Durability/Endurance - Green
Agility/Speed/Stamina - Blue
Statements/Narrative - Purple

Sudou, looking up at the ball as it arced down, jumped into the air. Then, using his incredible body like a spring, he slammed the ball at the opposing team, as fast as a bullet. Ichinose tried her absolute hardest to keep the ball in play, but her movements in the water were slow and dull. She didn't make it in time.

No one on the sidelines cheered for Sudou, but his power seemed greater than or equal to Nagumo's.

(V4.5) Nagumo's striking power was said to be either weaker or equal to that of Sudo's so in other words his AP is relevant to his. This is the same Sudo who made Koji feel quite a lot of internal pain when slapping him on the back with 100% of his strength in Volume 5.

but I didn't really care.

At the very least, I was certain that I'd probably gathered the whole school's attention during the final competition. Many students looked at me with puzzled expressions.

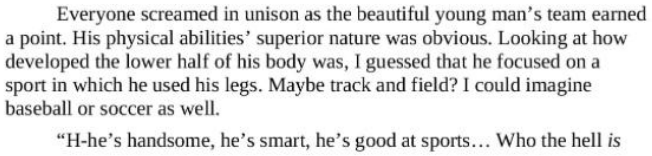

"Ayanokouji! You really are super fast, dude. Whoa! Have you been holding back until now?!" As he came running up, Sudou slapped me on the back with all his might. It really hurt.

"Running's pretty much my only specialty, but I overdid it. That's the power of being fired up, huh?" I replied.

"That still doesn't explain it, though. That speed. You liar." Horikita walked up to me, still dragging her leg slightly.

"You guys, this isn't how you should treat a soldier who fought with

(V2) - While naturally Nagumo's upper body/arm strength is stated to be comparable to Sudo's, Nagumo was described by Suzune and Koji in V4.5 to be far more focused and toned in the legs as opposed to his upper body like Sudo + possessing physical abilities obvious by just looking at him.

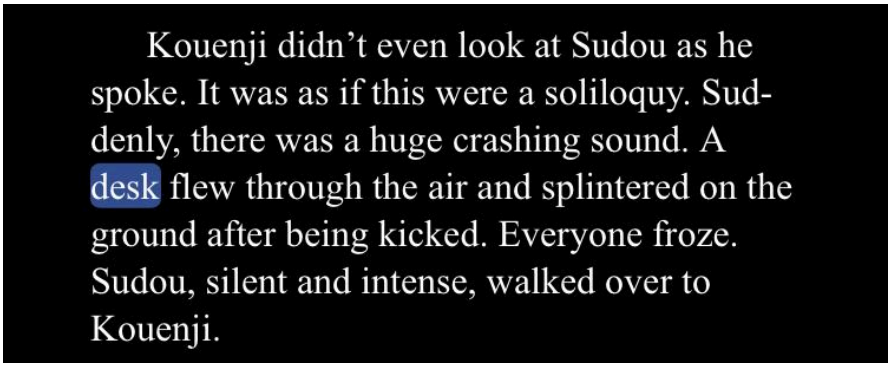

Everyone screamed in unison as the beautiful young man's team earned a point. His physical abilities' superior nature was obvious. Looking at how developed the lower half of his body was, I guessed that he focused on a sport in which he used his legs. Maybe track and field? I could imagine baseball or soccer as well.

"H-he's handsome, he's smart, he's good at sports… Who the hell is

Why is this relevant?

Because Sudo has an AP feat in V2 where he sends flying and destroys an entire wooden table (hence the term “splintered”) with his kick specifically. This means taking into account the toning of Nagumo’s legs, his kicks would scale even higher than what Sudo did especially considering he’s a prodigy soccer/football player as well; scaling to have insanely high Kicking Strength.

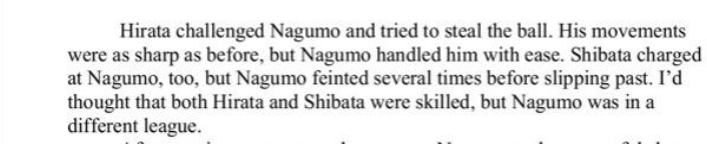

(Overall AP, Leg Strength)

Kouenji didn’t even look at Sudou as he spoke. It was as if this were a soliloquy. Suddenly, there was a huge crashing sound. A desk flew through the air and splintered on the ground after being kicked. Everyone froze. Sudou, silent and intense, walked over to Kouenji.

(V5) - every single student in the soccer club is nimble, no expectations. Implying the students have above average agility at worst.

All the students in the soccer club were nimble. The only ones from our class who could probably hold their own were Sudou and Hirata, but even they’d be hard-pressed to keep up.
“But Horikita-san is thinking about our class as a whole. That makes me happy,” said Kushida.
“I aim to do whatever is necessary to reach Class C, so I’ve no other

Hirata along with Shibata were said to be skilled players possessing sharp movements while you one said to be on a level beyond even that is Nagumo.

Hirata challenged Nagumo and tried to steal the ball. His movements were as sharp as before, but Nagumo handled him with ease. Shibata charged at Nagumo, too, but Nagumo feinted several times before slipping past. I’d thought that both Hirata and Shibata were skilled, but Nagumo was in a different league.

Among all the nimble and quick soccer players, Nagumo by far stands out the most and is practically a soccer prodigy. Meaning he possesses Agility greater more so than Sudo, Ryuen and surpasses even Manabu (yes cope lol).

Even more so, he reacted to both Hirata’s and Shibata’s movements at the same time and slipped past both without losing ball possession.

(Overall Speed, Agility)

(V5) - A show of his Kicking Strength is when Koji in particular was the only student he described to have a powerful shot good enough to score from midfield.

With that description + his uniquely developed lower body he clearly has high Kicking Strength.

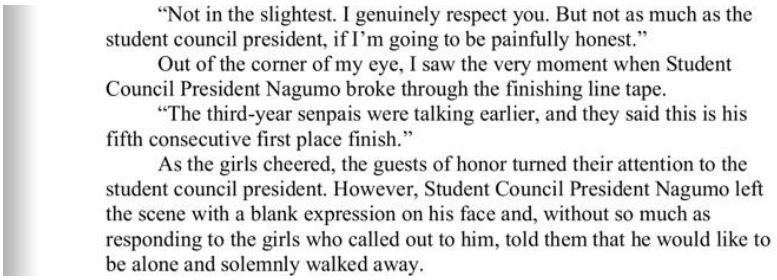

After running past yet another person, Nagumo took a powerful shot from midfield. The ball curved past the goalie, and Nagumo scored.

"So, the title of student council president isn't just for show, huh?"

"He's just really athletic, that's all." Horikita did not intend to acknowledge Nagumo's obvious skill.

As I spoke to Horikita, I snuck a glance at Kushida. She was all smiles;

In terms of stamina he's supposed to be by narrative far above even Sudo and he actually has small but abstract feats to back that up as he's participated in 5 events in the sports festival winning in each one showing zero signs of fatigue in fact he was shown to have a completely blank face after the event. Be aware he's won 5 after the 100m sprint so there's a chance he's done more offscreen.

"Not in the slightest. I genuinely respect you. But not as much as the student council president, if I'm going to be painfully honest."

Out of the corner of my eye, I saw the very moment when Student Council President Nagumo broke through the finishing line tape.

"The third-year senpais were talking earlier, and they said this is his fifth consecutive first place finish."

As the girls cheered, the guests of honor turned their attention to the student council president. However, Student Council President Nagumo left the scene with a blank expression on his face and, without so much as responding to the girls who called out to him, told them that he would like to be alone and solemnly walked away.

In terms of Travel Speed, by narrative he's Top 4 in the verse as he was completely confident in facing Manabu in a race and that he always won his 100m race. Also due to the fact that Koji and Manabu never caught up with Nagumo before he reached the finish line in Volume 5.

(Overall Speed, Stamina, Kicking Strength)

(Y2V4) - Now this might not seem like a good endurance feat but Nagumo actually muttering a word before he goes unconscious from a blow against Ayanokoji (by being punched in the chest btw) is a decently solid feat especially when you compare his to Nanase for example who's a fairly competent fighter being described to have her entire consciousness being blown away in an instant if she was punched in the forehead.

Also another important note is that Nagumo was never shown or stated to have any injuries in the aftermath and was perfectly fine during Y2V4.5 and onwards from a seemingly serious (not 100% ofc) punch from Ayanokoji as he showed zero hesitation and even admitted he was going to take Nagumo seriously.

(Endurance, Durability)

Letting his emotions affect his decisions? The student council president steeled his resolve, shrugging off the pressure coming from my side.

"I...!?"

I punched Nagumo in the chest without hesitation.

"Ah, you...!!!"

Cleanly avoiding her arm, I extended my own, the blow aimed straight for her face.

My fist, strongly clenched, stopped mere centimeters before making contact with Nanase's forehead.

If I hadn't chosen to stop my fist, the blow would've decisively settled the outcome of the fight.

Nanase's consciousness would've been blown away in an instant, leaving her to simply crumble on the spot.

"Cut it out, you guys. You all know how mad the school gets when it comes to fights," said Akito, trying to calm things down, while standing at a distance.

"Until now, that is."

"Until now?"

"I've heard that the current student council president is actually willing to tolerate a little bad behavior here and there. Get it?"

Hashimoto closed the distance between himself and Ishizaki, launching his right leg into a kick. Akito blocked it with his left arm.

"That's not what I'm saying. However, as far as Housen-kun was able to confirm, a certain amount of fighting between students is considered inevitable. And President Nagumo has promised he won't be as harsh in his judgment as he was last year," said Nanase.

Unlike Horikita's older brother, Manabu, Nagumo had a much more permissive mindset when it came to fighting. The student council acted to mediate disputes between students, so if it was true they intended to allow a certain degree of fighting, this incident was much less likely to cause trouble.

(V9) - In terms of statements and narrative, Nagumo was told by others that he actively went to all the trouble in making punishments of violence more lenient.

Question is why would he bother to do such a thing? It's obvious that Nagumo has had experience in combat many times before in ANHS so he knows how to fight.

students. You cannot treat this like your own personal game."

"Why do you say that? Distinctions like first and third year no longer apply right now. Challenging someone under such conditions is hardly unusual, is it? There's nothing in the special exam rulebook to forbid it." Rather than cower before Fujimaki's impressive bulk, Nagumo chose to taunt him.

"You may be student council president, but that doesn't mean you can do as you please. You need to be aware of the fact that you're overstepping your authority."

"If you think that's the case, then please, make me aware of it. How about you be my opponent, Fujimaki-senpai? You're third-year Class A's number two, aren't you?" replied Nagumo, stuffing his hands arrogantly into his pockets, acting as though Fujimaki were an afterthought.

Further evidence for Nagumo's experience in fighting is that despite Fujimaki, a classmate of Manabu who was leading the sport festival and was stated to be 2nd only below Manabu, Nagumo was not only taunting him but provoking him to fight.

The same Fujimaki who had his bulk praised by Koji.

"I don't hate brawling, but I prefer a serious fight. Even if this uninhabited island exam is over, there'll still be a lot of inter-year battles afterwards, and I want you to be my opponent."

The student council president directly called me out.

Another powerful statement of Nagumo is that not only is he not against brawling but he likes serious fights. Considering that he had no qualms in provoking the built Fujimaki to combat, Nagumo has likely fought just as physically capable students in the past and given his statement, he's won against them all.

"Ah? What are you doing—"

I looked into Nagumo's eyes with all my killing intent.

"Urgh....!?"

"Don't you understand what I said?"

Nagumo stood up powerfully as if to not admit his fear.

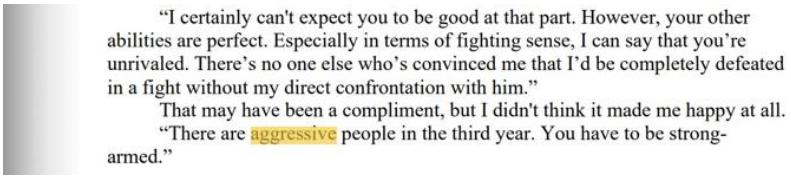

"Stop while you're ahead? You're the first person to underestimate me to such an extent, Ayanokouji..."

Right then, the transceiver that fell on the ground next to Nagumo received something.

Even more proof of Nagumo's fighting experience by narrative is that despite Koji directing ALL his killing intent into Nagumo's eyes, Nagumo only flinched once and immediately recovered and stood up to face him. This can be an Emotional Management feat too but the fact Nagumo only flinched makes you question how many fights Nagumo had.

Compare this to Kid Koji making a WR instructor freeze from just his glare. Nagumo not admitting his fear against a teen version is completely insane.

(Emotional Management)

"I certainly can't expect you to be good at that part. However, your other abilities are perfect. Especially in terms of fighting sense, I can say that you're unrivaled. There's no one else who's convinced me that I'd be completely defeated in a fight without my direct confrontation with him."

That may have been a compliment, but I didn't think it made me happy at all.

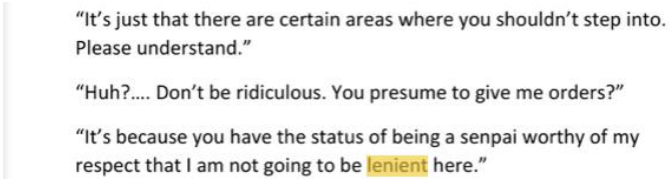

"There are aggressive people in the third year. You have to be strong-armed."

In Y2V9, Fuka mentions there are aggressive people specifically in the third year. That's another piece of evidence to strengthen Nagumo's fighting experience narrative as Fuka implies third years are prone to use violence.

Conclusion:

Nagumo as a fighter is completely overlooked to the point people genuinely believe Suzune > Nagumo smh.

People have to realise that excluding Manabu, Koji actually has some degree of respect for Nagumo which is the only reason why he wasn't lenient and knocked him out as quickly as possible.

"It's just that there are certain areas where you shouldn't step into. Please understand."

"Huh?.... Don't be ridiculous. You presume to give me orders?"

"It's because you have the status of being a senpai worthy of my respect that I am not going to be lenient here."

Nagumo in terms of overall physical abilities easily outshines people like Ryuen, Kito by simply feats alone. Statements like being top tier alongside Manabu only bring him up even further and ahead of people like Sudo.

With his fighting experience narrative + indirect statement of being a capable fighter as he nerfed the violence laws in ANHS, add that with his narratively high reaction speed, kicking strength etc and Nagumo is superior to the likes of Ryuen and even Sudo.

Thing is that I believe it's unfair Nagumo is getting bashed on due to no fighting feats but someone like Kōenji has no problem being scaled above Albert and Manabu despite not fighting yet. Especially when Nagumo already has a powerful and crystal clear combat narrative.

In conclusion, Nagumo isn't a Suzune victim (lmao) in fact he's above fighters like Ryūen and is only overlooked cuz he hasn't fought.
