to steal from him, when they confront him as predicted he refuses to give the money to the current rulers even telling them that he dosent have anything on him to get them to take his wallet from him which was about 100000 yen

He then begins to act upset about it which made one of them punch him, Yokoya predicting that action from students as feared as them had set this up as a trap by preparing a cameraman to get evidence that they robbed and assaulted him on camera

With this evidence he threatens the “rulers” by telling on them to the police, he then mentions that exams and college are around the corner meaning that this time could ruin their chances of either getting employed or going to college. He uses this to make them relaise that there life’s are in the hand of himself and therefore installing fear into them

After that he requests that they work under him, knowing that they cannot say no they join Yokoya who then gives them the 100000 yen he had on him to get not just there fear but also loyalty which gets him control over the entire gang.

This meant that he could make himself the highest of the social hierarchy in the school by using his pawns who are at the top of the food chain to give him an even higher position of power within the school.

He then created a ranking system (A>B>C>D>E) where he placed himself at A and his pawns at B since they were under his control and every other student at either C,D or E creating 3 ranks for students. He made it so that you had to fully obey everyone above their rank but also fully control the rank below (for instance D can command E but has to take orders from C).  He enforced this system by using group B to keep everyone in line if they ever defy his rule since they already had a feared reputation in the school which causes everyone to indirectly follow Yokoya's orders by using group B to enforce it with threats of violence.

He further encouraged everyone’s obedience by making it so that people who snitched to him,talked good about him or helped him had the chance to improve their rank while not doing so could lower their rank if they weren’t E.

This created a social system where everyone was under the rule of Yokoya due to the fear of B rank and the fear of being completely obedient to others causing them not only to be submissive towards Yokoya but also actively serving under him since the motives to not be dominated by others and to dominate others were satisfied under Yokoya's rule in a system where Yokoya controlled everything.

To prevent the teachers from stopping it he gave them money for the loyal ty which encouraged the teachers to ignore it.

(FRI,VSI,Emotional engagement,Social cognition,Leadership,Social engineering,Mental fortitude,Cognitive discipline,Indirect manipulation,Direct manipulation,Mass manipulation,Profiling,Fluid intelligence,Strategy logistics,Strategy building,Strategy fortitude,Startegy complexity,Strategy efficiency,Planning process,Formulation speed,Planning intricacies,Planning invincibility,Inductive reasoning,Logical prediction,Anticipation,Setting traps,Non linear thinking,System thinking,Social adaptability,Information gathering,Creativity